Home Instead SENIOR CARE®
by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

KEEP MOVING

Regular physical activity is good for everyone, including at-home seniors. Falls are a common cause of injury and disability. Physical activity makes bones stronger and less likely to break if a fall does occur. Home healthcare aides can assist their clients in performing simple exercises that have been determined to be age- and physical ability-appropriate. Generally, it is safe for most adults to exercise. Even seniors with heart disease, diabetes, and arthritis can exercise safely. In fact, many of these conditions are improved with exercise. For most seniors, walking is one of the easiest activities. A home health aide can be the partner who motivates a senior client to do some sort of exercise and stick with it.

It's hard enough for most people to find time and motivation to exercise. It can be exhausting and overwhelming if you have to try to get your parent to exercise too. We can help. Our home healthcare aides can make sure your loved one eats right and gets enough exercise every day. That exercise, as well as that companionship, can help keep your loved one healthier for longer, which means they will get to stay in their house for longer, too. Our services are flexible, to match your needs, which means we can offer 24-hour long-term care, or temporary respite care for overnight. Call 781-878-2994 to learn what we can do for you. We are located at 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

P.S. Strengthening exercises reduce age-related muscle loss.

We Auto Know
by Gene Smith and Jay Gorman

GETTING INTO A GROOVE

Drivers should exercise extra care on wet road surfaces, which have the potential to make vehicles "hydroplane." This phenomenon occurs when a wedge of water builds up in front of the tires' direction of travel faster than the vehicle's weight and the tires' tread can push it out of the way. As a result, the automobile begins to dangerously slide atop a film of water. Because hydroplaning is known to occur most often at speeds higher than 40 miles per hour, it can be avoided by reducing traveling speed below this level. Just as importantly, the selection of tires with tread designs that efficiently evacuate road water helps to avoid the swerving and sliding that can accompany hydroplaning.

With spring rains on the way, tires aren't the only thing you need to get checked for safety's sake. At ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT, our ASE-certified technicians will check your car from tires on up, to make sure that winter's weather didn't wear anything out. Then we'll replace, refill, or repair anything that got a little worn down, to make sure that you and your family are safe on the road. We can catch small problems, like worn tire treads, before they become big problems, like a head-on collision due to hydroplaning. Call 781-925-3200 today to make an appointment. We are located at 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

HINT: Directional tread designs with grooves in a repeating V shape help channel water from between the tire's footprint and the road.

CSCR seeks money to preserve building

Hagerty House victim of water damage

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"A lot of water is getting into the building and without attention it will continue to deteriorate."
— Jack Buckley, president of CSCR

For close to a decade, the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research has been the stewards of the town-owned Hagerty House on Parker Avenue.

Now CSCR officials are looking to the Community Preservation Committee to get some help on the upkeep and preservation of the historical building.

The funding is largely to make repairs to restore the integrity of the building, which experiences water damage in heavy rain.

"A lot of water is getting into the building and without attention it will continue to deteriorate," said Jack Buckley, president of CSCR.

In the application, CSCR requests nearly $25,000 to do roofing, gutter, downspouts and seal and de-water the basement. Buckley said the renovations would further safeguard the town's asset. Last year, Buckley said CSCR spent $17,000 to have the building painted and a considerable amount of money to renovate the building when the organization originally went in to the space.

Once known as the Captain Aubrey Crocker House, it is more commonly referred to as the Hagerty House at Mariner's Park, or the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR).

Susan Sardina, CPC member, questioned some of the items on the list.

"Some of the items fall under basic maintenance – the town needs to maintain its own assets," Sardina said. It was suggested the CSCR officials look to the Board of Selectmen for support, something they said they had not done on a formal basis.

CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey said if CPC funding was used, the intent would have to be making the building more historically accurate – and might ultimately be more expensive.

"We can't pay to put an asphalt roof on it because that's not historically accurate," said Ivimey. In addition, some members questioned if the items being requested were routine maintenance, which is not allowed under the Community Preservation Act, or historical preservation.

CPC member Debbie Cook, said the amount the applicants were asking for didn't seem like much considering the importance of the historical town asset.

"It sounds to me like these are items that will help preserve this asset," Cook said.

However, Sardina, who ultimately voted against the application, felt the appropriation could take the committee on a "slippery slope" and open the door for other organizations to seek money for maintenance.

Several members of the committee felt there was little other financial means for these problems to be addressed.

"I think the responsibility falls to us or the building is going to rot," CPC member Margaret Charles said.

A majority of the committee voted to recommend the project and the $25,000 allocation, which places it on the Town Meeting warrant. Ivimey and Sardina voted against the recommendation.

Voters will have the ultimate say at the March 27 Annual Town Meeting.

Hagerty building history

According the CSCR's application, the two-and-a half-story Greek Revival home was originally located on Border Street near the Scituate town like and was moved to its current location sometime after 1876. It became home to Captain Aubrey Crocker, sailing master, who successfully defended the America's Cup in 1885. In the early 20th century, the Crocker home became part of Francis Hagerty's industrial complex dedicated to boat building, the war effort and eventually colonial furniture reproductions ("Cohasset Colonials").

The town of Cohasset purchased the Hagerty property in 1993 with the intent to preserve the historic home and the adjacent boathouse (home to the Cohasset Maritime Institute) as public assets.

The Center for Coastal Student Research took over the Hagerty house in 2002. Students from Cohasset and surrounding communities take part in environmental research projects of importance to the town and its water ecosystem.

Other CPC recommended projects*

Town Meeting will take up the following projects on Saturday, March 27:

Cohasset Historical Society: Replacement of boiler at Paul Pratt Memorial Building, $50,000.

Cohasset Housing Authority: Electrical upgrades to 60 Elm Street $40,000.

Town Clerk: Town archival restoration and shelving, $25,000.

Open Space Committee: Participation in purchasing 12.5 acres of open space off Beach St., $250,000.

Council on Elder Affairs: Change in language of last year's appropriation of $220,000 (no additional money sought).

*The CPC has still to hear two applications for this Town Meeting cycle. The first is to execute the Meetinghouse (Common) Pond reconstruction plan, an application put forth by citizen Merle Brown. The CPC spent $30,000 to complete engineering plans for the project. The estimated cost is approximately $275,000. At their meeting two weeks ago, the CPC said it would be unlikely they would be able to support the project with its entire request because they did not have the funds.

The second is a $25,000 request from the Cohasset Recreation Department to do a feasibility study of Ozzie Ingram property for ball field construction.

The CPC will take up both applications on Tuesday, Feb. 23 at 7p.m.

POLICE BEAT

Alleged thief of baby formula caught on camera

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

SURVEILLANCE PHOTO

Surveillance cameras caught this man, who police believe, stole baby formula from Shaw's last week. The photo shows him entering the supermarket.

A man, who is estimated to be in his 20s and was wearing a green, hooded sweatshirt, blue sweatpants and sneakers, is being sought for allegedly stealing about $150 worth of liquid baby formula from Shaw's last Tuesday (Feb. 9) at about 10:12 a.m.

Police said the formula is valuable and is easy to sell.

The manager called police after the man left with a hand basket full of formula. He is also described as heavy set with some facial hair.

Police put out a BOLO (Be On the Look Out) to area towns. The case is under investigation.

Cash register

Cohasset Police Detectives are investigating an early morning breaking and entering that occurred on Monday, Feb. 15, sometime between the hours of 2 and 4am.

Police responded to the Cohasset Confectionary Company, 13 Depot Court, in Cohasset Village, after the owner of the business discovered that someone had entered the business and stolen a cash register that contained a small amount of money.

Cohasset Detectives responded to the business and processed the scene. There is an on-going investigation. The owners of the Cohasset Confectionary Company also own "5 South Main", a popular restaurant in the Village. The Confectionary Company sells candy and ice cream, while 5 South Main serves breakfast and lunch.

Anyone with information regarding this crime is encouraged to contact the Cohasset Police Department's anonymous tip line at 781-383-4138 extension 1050.

Vandalism

A 44-year-old Cohasset man reported to police last Tuesday (Feb. 9) that his daughter's car had been spray painted sometime overnight with obscenities.

The vandalism to the 1997 Chevrolet Subaru SUV caused about $2,000 in damage, police said. The vehicle will likely have to be repainted.

It appears to have been a targeted incident and police are investigated.

Missing cat

A 51-year-old Cohasset woman called police last Tuesday (Feb. 9) at about 5:30 p.m. to report her shorthaired tiger cat was missing. She said the cat never leaves. Sometime later she notified police that her cat had turned up inside the house and everything was OK.

Plow damage

A caller who lives in a condominium complex off Beechwood Street notified police last Thursday (Feb. 11) about yard damage done by a plow to the lawn of the complex. The private plow operator was apparently unfamiliar with the layout of the driveway and plowed across the lawn. Police took a photo to document the damage. The matter will be handled by the condo association.

Needles

A caller reported finding a 20-ounce plastic soda bottle full of used syringes on Sandy Beach last Friday at about 9:46 a.m. A police officer recovered the needles, which were disposed of in a sharps container. Police think the bottle may have washed up because the label had worn off. It is unclear what the needles had been used for.

Suspended license

Police stopped a 51-year-old Hull woman, operating a 2006 Toyota Scion, for going 60 in a 35 mph zone on Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Brewster Road on Saturday (Feb. 13) at about 7 a.m. A registry check revealed her license had been suspended for failure to pay a speeding ticket. She is being summonsed to court for operating after license suspension and speeding. Her car was towed.

Revoked registration

Police stopped a 27-year-old Plymouth woman for going 46 in a 25 mph zone on South Main Street by Summer Street on Saturday (Feb. 13) at about 3:08 p.m. A registry check revealed the registration had been revoked for non-payment of insurance. She is being summonsed to court for operating an uninsured motor vehicle, operating a motor vehicle with revoked registration and speeding. Her 2007 Nissan Sentra was towed.

ATM problem

A caller notified police by cell phone that a woman inside a bank on Route 3A using the ATM at about 7:30 p.m. on Saturday (Feb. 13) was making strange gestures and was hanging around inside the ATM lobby. Police found out the ATM machine had sucked the woman's money back in. She was told to take the matter up with the bank on Monday and was sent on her way.

Burglar alarm

A mother and daughter apparently set the burglar alarm off at the middle school on Sunday morning when they went into the gymnasium through an unsecured door. The mother went to the station to report the incident and police checked the building to make sure that it was secure.

Police survey

In an effort to identify the needs of our community, the Cohasset Police Department has linked a survey to its web page at: www.cohassetpolice.com

Please take a few minutes and complete the survey. For those who do not have computer access, copies of the survey will be placed at Cohasset Police Station and Town Hall. Additionally, each police car will have copies of the survey and officers would be glad to drop off and pick up surveys from your home.

You can call the Cohasset Police Department at 781-383-1212.

Does Cohasset still want turbines?

Andrew Willard, chair of the Alternative Energy Committee.

The issue with the bylaw, which arose in the latest round of CCI-Energy's special permit application, is it calls for a setback equal to (or greater) than the height of the turbine, including the turbine's blades, from the base of the turbine's tower to any property line in a residential district.

Affecting the CCI-Energy application was that the Trustees of Reservations' Whitney and Thayer Woods, one of the adjacent properties to the proposed siting for the turbines, is zoned "Residential C District." Affecting other potential turbines is the "Residential C District" is given to all the large swaths of land – open space – targeted as potential turbine sites are in, or abut, residential districts, including the AEC's potential town-owned turbine site at the Recycling Transfer Facility.

Willard said there are currently three options before the Alternative Energy Committee, which spearheaded the writing of the bylaw in conjunction with the Planning Board.

First, they are currently exploring if the RTF site can still work within the bylaw as it is written. There are three town-owned land parcels that make up the RTF, which could potentially be made into one parcel eliminating the property lines, Willard said.

Second, the AEC could begin working with the Planning Board to potentially re-write the bylaw to address the setback issue. Town Meeting would need to approve any amendments to the bylaw in a two-thirds vote.

The third option would be to re-open the discussion on the bylaw and review all aspects.

What seems most important, Willard said, is to get a direction from the townspeople on where to go with bylaw – are residents still supportive of wind power in Cohasset?

Members of the Alternative Energy Committee will be outside Town Meeting to gain perspective from the community.

"We're kind of stuck right now," Willard said, adding the town could seek a non-binding resolution from Town Meeting, something the AEC could discuss with the Selectmen.

At least one member of the Planning Board — member Charles Samuelson – is in support of some changes to the bylaw to allow wind power to come to Cohasset. During the final deliberation of the CCI-Energy turbine project, he said he would be in support of an amendment that would make wind feasible.

"What I would not like to see is an attempt at a general overhaul of the Alternative Energy section of the bylaw. I think for the most part the one we have worked pretty well," Samuelson said in an e-mail this week. He mentioned the setback section as well as a clarification to the noise requirements as two of the issues he'd like to see amendments address.

"But it all comes down to whether or not Cohasset wants to have commercial wind turbines. If town meeting continues to vote in favor of them, then there will be some tradeoffs and some people will be impacted. That's true with any development," Samuelson said.

Jeff Patterson, current member of the AEC and one of the proponents of the "wind bylaw moratorium" last summer, is also eager to see some changes in the bylaw.

"We, as a town, should look at the bylaw now that been through the process twice (the original CCI-Energy application, and when it was remanded by the court for reconsideration)," Patterson said. During the course of the turbine project hearings he said many residents gained knowledge and expertise in the area.

"We should tap into that collective knowledge and find out if a consensus on the issues or improvements to the bylaw," Patterson said. "What could and should wind turbines look like in Cohasset?"

Patterson said all alternative energies, including wind, solar and geo-thermal, should be explored and if they can be done "safely, effectively and economically," he believed the majority of Cohasset would be in support of the project.

The next scheduled meeting of the AEC is this coming Tuesday, Feb. 23. The committee would welcome comment and input on how to move forward with the wind energy bylaw.

Progress on town wind turbine

Wind power has been the primary focus of the AEC since its formation in 2005. It has explored solar and geothermal alternative energies but the grant support and payback is not as great with those energy sources.

"It is the only project that can be done at a minimum cost to the town…and can have a potentially high return," said Andrew Willard, chair of the Alternative Energy Committee..

Cohasset has received extensive support from the state to explore the possibility of wind power in Cohasset.

With the help of funding from the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative (MTC), the town of Cohasset under the direction of the AEC has spent more than four years taking steps toward a wind turbine at the Recycling Transfer Facility.

A meteorological, or met, tower on Turkey Hill was constructed and collected 12 months of wind data. The conclusion was there was "good wind," enough to support a wind turbine, in Cohasset. From there, another MTC grant allowed the town to perform studies to determine a feasible site for a single turbine (the MTC will only financially support single turbine projects).

Although there were several large swaths of town owned land cited as possible turbine locations, including the hill behind the high school, additional study found the only truly feasible location was the Recycling Transfer Facility off Cedar Street.

The engineering firm located five possible sites on the transfer facility property. They found there was a way to get the turbines to the potential sitings and favored two sites out of the five. Preliminary sound and shadow flicker studies were completed as well. A general economic feasibility report for an 80-meter tower (or 262-feet plus the height of the blades) was completed showing options for a town-owned construction or third-party construction.

The town of Scituate entered into a long-term lease contract with a third party for a turbine at their wastewater treatment plant.

All the work done so far to explore the feasibility of a turbine on town-owned property has been studies, like the MET tower, are being completely underwritten by the MTC. No town funds being used at this point in the project.

If a municipal turbine project were to proceed it would have to get a special permit from the Planning Board and any funding would have to be approved by Town Meeting.

Four-way contest for two school seats

Snowdale throws hat into the ring

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A fourth School Committee candidate has come forward.

Linda Snowdale of 48 Mill Lane pulled nomination papers to seek one of two open seats on the School Committee on Tuesday.

Current School Committee chair Adrienne MacCarthy, Flintlock Ridge Road resident Jeanne Astino, and Beach Street resident Paul Ognibene are also seeking posts to the committee. Ognibene is the only School Committee candidate who has had his nomination paper signatures certified. Current school committee member Lucia Flibotte is not seeking re-election.

Also this week a fourth candidate for Library Trustee came forward: Teresa Polhemus of 14 Tad Lane. There are three seats available on the Board of Library Trustees.

Citizens had mere hours to pull papers when the Mariner went to press on Thursday morning. Thursday was the last day to pull nomination papers; potential candidates have until Tuesday, Feb. 23 to return their signatures for certification. Citizens are not considered candidates until the signature are returned and certified.

Snowdale is the mother of two Cohasset High graduates and a CHS grad herself. She said is running for School Committee to give back to the community she has called her home for 40 years.

"It's great being an empty nester and finally having the time to do all the things you always wished you could do," Snowdale said.

In addition to the perspective of a parent and longtime resident, Snowdale said she also brings a teacher's outlook having been a special education teacher in Hull for 35 years. Over the years she said she was involved with the Parent Advisory Council (PAC) and the Gridiron Club.

"It's great being an empty nester and finally having the time to do all the things you always wished you could do."

— Linda Snowdale, candidate

"I hope to be a voice for parents, teachers and be open to listening what people have to say," Snowdale said, adding she is excited to have a race for the seats on the School Committee. She named the budget and the five-year strategic plan as two of the challenges that lie ahead for the committee.

All positions available in the 2010 Town Election have had at least one candidate pull papers, with the exception of a one-year seat on the Recreation Commission.

Other candidates that have come forward to pull papers:

*Library Trustees (three three-year terms): Sarah Pease of Sankey Road, Stacey Weaver of Nichols Road, Henry Rattenbury of Briarwood Lane and Teresa Polhemus of Tad Lane.

Recreation Commission (one five-year term): Abigail Alves of Stockbridge St.

Board of Selectmen (two three-year terms): Paul Carlson of Old Coach Road and Leland Jenkins of Jerusalem Road.

Housing Authority (one five-year term): Helen "Taffy" Nothnagle of Atlantic Ave.

Planning Board (one five-year term): Stuart Ivimey of Sankey Road.

Planning Board associate member (one three-year term): William Hannon of Linden Drive.

Sewer Commission (one three-year term): James Dow of North Main St.

*Water Commission (one three-year term): Nathaniel Palmer of Little Harbor Road and Christopher Seebeck of Riverview Drive.

Board of Assessors (one three-year term): Elsa Miller of Reservoir Road.

Board of Health (one three-year term): Steve Bobo of Jerusalem Road.

*School Committee (two three-year terms): Linda Snowdale of Mill Lane, Adrienne MacCarthy of Doane St., Paul Ognibene of Beach St. and Jeanne Astino of Flintrock Ridge Road.

*Denotes a race for that position(s).

Friday, March 5, 2009 is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting to be held on Saturday, March 27, 2010 and for the Annual Town Election to be held on Saturday, April 10, 2010.

Honoring Hagerty's legacy

Historical Society, CMI hosting exhibit, special event

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

In a bygone era of Cohasset, there was a bustling furniture business; sophisticated antenna and reflectors were built to battle the Germans in World War II and the construction of the lightest, fastest rowing shells.

All made possible under the direction of one man, Francis "Fran" Hagerty, over the span of four decades.

Together, the Historical Society and the Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) have partnered to bring the life and work of Hagerty alive. To celebrate the exhibit and the man it honors, the Historical Society is hosting a night of memories, wine and hors d'oeuvres to remember the legacy Hagerty created on Saturday March 13.

The special speaker for the evening will be one of Hagerty's sons, Peter Hagerty. His son John will also be in attendance.

"Clearly the Hagerty Company was an important part of Cohasset during the 40s, 50s, 60s and into the 70s. We felt it was important to highlight that legacy, especially while there are many people in town to remember it and remember the Hagerty family," Historical Society Director Lynne DeGiacomo said.

The Hagerty company, specifically the Cohasset Colonials, was one of the last true industries of Cohasset, "Cohasset must have been a different place back then," she said.

Tying into the Hagerty exhibit is Cohasset Maritime Institute's effort to bring wooden boatbuilding back to the harbor – and the boathouse that was a part of the Hagerty complex.

"When CMI was founded 10 years ago it was the hope of the board to have a place that would perpetuate the tradition of wooden boatbuilding. Now, we are fulfilling that second prong of our mission," said Lisa Hewitt-Dick, CMI board member.

The exhibit explores the three main areas of interest and endeavors of Hagerty over the span of his life. There is a section displaying and explaining the Cohasset Colonials, Hagerty's later life effort. There is a section on his extensive work with the Navy during World War II. And finally, a section explores the different boats designed and built by Hagerty. They aim to have a 30-foot racing shell on display as part of the exhibit.

Before the war he focused on racing shells. He developed a method of constructing lightweight but extremely strong small boat hulls using thin sheets of plywood bonded with tough new adhesives. He made one-man racing shells through 8-oared boats out of the Cohasset boatshop.

From 1938 to the late 1940s, his company built and sold thousands of five-foot wooden dinghies known as "Sea Shells." He also built racing sailboats and even ice boats.

When World War II broke out, the Navy called upon his expertise. The cold-molded plywood process used for fabricating small boats had caught their attention. A new radar system was being developed and a cover to protect the disk antenna was needed. The company developed the "radome" (one of which is on display in the Hagerty exhibit) to be mounted in the nose of bomber aircraft. The antennas that were installed on US Navy PT boats were also manufactured in Cohasset under Hagerty.

After the war, Hagerty began producing furniture in Scandinavian contemporary design and reproductions of Colonial furniture. The kit form of the furniture became widely known as "Cohasset Colonials" and is still produced, just not in Cohasset.

Each section features photos, historical background, memorabilia and historical examples of Hagerty's work. High school students Lauren Blaze and Ben Campbell helped put the exhibit together as part of their community services/civics class.

One special piece of the exhibit will include film of the Hagerty boats in action. During the development of the Hagerty exhibit, a collection of 16mm film was found. CMI paid for the video to be transferred to a disk. Among the footage is Hagerty sailing his prototype of the 310 sailboat, ice boat racing and 110 sailboat class racing.

Both of Hagerty's sons, Peter and John, will be in attendance. Peter will speak about his dad and his business. And the historical society is welcoming residents to come and share their own stories of Hagerty the man and his businesses, which include Cohasset Colonials and Hagerty shells.

"The fun part is people are really excited that the Hagerty boys are coming back and talking about their dad," Hewitt-Dick said, adding she hopes residents will bring their own photos and memories to share.

Space is limited to 100 guests at the March 13 event, which begins at 7p.m. Tickets are available through the Historical Society ($10 for historical society or CMI member, $15 for non-members). Call 781-383-1434 or send an e-mail to cohassethistory@yahoo.com to reserve a spot.

Mother of two teenagers loses over 42 pounds!

BEFORE

Wow, I'm remembering how scared I was six months ago to even think about joining a gym. Having never done weight training, I was surprised at how quickly (with proper guidance) I learned the correct techniques. Being a person with a full and stressful life, I realized I was at the bottom of the "to do list" – after the family pet! I now feel empowered and no longer suffer from panic/anxiety attacks anymore, which is huge!

VACATION WEEK

Hello Cohasset. I hope that everyone enjoyed Valentine's Day with the people they love and with people who love you. I also hope that all who have been enjoying the vacation week have had fun, loved the snow that many of us received and enjoy this weekend to finish out the week. We are getting a little closer to warmer weather (maybe) and soon we can say 'Hooray, Spring has Sprung!" Until then, remember that we live here in New England for a reason with 4 seasons and sometimes, Mother Nature plays some tricks on us and things get a bit tricky. Enjoy what we get as best you can, try not to complain about it all too much and as I have said before (because I need to be reminded of this myself) we are all very lucky to have another day to enjoy. Have a great week! Now, on with the news for this week.

PASSION PLUNGE

Here is a feel good story that happens each year and is something that you and the family could go and cheer for or even, join in the plunge. March Madness starts on Saturday March 6th this year. It's the 12th Passion Plunge for Special Olympics Massachusetts (SOMA)! If you're looking for a great event to take part in, or to go watch and cheer on the Plungers, this is it! There's a costume parade at 11:15 a.m., followed by the mad dash of the plungers into the surf at noon at the Mary Jeannette Murray Bathhouse on Nantasket Beach.

Jay Nothnagle, plunging for his 10th time, is an athlete and Captain of the South Shore Mariners Team, which includes Cohasset plungers: Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Jack Delorenzo, Ron Goodwin, Bill Greentree, Jeff Nothnagle (Board Chair), Graham Sida, Nick Sida, and Doug Yeager, plus six from other South Shore towns. The funds they raise come back to our local Mariners program that has 90 athletes from age 8 to 66 from seven area towns. So "come on down" to Nantasket Beach on Saturday, March 6th, and please support our athletes with a pledge! You can do this with a check to your favorite plunger (payable to Special Olympics), or on-line at "www.PassionPlunge.org", a secure site. Local participants would also love to have you plunge with them - you can register at that same site! Thanks in advance for your interest and support for this very worthwhile group.

WELCOME HOME

This is a great piece of family news to share. Joanna (Hamilton) Montanari, USAF, CHS class of 2006, returned last week from a deployment in Southwest Asia. Her husband Anthony Montanari, USAF, returned last month from a tour of duty in Afghanistan. Her brother Captain Andy Hamilton, USMC, CHS class of 1998, got back last week from Iraq. Our community, your family and friends are all so thankful to have you return safe and sound. Our thoughts and prayers continue to be sent to all who are working to protect our country on a daily basis. Thank you to all.

CLARKSON

Congratulations to Jacqueline Smith, CHS 2005, who graduated in December from Clarkson University with a bachelor of science degree in Global Supply Chain Management. Jacqueline made the President's List in her last semester at Clarkson, which requires a GPA of 3.8 or better. Jacqueline will begin her career working as a Lead Buyer at GE Energy, in Schenectady N.Y. Your family and friends wish you all the best Jacqueline as you begin the next chapter in your life.

RENSSELAER

Daniel Martin, CHS '09, has made the Honor Roll for his first semester achievements at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute where he studies at the Lally School of Management and plays varsity basketball for the Engineers. His parents Dan and Pat are so proud. This is super news Danny, keep up the great work.

ITALIAN NIGHT

Looking for a tasty and fun evening to enjoy with the whole family and friends both old and new? The Our World Children's Museum is having a Family Italian Night on Feb. 27 from 4-7 pm. This will be a super evening filled with plenty of food, movies, music and games with a definite European Flair. The cost for this benefit is $10 per person and $30 per family for a tasty meal and entertainment with adult beverages for a separate fee. Call 781-383-3198 or send an email to jean@ourworld-cgdm.org to register. All proceeds to help with the current renovations.

That is all for this week. Please send in your news, event and celebration information to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm. Also, please remember that sometimes, even if you request a piece to be written in full and the exact way it has been sent, this cannot always be done due to space, etc. I will always do my best to include all of the key pieces of a story as well as spruce it up when needed or wanted.

Local family in commercial

On Dec. 5, a film crew from Hollywood showed up on Pleasant Street to film a 30-second commercial for Stop & Shop. Marie Dunkelberger was cast for the part after she was approached while shopping at Stop & Shop in Cohasset in mid-November.

Marie's entire family got to participate. Her husband, Bryan, and their three children, Gavin, Ian and Ella. Their friends, the Donovans, also from Cohasset, appear in the advertisement as well.

At first when Shadow disappeared from the yard, they figured he would return on his own. But, when he didn't return by nightfall, that's when they got worried. The Dicksons started making phone calls alerting the Cohasset police and the Animal Control Officers in Cohasset and nearby towns. They called local vets and the Scituate Animal Shelter.

They tracked his big paw prints to a birdfeeder in Kendall Village. They drove up and down Route 3A looking for him.

"It was a really nice community effort that went into this, I can't even tell you."
— Kelly Dickson

"I told my daughter, 'he's a big boy, we're going to be able to spot him," Dickson said. Friends jumped in to lend their resources and networks to spread the word about Shadow. Signs went up alerting people of the lost lab.

Family friend Dama Dow and her family aided in the search and posted messages and pictures on Facebook, which included dozens of Cohasset resident friends. E-mails were sent out to different networks to alert people of the missing down. St. Stephen's, the Dicksons' church, pitched in to spread the word.

"It was a really nice community effort that went into this, I can't even tell you," Dickson said.

Then on Tuesday the Cohasset Police dispatcher Chris Grant received a call from Hingham resident Brendon Potter. They had found a black lab near their home in central Hingham.

Potter and his wife, Jane, spotted the black lab outside their home on Sunday afternoon.

"Nobody was around him and he looked confused and spooked," Potter said of his first encounter with Shadow. An unknown Cohasset family pulled over to try to coax the dog to safety. Shadow bolted, cut through yards, and went around the block. Potter joined the effort with a leash and eventually they were able to get Shadow. He brought him home; it was clear almost immediately Shadow was a loved dog who was really scared and spooked.

Kelly Dickson, Shadow's owner, gives a well-deserved treat to her black lab. Lexi, the Dicksons' golden lab, was happy to have her 'brother' home safe and sound.

Potter began to call around to see if a missing dog had been reported. With Monday being a holiday and many vets and animal control officers out of the office, he put up signs on Route 228 saying "Dog Found."

Meanwhile, Shadow settled in, ate some dog food and nestled in some blankets. On an attempt to reach the Cohasset Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy, Potter was put in touch with the police dispatcher Chris Grant who put two and two together.

Dickson was put in touch with Potter, who made sure they were talking about the same dog. Shadow's tall stature, silky black hair, the dislike of the cold, the invisible fence collar were the telltale signs.

"He is just the sweetest, sweetest dog," Potter said.

On Tuesday afternoon, the Dicksons were at last reunited with Shadow.

"When we brought Shadow out of the house, boy was he happy! There was no doubt he knew them," Potter said. "We were so thrilled to have him reunited with his family, that was our goal."

Dickson said she regrets not having Shadow wear his collar and tags. His invisible fence collar is large, making it difficult for him to wear two collars.

"I was stupid, I could have saved everybody so much heartache," Dickson said. She and her family have already gone to the pet supply store to get him and his golden lab sister, Lexi, new collars and have ordered tags.

But, perhaps, she knew all along Shadow would find a way back to them.

"This dog can survive anything. He's bitten through nine volts batteries, eats chocolate like there is no tomorrow, eaten a refrigerator's worth of food," Dickson said. "He's a character."

Dickson reported Shadow is "no worse for the wear."

"He has no cuts, scratches, just a few thistles on his back end," Dickson said, as she watched him lounge on her bed. "He is happy to be home. This is a happy ending."

Sunrise supports the troops

Raffle proceeds help fill care packages

Sunrise of Cohasset teamed up with Ocean Edge Resort & Club in Brewster recently to sponsor a free weekend getaway to the resort down on the Cape.

Sunrise held a raffle for all employees and attendees at a recent professional networking event. The tickets were $5 each. All proceeds from the raffle are being used to arrange care baskets for men and women overseas in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"Our seniors are involved in designing care baskets and donating them to our troops," said Susan Gregorio of Sunrise. "This is an excellent way for our seniors to demonstrate independence, purpose, and their appreciation for the men and women of the Armed Forces."

James Barber, Director of Community Relations said: "our seniors are special and committed to proving their passion for life, love and support of our men and women overseas."

Sunrise Senior Living of Cohasset held the professional networking event on Jan. 27. Bella Aesthetics of Cohasset was there along with their team performing hand treatments and massages from 5-7pm. Seafood, Mediterranean cuisine as well as beer and wine were on hand for all guests.

Marie Egan, Navy veteran Jim Grinnelle and Dorothea Markarian pack a box full of treats that will be sent to the troops.

Mary Nadrozna packs a care package with cookies, soap, tuna fish and pretzels and more for the troops.

Residents of Sunrise Assisted Living of Cohasset prepare packages to be sent overseas to the troops that include cookies, soap, tuna fish, pretzels and much more. Seated: Dorothea Markarian, Peggy LeClare, and Mary Nadrozna. Back row: Marie Egan, Jim Grinelle, Helen Hickman and Norman LeClare.

Calling all Fore River Bridge commuters

Does your commute include traveling over the Fore River?

What kind of bridge would you like to see spanning Fore River?

Controversy over what kind of bridge this will be has stirred up a whirlpool of discussion.

This question will be high on the agenda at the Feb. 24 meeting at 7:30 p.m. at Hingham Town Hall, when South Shore residents will discuss replacing the temporary Fore River Bridge with a permanent structure.

New designs will be presented.

Construction on the $255 million project is slated to start in 2011 and be completed in 2015.

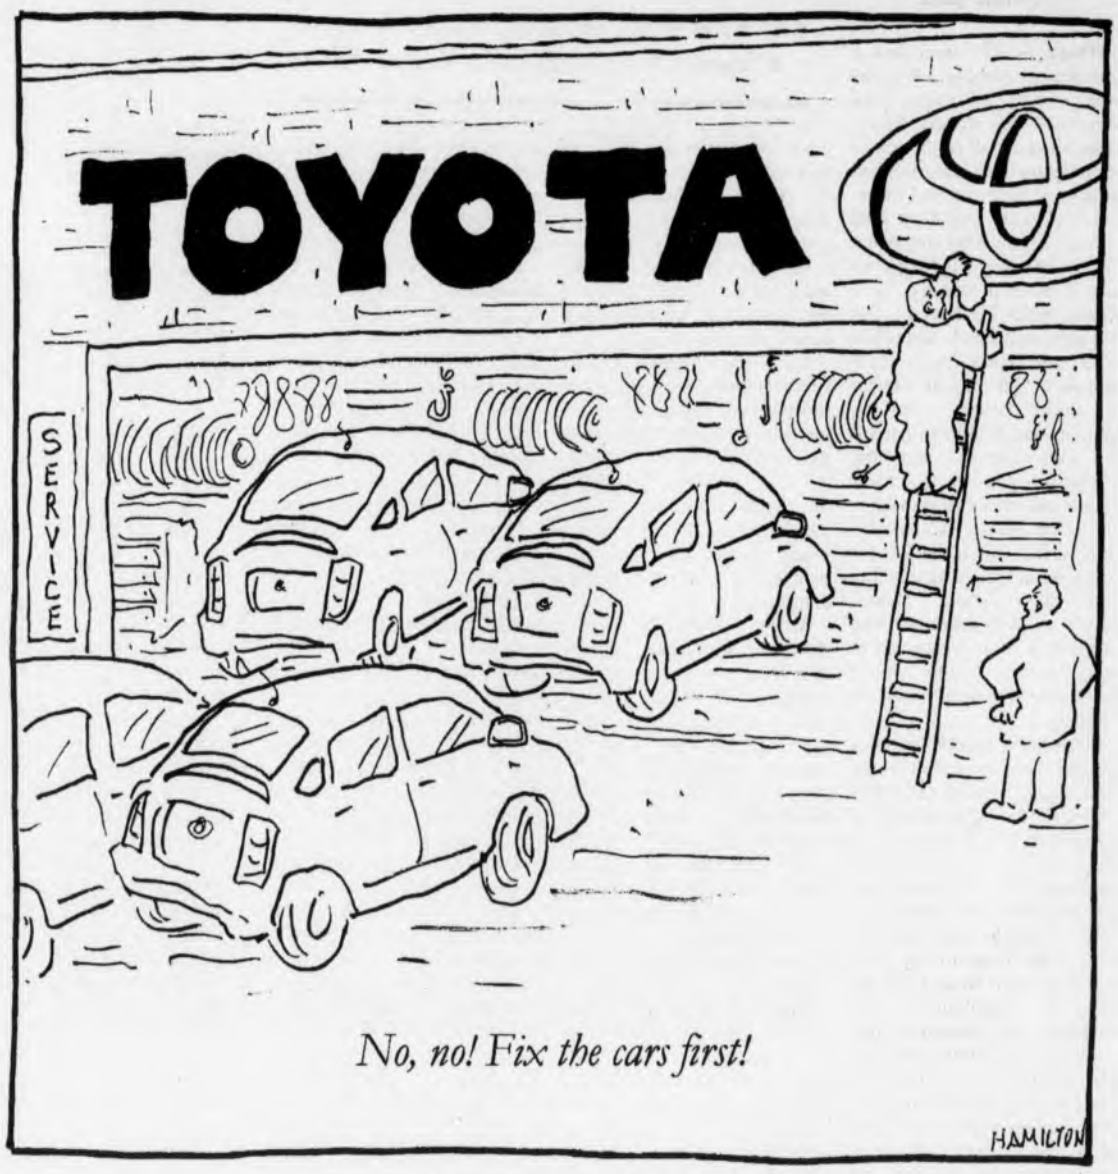
Each type of bridge has its pluses and minuses.

"A drawbridge has a little bit more of a span that will reduce the amount of bridge openings," State Sen. Robert Hedlund, R-Weymouth, said.

The Massachusetts Department of Transportation favors this design.

However, Fore River may have a say about whether a drawbridge is appropriate, and the river is keeping silent. The channel must be widened, and how wide will be a factor in determining the design of the permanent bridge. The current width of the channel, 175 feet, cannot accommodate larger vessels, and, should the channel need to be widened to more than 250 feet, MassDOT will have to choose a vertical lift bridge design.

If you care about the shape of the steel and concrete structure that will be appearing on Weymouth's horizon, or if you have questions or concerns, next Wednesday's meeting should be a priority for you.



Thank you to our local legislators state Sen. Hedlund and state Rep Garrett Bradley for their dedicated work on this project, and for MassDOT for giving South Shore commuters this golden and convenient opportunity to have their say on the shape the permanent Fore River Bridge will take.

"We specifically requested a meeting more convenient in terms of time and location for all the commuters from our districts who use the bridge every day," Hedlund said. "We appreciate the Massachusetts Department of Transportation's willingness to come down to the district and address our constituents on this very important project."

"I appreciate the DOT folks realizing this is an issue that affects many South Shore commuters," Bradley said. "I appreciate them coming into the district to talk about the future of the bridge."

Bradley noted the bridge is used heavily by Hingham, Cohasset, Hull and Scituate commuters.

With that in mind, Bradley and Hedlund also worked together on having electronic boards installed along Route 3A notifying motorists of bridge openings and instituted an email notification system about bridge openings.

Mariner police item appears in The New Yorker

The small item appears in an occasional section called "Constabulary Notes From All Over"

A Cohasset Mariner "Police Beat" item that appeared in the July 17 edition of the paper turned up in this week's "The New Yorker" magazine.

The small item appears in an occasional section called "Constabulary Notes From All Over," where amusing or bizarre police reports from local papers appear from across the nation, according to local loyal New Yorker readers. Our item is found on the bottom of page 69 in the Feb. 15 & 22 edition.

Some may recall the item from last summer. The text is as follows:

"From the Cohasset (Mass.) Mariner

Police investigated a mysterious toy and note that were left on a doorstep at a Jerusalem Road home after the homeowner called Sunday (July 12) and was concerned. As it turned out the items, which were left for the homeowner's daughter, were from a 7-year old neighbor, who wanted to strike up a friendship, police said."

The Mariner does not know who sent the write-up to The New Yorker but thanks alert readers for letting us know about it.

HEALTH NOTES

Water throughout our history

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The water wheel would operate a bellows in a foundry, for a forge and a blacksmith.

Water — Cohasset has a bounteous amount of good water. For 200 years, five waterfalls on Bound Brook used to supply all of the power to industry. Each waterfall had a dam, a sluiceway and waterwheel, which would in turn collect water in a holding pond. The water wheel would operate a bellows in a foundry, for a forge and a blacksmith. The foundry would melt and refine local iron ore to make draw knives for finishing the lumber to build houses, shovels, ploughs and pitchforks needed by the farmers and the boathooks, goosenecks, chainplates and other fittings necessary to equip Cohasset's schooners, which fished for mackerel in Massachusetts Bay and the Grand Banks. However, their water and well water was soon discovered to have serious health effects from the fertilizers used in farming.

Cohasset's rivers. brooks, ponds, purer than well water, now supply most of our drinking water. As our knowledge of its content has increased over the years, it has received more treatment when necessary. First it was chlorination, begun near 1940. Fluoride was added by vote of the Town in 1954. From that point until about 1978, the existing distribution was enlarged with relatively little attention to anything but supply. Later in 1978 septic systems were prohibited for new construction within 1000 feet of a named body of water. Negotiation with builders and developers created the 100-foot buffer line we now have in the Board of Health regulations. The storm-water bylaw was implemented in 2007and it is being implemented now, but needs to be reviewed in light of the possibility of more new construction in Town.

The beginnings of our replacement of the old distribution system and upgrading the water supply began with the creation of the Aaron River Reservoir in 1979. At that time, the Water Department began creating a modern sensing and water quality assesment system, which is only now nearing completion.

Water purification for drinking and household use has been under continuous scrutiny. The drinking fountains in our school system were assessed for lead about six years ago, long before the current spate of publicity about the drinking fountains in surrounding towns. From 1979 until the present, water quality was accomplished by sampling at the end of the longest arms of the distribution system such as Jerusalem Road and Cedar Street

Spills of so called volatile organic compounds and other contaminants are regularly brought to our attention by a State mandated control process as are other changes in toxic substance laws covering landfills, etc. all of which are evaluated by the Water Dept. Only now is a system of continuous automatic sampling of contaminants now considered modern day threats being implemented.

The contaminants in our pond water drinking supply vary with the time of year and what's growing in the watershed. Manganese coming from plant material is a greater problem in summer, but it coats pipes and valves as well as laundry and clothes where it resides in the pipes and goes into solution in drinking water.

Manganese as a contaminant and its solution — Because the present treatment system has little ability to inhibit the creation of a layer of manganese on our pipes, valves and other elements of our water supply infrastructure, the water department must now add another chemical, Poly aluminum chloride, to the water supply. This material will eventually provide a coating to the pipes of the system, which displaces the manganese now coating the surfaces of the system. The process of displacing the manganese and purging it from the system will go on this summer. So, we're in for a disruptive summer, which, hopefully, by the fall will result in arresting development of manganese in the Cohasset water supply.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

President Ronald Reagan received the lion's share of the votes in our poll asking which recent president would get the most ink in history books published 100 years from now.

Reagan leads in presidential poll

The results from our on-line poll in honor of Presidents Day about which recent president would get the most ink in history books published 100 years from now are in.

As you can see from the pie chart – 58 percent of the votes named President Ronald Reagan. As of Thursday morning, there were a total of 30 votes in the poll.

Here is the question posed to our Web visitors:

Which recent president will get the most ink in U.S. history books written 100 years from now?

- Ronald Reagan (17 votes)
- George H. W. Bush (2 votes)
- Bill Clinton (3 votes)
- George W. Bush (4 votes)
- Barack Obama (4 votes)

Total votes: 30 (as of Thursday morning).

One online blogger wrote in part: "Lech Walesa, the first President of a free Poland, put it well, 'We in Poland took him so personally. Why? Because we owe him our liberty.'

"Just as our first patriots inspired the French and many other revolutions, he gave oppressed Europeans the confidence to fight to for their freedom. I hope that is how he is remembered, and that oppressed peoples can and will continue to find in America the same inspiration Ronald Reagan gave the world.".

Another blogger excerpt: "History will adjudicate Ronald Reagan as the most important leader of our era, maybe even our sovereignty. Unfortunately they will be perplexed that his common sense would be continually challenged and litigated by his predecessors."

Another wrote about the poll: "Thank you so much for this poll! It has provided us several nights of great dinner conversation."

While our polls are not scientific, we think the polls can be a good vehicle to provide a quick snapshot of public opinion.

We have the ability to conduct polls as often as we want. Be sure to visit: www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset to vote in our weekly polls. We hope to more of you will participate in our polls. Voting only takes a minute.

The poll is on the lower right of the homepage next to "most commented." Keep scrolling down and you will find it.

We welcome ideas for new polls. Please email your thoughts to editor Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com

In the meantime, please vote in our weekly poll and check out our newly designed Web site.

Let us know your thoughts!

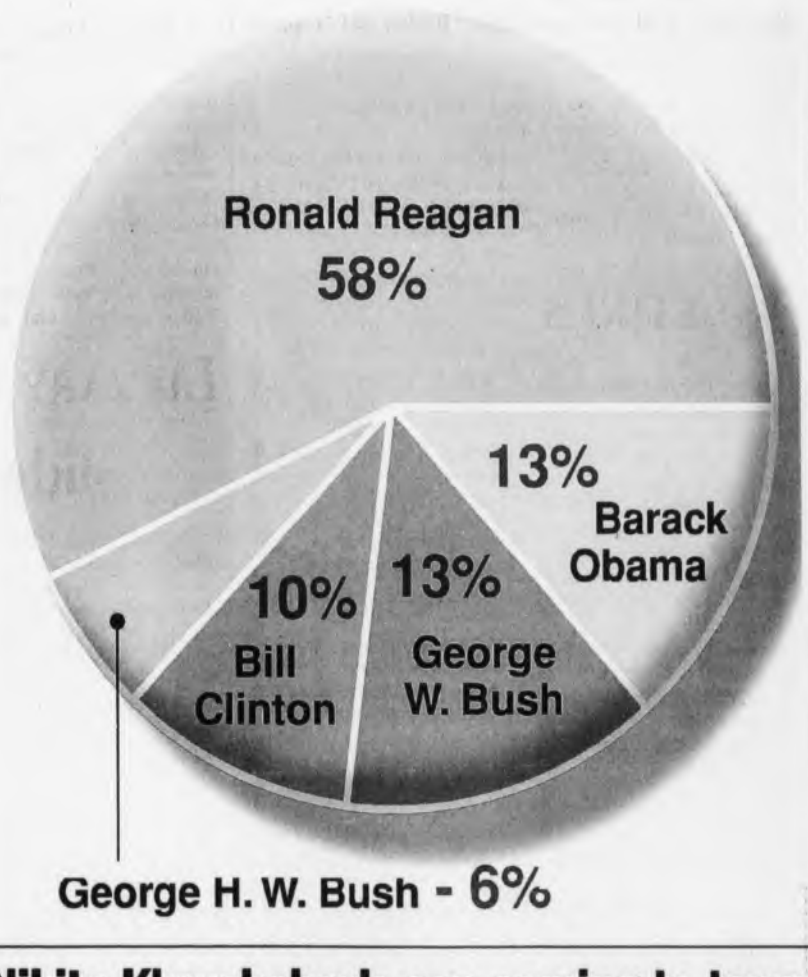
Cautious optimism in northern Iraq

I'm standing in an area that is a total anathema to the broader Middle East we are so used to hearing about at home: the people here love the United States.

Editor's note: During this vacation week, we thought our Cohasset readers would enjoy reading this column by a Hingham resident.



Jack Bauer and I are walking briskly in the dim light through the corridors of a Saddam Hussein torture center, looking desperately for a way out. The smell is overpowering, the sun is setting, and we work to hold the notion that we might ultimately be stuck here at bay. We hear the screams of other prisoners, hurrying our already quickened pace. We've doubled back over the same ground several times, and things are starting to look bleak.

Eventually, one of the guards comes and finds us, letting us out into the night, the fresh, cool air a welcome respite from the overpowering stench of a prison filled well beyond its capacity with dying people. Jack Bauer (my local friend whose affinity for the show featuring the main character of the same name gave him the nickname with his friends) and I smile broadly, laugh, and I thank him for giving me a tour of the Red Museum, a former Baath party headquarters that served as the local prison, court, and torture center. Despite the fact that the prison has been closed since the first Gulf War, not a single thing has changed since the day the Baath party lost control of it. The real torture tapes of real prisoners are on a constant loop, their primal screams haunting the dreams of visitors for weeks, and the ominous natural lighting highlighting figurines re-enacting scenes of horrifying violence are never forgotten. Outside, Soviet-era tanks sit, rusting.

As I head towards my favorite local café to finish out the night before heading back to the compound, I take stock of my situation. I'm standing in the middle of Sulaymaniyah, deep in the heart of northern Iraq, in a valley surrounded by mountains, which are all that separate me from Iran on one side. I'm standing in an area that is a total anathema to the broader Middle East we are so used to hearing about at home: the people here love the United States. I have witnessed the unabashed cheering and weeping that accompanies any picture of our last president. I have watched them smile and salute at passing US military vehicles. As one of the current prime ministers said to me over dinner recently, "I am a single issue voter, and he (George W. Bush) saved the Kurds."

I continue my walk, noting the freshly paved roads, the new street signs in Kurdish, Arabic and English, and, most significantly, the waves of new cars flooding the streets. Later that night, after I've had my fill of both the espresso and the Frank Sinatra blasting out of the speakers at the café, my driver picks me up. Complaining in a joking manner, he says "there are too many cars on the road. My friends and I, we cannot tell who the rich people are anymore. Even the poor people like us have cars!" There is a cautious optimism in the air in northern Iraq. By most indications, the future looks bright. But that's all been heard before: history shows us that the Middle East is a place where despair can be snatched from the jaws of hope all too easily.

Nikita Khrushchev's son coming to town

Professor Sergei Khrushchev of Brown University, son of former Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, will make a special appearance with award-winning film producer and Boston College professor John Michalczyk at "Breaking Through: Remembering the Berlin Wall and the End of the Cold War," a fundraising event at the Red Lion Inn in Cohasset on Sunday, Feb. 28.

This event will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall and will also support post-production costs of Michalczyk's new film, "Writing on the Wall: Remembering the Berlin Wall," which premiered at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston in October.

COURTESY PHOTO

Professor Sergei Khrushchev will comment at the Feb. 28 event about his father's perspective on building the Berlin Wall.

In this production, Khrushchev recalls his father's perspective in building the Berlin Wall, and he will comment further at the event. The music composer for the film, Ralf Yusuf Gawlick of Boston College, will attend to present selections from his original film score. Raymond Helmick, conflict studies scholar from Boston College and former senior associate at the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, D.C., will also attend. Clips from the film will be screened and discussed.

The Rotary Club of Scituate has co-sponsored Michalczyk's conflict resolution films and has recently been invited to screen this film on the Berlin Wall at the 2010 Rotary International Convention in Montreal next June with a panel, featuring Michalczyk and Helmick, on "The Use of Conflict Resolution Films in Rotary Educational and Peacebuilding Programs."

Cocktails and appetizers will be served at 4 p.m., and the program will start at 5:15 p.m. A dinner with the special guests will be held at 6:30 p.m. Cost per person for cocktails, appetizers and the program will be $75. Cost per person for cocktails, appetizers, program and the special dinner will be $150.

No second chance for village condo project

Planning Board upholds denial decision

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The proposed 17-unit condominium development at 8 James Lane will not get another bite at the proverbial apple.

In a split 3-2 vote, the Planning Board upheld its decision to deny the application with prejudice for a 17-unit condominium development at 8 James Lane.

The board re-affirmed its decision that requires the applicant to wait two years before coming back before the Planning Board with the same, or similar, project.

Earlier this month, South Coastal Development Group, the applicant, requested the planning board reconsider their denial decision and instead allow them to withdraw their application without prejudice.

At Wednesday's meeting, Gordon Hurd, attorney for the South Coastal Development Group, said his client was very close to finished plans on the proposed project and would like the option to come back with the project.

"That's why we're back here with hat in hand," Hurd said.

In mid-December, the project was denied with prejudice, meaning they could not bring the same project back to the planning board for two years. However, they can come back with a substantially different project at any time.

The benefit of withdrawing without prejudice is the applicant can come back to the planning board with same or similar project with no time restriction. Even with a withdrawal without prejudice the application process – public hearings, application fees, plans – would completely start anew.

The planning board offered to have the applicant withdraw their application without prejudice back in December, but the applicant did not go that route.

"I think this is absurd. How many bites of the apple has this applicant gotten? How many times did they have to move this project forward?" planning board member Stuart Ivimey said. "Abutters have the right to know what's going on. We made the decision, let's move on."

Planning Board member Charles Samuelson came at the issue with a broader perspective and asked the question, "does this board support development of the village business district? Do we like the town the way it is and want to make it difficult for developers to come in?"

Planning board chairman Al Moore said he was concerned of limiting the development possibilities at the property by not allowing the applicant to withdraw without prejudice. An all-commercial development is one of the possibilities under the village business district zoning bylaw.

"Abutters have the right to know what's going on. We made the decision, let's move on."
— Stuart Ivimey, Planning Board

"What they come up with for plan B might not be as good for the town," Moore said. "In our zeal to hold people's feet to the fire, we might live to regret it."

The proposal for a 17-unit condominium development at 8 James Lane first came before the planning board in April 2009. During the latter part of the public hearing process, the planning board continued the public hearings multiple times and received little to no new information on the project. The board denied the project largely due to the lack of progress and engineering fees not being up to date.

"I fail to see how reversing our decision and losing credibility with the community and developers (is something we should do). We have to say what we mean and mean what we say," Ivimey said shortly before the vote was taken.

Members Jean Healey, Clark Brewer, and Ivimey voted against allowing the applicant to withdraw without prejudice. Samuelson and Moore voted in favor of the action.

Following the vote about 10 James Lane neighbors left the meeting room with smiles on their faces.

The project was not popular among the abutters largely because they felt the 26,000 square foot building with three floors and an underground parking garage did not fit in with the residential neighborhood with modest homes.

The property at 8 James Lane is somewhat of an orphan in the village business district as it is located on the other side of the MBTA tracks and does not currently have retail or commercial space. A single-family ranch home is currently on the parcel. The adjacent parcel, which fronts on Pleasant Street, is home to JJ's Junction ice cream and hot dog stand and is also zoned village business district.

South Coastal Development Group can apply for a special permit with the Planning Board for substantially different project at any time. The Planning Board determines if the application is substantially different.

Cohasset detective division has remarkable record are still accessible, forensic evidence, such as fingerprints, hair and fibers, is still available. "The longer it takes to report to a crime scene – the quicker forensic evidence disappears."

The type of crime that CID investigates runs the gamut from sexual assaults and attempted sexual assaults to break-ins and financial crimes and identity theft. CID primarily investigates felonies while the Patrol Division conducts other follow-up investigations.

Lennon explains the purpose of a police department is twofold.

"It is the duty of the police department to prevent crime but if it occurs it is also our obligation to investigate it and bring the person or persons who committed the crime to justice," he said.

The forensic capability at the Cohasset Police Department (the equipment was largely paid for with drug forfeiture funds) is cutting edge.

"We have more capability here than any other police departments in this area," Lennon said. The police station has forensic crime scene processing equipment that includes a latent fingerprint kit and forensic light source that allows detectives to make trace biological evidence that cannot be seen with the naked eye more visible.

Lennon explains that victims of crimes need acknowledgement. Just taking a report is not enough, he said.

"They look at the follow up by this department as acknowledgement of their victimization," he said. "They want more than someone just showing up and documenting what had happened."

In a larceny, for example, they want police to find the perpetrator and the stolen items.

Sadly, Cohasset is not immune to crime. "Since its inception in 2002, CID has investigated hundreds of housebreaks, hundreds of larcenies, credit-card fraud cases and motor vehicle breakins," Lennon said. "Our clearance rate is two to three times the national average."

The biggest challenge for CID is managing the caseload. Lennon said when there are 15 cases on the desk – it can be challenging to give each one the attention it deserves. Report writing is also a major component of the job.

Cohasset's CID detectives are currently striving to become Certified Crime Scene Investigators through the International Association for Identification.

"Certification in this forensic discipline reassures the public and courts that the work we do is of the highest order," he said. "Presently, there are only five CCSIs in Massachusetts."

Lennon, who is a graduate of the FBI National Academy, said the citizens of Cohasset can rest assured knowing their police department maintains a unit of highly trained and experienced criminal investigators supported by state-of-the art technology who can perform professional criminal investigations whenever and wherever required.

Chief Mark DeLuca described the detective bureau here in Cohasset as "nothing short of excellent."

"The equipment, the professionalism and the attention to detail is something the residents of Cohasset should be proud of," DeLuca said. "In my 27 years of public safety I have never heard of a police department with a 100 percent conviction rate and that's what Lt. Greg Lennon and Detective Garrett Hunt have accomplished.

"I, as well as the Town of Cohasset, are very fortunate to have two such individuals," he said.

Criminal Investigation Division (CID)

- Command: Lt. Greg Lennon: responsible to ensure accomplishment of mission to the division as assigned by the Chief of Police and control of all investigative activities within CID.
- Investigator: Det. Garrett Hunt, responsible for investigative operations and preparation of resulting reports
- Prosecutor: Officer Lisa Matos, liaison between the police department and the district and superior courts.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Det. Garrett Hunt goes over paper work from the court in the office for the criminal investigation division. Hunt, who joined the Cohasset Police Department in 1996, said he became interested in crime scene investigation when he was a patrol officer. "Being on patrol, I was the first to respond to some crime scenes – the process always interested me," he said.

CID cases investigated

Between 2007 and 2009, CID conducted the following investigations, which included serious crimes such as burglary, armed robbery, rape and assault with intent to murder:

- Crimes against the person: 33, including nine sex crimes.
- Crimes against property: 136.
- Drug crimes: 17
- Death investigations: 13.
- Background investigations: 30.
- Criminal intelligence investigations (analytic and intelligence purposes to facilitate the solution and prevention of crime): 36.
- Preliminary investigations (CID into allegations or information to determine if there is credible information to show that criminal offense may have occurred, or is about to occur, and if so to determine what division has investigative responsibility): 8
- Solve rate: twice the national average

"It is the duty of the police department to prevent crime but if it occurs it is also our obligation to investigate it and bring the person or persons who committed the crime to justice."

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Beacon Hill Roll Call records local senators' votes on one roll call from the week of February 8-12. There were no roll calls in the House last week.

FREEZE UNEMPLOYMENT TAX (H 4470)

Senate 35-0 approved a House-approved bill freezing the unemployment insurance tax paid by employers at the current 2009 level through 2010 instead of allowing an automatic scheduled increase to take effect. The payments go into a fund that provides benefits to laid off workers.

The contribution that employers pay into the fund is rising dramatically because of the increasing number of laid off workers collecting benefits. The fund is now depleted and the state is funding unemployment benefits through a no-interest loan from a federal loan pool that is funded by federal unemployment taxes paid by employers.

Supporters said that without the freeze, the average employer contribution into the fund would jump $300 - from $584 to $884 per employee. They noted that even without this freeze, the contribution will increase by an estimated $120 per employee.

They argued that the freeze would save businesses $300 million during this economic downturn and is an appropriate balance between helping the jobless and the employers struggling to keep workers employed.

Only final approval in each branch is needed before the measure goes to Gov. Deval Patrick.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill).

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

$35 MILLION LOAN FOR THE CITY OF LAWRENCE (H 4421) - The House and Senate Ways and Means Committees held a hearing on the controversial bill that would allow Lawrence to sell $35 million in bonds to close its budget deficit.

The measure increases state oversight of the city's finances through the use of a state designated fiscal overseer to work with the mayor and city council. It also allows the state to appoint a finance control board with extensive powers over the city's finances if it does not balance its budget by January 2011.

Supporters said that this is the best way to bail out Lawrence and help it return to fiscal solvency.

Opponents said that Lawrence has mismanaged its finances and that the tougher finance control board with extensive powers over the city's finances should be set up immediately.

EXPAND ELIGIBILITY FOR RESTRAINING ORDERS (H 4443) - Gov. Patrick signed into law legislation allowing victims to take out restraining orders against abusers and stalkers with whom they have had no prior relationship. Current law allows these victims to petition for protection orders only if the perpetrator of the abuse is a family or household member or someone with whom the victim had a substantial dating relationship.

Supporters say that this long overdue law will save countless lives and reduce injuries suffered by innocent women. The governor said, "This new law closes a glaring loophole by ensuring the full extent of the justice system is available to protect sexual assault victims."

NOMINATION PAPERS AVAILABLE - Nominations papers are now available in the secretary of state's office for anyone who is thinking about running for U.S. Congress, the Massachusetts Legislature or statewide office in 2010. The party primaries are September 14 and the general election is Nov. 2.

ALLOW DOMESTIC VIOLENCE VICTIMS TO BREAK THEIR APARTMENT LEASES (S 627) - The Housing Committee approved a bill allowing victims of domestic violence to break their apartment lease, without a penalty, if they notify the owner in writing that they or a member of their household are a victim of domestic violence, rape, sexual assault or stalking. Supporters say that the measure is designed to help victims move if their assailant knows where they are living. The measure also requires owners to change the tenant's exterior locks if the tenant or occupants reasonably believe that they are in danger.

ASSAULT ON MEDICAL PERSONNEL (H 1696) - The House gave initial approval to a bill expanding the law that makes it a separate crime to assault an emergency medical technician, an ambulance operator or an ambulance attendant. The law provides jail sentences of 90 days to 2.5 years and/or fines of $500 to $5,000. The bill would expand the law to cover registered nurses, registered nurse psychologists, physical therapists and occupational therapists.

GIMME SHELTER

Rocky is a 'gentle giant'

COURTESY PHOTO

Rocky is one of a kind so if you'd like to have Rocky as a companion, please call Shirley at 781-925-3380. Hull Seaside Animal Rescue's hours are 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays; and 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays.

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is looking for a home for Rocky. Rocky is a domestic short hair white and black male. He is gentle giant. One has to meet this guy to believe that this huge feline can be picked up and cuddled like a baby. He'd be fine with the smallest of children. He gets along well with the other cats at the shelter. He's one of a kind so if you'd like to have Rocky as a companion, please call Shirley at 781-925-3380. You can check him out at www.hsar.org along with many other friendly felines.

We're located at 50 L St., Hull. The mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. Telephone: 781-925-3121 or 877-378-1195. Open hours are 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays; and 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays.

A special thanks to Hingham and Cohasset residents for their support.

HSAR to celebrate its 10th anniversary

Hull Seaside Animal Rescue invites the public to celebrate its 10th anniversary on Sunday, March 21, at the C-Note in Hull for its "Gimme Shelter" benefit. From 2 to 8 p.m., attendees can dance the afternoon away with Acoustic Phase, Catbasket and In the House. A food buffet will be served from 4 to 6 p.m., and there will be a Raffle Buffet as well. Tickets are $25 in advance and $30 at the door, and all tickets come with two free raffle tickets.

HSAR is a no-kill, nonprofit shelter that operates solely on money raised and received from donors and benefactors. Help the shelter continue its mission to rescue, spay/neuter, foster and adopt out feline by attending the benefit. Tickets can be purchased on the website at www.hsar.org, click on the donate button; at Sunshine Pet Parlor, 813 Nantasket Ave., Hull; or by calling toll free at 877-378-1195, leave name, phone number, and request for "Gimme Shelter" tickets and calls will be returned.

Rising popularity of voice competitions

CONSERVATORY NOTES

LORNA JANE NORRIS

Carly Hayes of Hull, the winner of last year's William P. Soderburg Song & Aria Competition, is shown here with her voice instructor Furong Gardner.

What is it about singing that promotes such a large competitive turnout?

To many of you reading this, the idea of getting up in front of a group of people and speaking makes you shiver. If that's true, the idea of getting up in front of a group of people and singing – by yourself – and being judged – is probably close to a nightmare. This is exactly what 30 courageous South Shore Conservatory voice students, ranging from age 10 through 60, will be doing at our annual William P. Söderberg Song & Aria Competition on Feb. 27.

Competing is certainly not for everyone, and many of our students at SSC are happy just to take their weekly private or semi-private lesson, sing at church or in their school choir and enjoy their personal growth as a singer. I wonder therefore, if it is a surprising statistic, for those of you who are still shivering from my first sentence, that such a large percentage of our private voice students opt to compete in the voice competition. What is it about singing that promotes such a large competitive turnout? Well, having just finished watching the audition rounds of "American Idol" I am not surprised. People of all talent levels (did I put that politely enough?) are more than prepared to get up in front of a group of judges and in fact the entire nation to show their stuff. Let's face it, singing is popular and our voice department faculty members are delighted!

When I consider the reasons behind the current trend, I have to credit both "American Idol" and the show "Glee" for bringing the dreams of aspiring singers into our homes and iPods. I also think that singing helps us confront some of our fears. When I do a voice evaluation with a new potential student, I always tell them that singing is not like studying piano or flute. It is so much more personal than that. Your instrument, your body, is an expression of you and that's something pretty special. It's tough being a kid these days and I see a lot of teens with self-esteem issues and lack of confidence. Taking voice lessons can really empower them, teach them how to stand tall and provide them with a language to express themselves. Yep, that's pretty amazing isn't it?

So in a little over a week, 30 nervous singers will don their finest clothes and perform one song (many in foreign languages!) from memory for a panel of judges comprised of four local public school choral directors and singers. Winners receive written feedback and a medal if they place, and perform for their friends, families and peers at a Winners Concert the same evening. William P. Söderberg's wife, vocalist Sherry Johnson, will be in the audience, cheering on the singers. We are grateful to the Wisneski family who generously endowed the competition in memory of their dear friend who loved to sing and hear others sing.

Join us as the winners perform in concert on Saturday, Feb. 27, 6 p.m., at our Duxbury campus, at 64 St. George St. Admission is free. For more information on this event or other voice department offerings, contact me at 781-749-7565, ext. 48, or visit our voice department homepage at www.sscmusic.org.

Lorna Jane Norris is Voice Department Chair and Director of Admissions at South Shore Conservatory. A British born soprano, she received her vocal degree from Longy School of Music. In 2008, she made her musical theater debut playing the role of Eliza Doolittle in "My Fair Lady."

Eight Skippers qualify for States

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Hosting the Division 3 State Championship meet is exciting for Cohasset wrestling coach Torin Sweeney and his team.

Having eight wrestlers qualify to wrestle at the meet is even more exciting.

Sweeney's group had a fantastic showing at Saturday's Div. 3 South Sectional tournament at Canton High School, placing eight wrestlers in the State Meet, along with one alternate.

"It was a great weekend in Canton," Sweeney said. "The kids wrestled fantastic. I could not have been more pleased with the effort. We went 12-15 in the regular season and now placed eight and an alternate in the State Tournament. The kids turned it up on Saturday. There were some surprises. Some kids were untested. They did great. It was magical. Everyone was outstanding."

Cam Washak won a title for the Skippers in the heavyweight division, beating Scituate's Mike Madeira in the championship round.

Earlier in his run, he upset Rockland's top-seeded Steven Gardner with a third period takedown in a 4-2 victory.

"It was 2-2 in the third period and Rockland chose neutral," Sweeney said. "Cam took him down to win the match. Then he beat Madeira in the final."

Wrestling

What made Washak's run more impressive is the fact that Washak weighed in at 195 pounds while battling in the heavyweight division.

In the 145-pound division, Jack Murphy had a big day, finishing second.

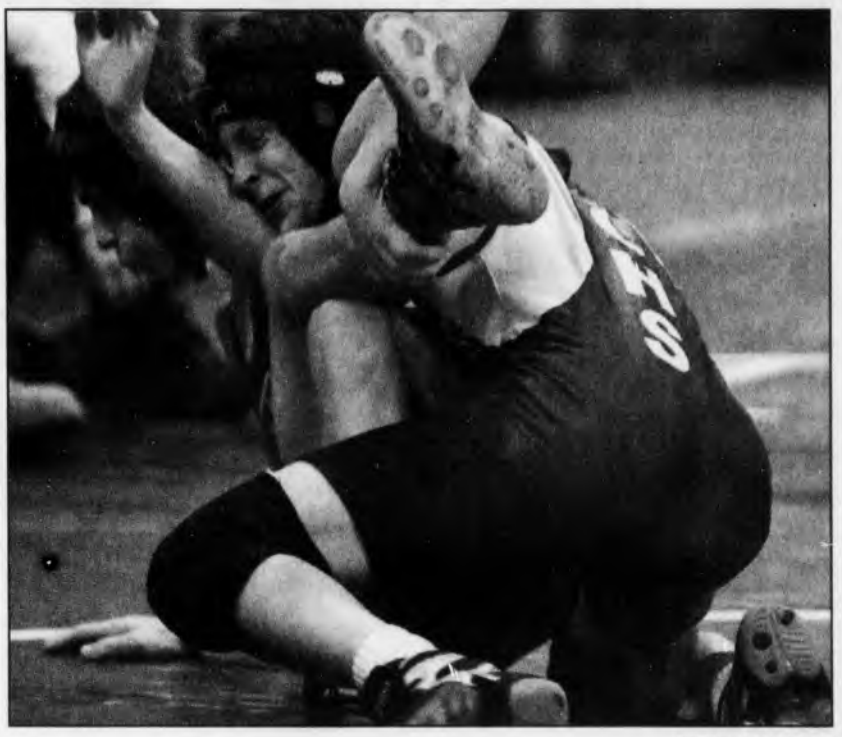
Murphy, who took a 31-1 record and a No. 3 seed into the tournament upset Carver's Mike Cabral, who was ranked No. 4 in the state rankings.

"He (Cabral) was winning 6-2," Sweeney said. "Jack turned and pinned him in the third period. It was a huge win for him in the semifinal. It set off a chain of events for us in the semis."

Murphy lost 5-3 in the final to Pembroke star Pat Claflin.

"That was a great match," Sweeney said. "Murphy put him on his back in the second period, but lost 5-3."

In 171-pound competition, Thomas Flibotte finished second, getting a pin in the semifinals before losing a fiercely fought battle to Hanover's Fran Armstrong in the final.



"Thomas almost got him in the third with a takedown," Sweeney said. "If he held him another half second he might have had him. It was Thomas' first loss of the season."

Flibotte was 23-0 before the loss in the finals.

At 152, Andrew Littauer finished second.

He also beat a highly rated Rockland wrestler (Tim Fitzgerald) in the semifinals with a third period takedown in a 5-4 win.

Skippers in must-win game today

After Saturday's exciting win over South Shore Vo-Tech, the Skippers faced off against a strong Rockland squad on Monday in hopes of clinching a berth in the State tournament.

The boys needed one point with three tough games left on the schedule, and with matching 4-3 losses to Rockland and Mansfield, still need that one point when they face off against Mashpee today at 1 p.m. at the Rockland Arena.

Hockey

Cohasset looked like it could get that point in the early going against Rockland on Monday.

The Skippers came out flying at the drop of the puck, with junior Anders Goetz banging one home in the games opening minute.

One of a kind class

Crough, Lehr and Kelly lead way to perfection

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

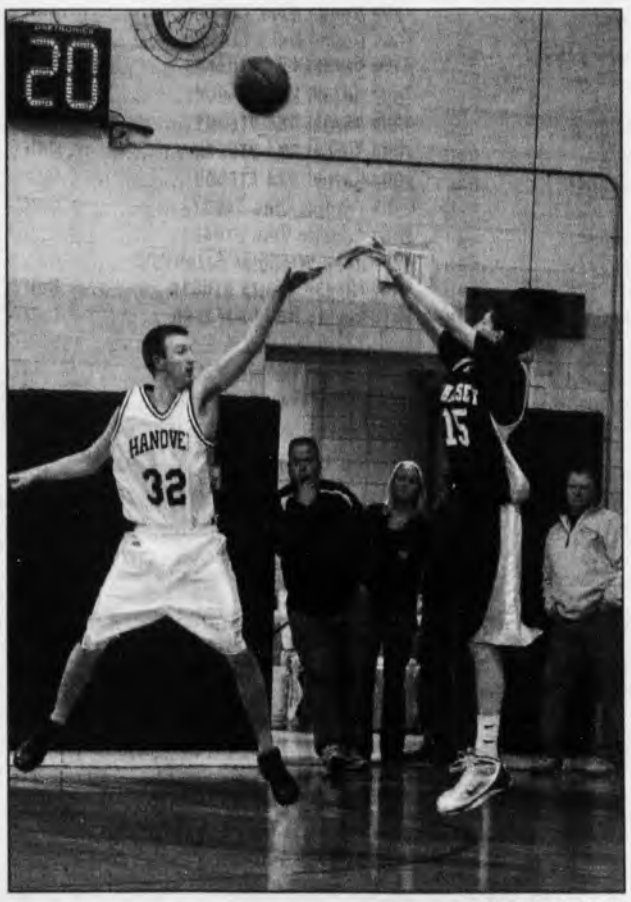
It isn't often that a team has a senior class like the one the Cohasset girls basketball team has.

There are only three seniors on the roster, but they're three players that any team would be more than thrilled to have.

Samantha Crough, Meredith Kelly and Tori Lehr will all be playing basketball at the next level next season, and in their careers, they've made memories that will last lifetimes for themselves, fans and future generations of Skippers.

It isn't just basketball.

Girls Basketball



Kelly, a three sport captain, was a key player for the Cohasset softball team as they won the Div. 4 South Sectional Tournament for the first time in school history. She also plays soccer.

Boys lose tough one to Hanover

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

It was another tough loss for the Cohasset boys basketball team on Monday night as the Skippers gave up a 10-point third quarter lead in a 60-58 loss at Hanover.

It was the second heartbreaker against Hanover this season. The first time the teams met in Cohasset, Hanover won by one point.

Boys Basketball

Cohasset led 41-31with 5:40 left in the third quarter when Hanover started chipping away.

The Indians first cut the lead to 43-40 with 3:27 left in the quarter, but Cohasset hung tough, taking a 48-43 lead into the fourth quarter.

Hanover caught up with 6:48 left at 49-49. The rest of the game went back and forth until Hanover's Jake Lambert hit an off-balance jumper right as the shot clock expired with 26 seconds left in the game for a 59-58 lead.

Hanover added a free throw, and Cohasset missed a final three-pointer at the buzzer.

"It's another two-point loss to Hanover," Cohasset coach Bo Ruggiero said. "They beat us by one earlier in the year. We just find ways to lose. I've seen more bizarre endings to games (this season) than I have my whole career. We had the ball. We just couldn't get the job done."

Ruggiero said close losses have been too frequent this year.

"We had Hanover by two," he said. "We beat Carver by ten last week. We lost to Hull in overtime, Mashpee by three. We played three solid periods against Norwell, lost by four in overtime against Harwich, Mashpee in overtime at home, Hanover by one point, Harwich at Harwich by two. If we had any luck it would be bad luck."

Still Cohasset showed fight against Hanover, maybe a bit too much.

In what turned into a very physical game, Cohasset found itself called for fouls too often.

Former Sci-Co's headed to next level

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Two former Scituate/Cohasset Youth Football players will be moving to the next level, signing letters to play college football.

Scituate's Ryan McCourt and Kevin Barbary will both be in action next year.

McCourt, who played his high school football at B.C. High, is headed to Brown, and Barbary, who played at Milton Academy, will head to Williams College in Williamstown, Mass.

McCourt, who played offensive tackle and guard, was a two-year starter and captain for the Eagles will be playing in the Shriners game in the summer, and has a Super Bowl championship on his resume.

"I got a lot of attention from Div. 1 schools," McCourt said. "I turned down a five-year ride to UNH to go to Brown. It's one of the best schools in the country. Academics are very important to me. By the end of my junior year I was getting a lot of calls and letters from schools in the area. I had a lot of attention from B.C., URI and all of the Ivy's. I fell in love with Brown when I took my visit."

McCourt said his biggest interest is history and archeology, areas he may look into majoring in at Brown.

On the football side, he said one thing he likes is the big stadium and chances to play teams like Harvard and other non-Ivy League teams.

At B.C., he said a highlight was winning a Super Bowl.

"That was the greatest feeling in the world," McCourt said. "Playing at Gillette was incredible. It's a whole different feeling than playing anywhere else."

McCourt is in good company in moving to the next level. Several members of his team are headed to big schools, including Andrew Tallman, who is headed to the University of Miami. Another teammate, A.J. Okerke is going to Cornell, where he will probably face McCourt on the field at some point.

Last year's captain at B.C. is at Harvard.

"I'm excited," McCourt said. "From where I live Brown is only a few hours away. It's close to home, but far enough away to grow on my own."

Barbary, meanwhile, played cornerback and wide receiver at Milton Academy and was also a team captain.

"We won our NEPSAC Bowl game last season," Barbary said. "We were the champs."

Like McCourt, Barbary chose his school for the academics first.

"It has a really good academic reputation," he said, adding that there are no athletic scholarships at the school. That's important. I'm not sure what I'm going to major in, but it might be economics."

When McCourt decided on Milton Academy, it was in the days when the Scituate football team was still an afterthought, before the revival of the past few seasons.

"Back then, Scituate was a mess," he said. "Milton Academy had a good football program."

Still, having been a Sci-Co player, he's happy to see Scituate come to life.

"I have friends that play there," he said. "They have good young players like Wes (Hawkins), Tyler (Park) and (Casey) Burns who should turn it around."

At Williams, a NESCAC team, Barbary expects to play cornerback against teams like Amherst, Tufts, Bowdoin and Trinity.

"I'm excited and a little nervous," he said. "I know a few people who play there. John McKenna is from Cohasset. He played Sci-Co football. Having him there will help."

Both players credit their years with the Youth Football for helping them get where they are today.

"I played six years," Barbary said. "It gave me a foundation in the sport. Learning the fundamentals at a young age helped."

McCourt echoed the sentiment.

"I was a Shark," he said. "Ever since Pop Warner I've been in love with the game. The coaches laid down the foundation. I have a lot of good memories."

win.

At 215, Alex Kinnealey finished fourth.

"He was seeded fifth and took fourth," Sweeney said. "He had a good one in the quarterfinal. He beat a good kid from Canton (Darrius Woods). He wrestled a great tournament."

At 135, Derek Froio came in seeded fifth and finished third.

"Derek's quarterfinal match was against a Canton kid (Mark Kisil)," Sweeney said. "He had lost to him 6-2 the week before. He beat him 5-4 on Saturday. Derek took him down in the third period with about 20 seconds left for the win."

In that match, it took some strategy when Cohasset gave up a point early in the third period so Froio would have a better chance.

"We though the Canton kid would wait for an escape point, so we let him up early," Sweeney said. "That was our strategy. It's not uncommon, but it doesn't always work. This time it did."

Graden Foley qualified at 130.

"He's been going back and forth between 125 and 130," Sweeney said. "Me and my assistant Pete Buckley, who has been with me going on 15 years had discussed the kids at 125 and 130 and felt that Graden had some good wins over kids at 130, so we decided to put him there. He finished 3-2. His losses were to the No. 1 seed and the No. 3 seed. He wrestled great."

In 112 action, sophomore Gus Helbock finished second, getting to the finals, where he lost 1-0 to Canton's Kyle Forte.

"Gus lost a great match," Sweeney said. "He was close. He just couldn't score to tie it. He also had a good match to get to the finals."

Helbock had a good season, heading in with a 22-7 record overall, 18-3 in 112 pound matches. He wrestled some matches at 119 this season.

Other wrestlers fared well.

Justin Yeager lost his quarterfinal match, but fought back to finish fifth and give himself a chance to wrestle as an alternate at 160, and Matt Brooks won two matches at 189.

Sweeney is excited about hosting the tournament.

"We've had a great week of practice," he said Wednesday night. "Tomorrow we have practice then we set up the mats. It's a chore, but a fun one for me. It's great to be at the pinnacle of Div. 3 wrestling. The last time we hosted we had three State Champs. This time we have eight kids in it. We'll have some fun with it."

Wrestling goes Friday from noon to 8 p.m., then resumes with semifinal action on Saturday at 10 a.m.

Concessions will be plentiful, with help from the football team.

Crough, along with Kelly, helped the soccer team to a sectional title two seasons ago and Lehr went to the State Meet for track and field in the spring. She also played lacrosse and plans to play tennis in the spring.

Together, the trio were part of Cohasset's State Championship basketball team from two years back.

Last year they were within a second of another sectional title before losing to Millis on a buzzer-beater.

Some teams would sulk about that.

Not this group.

Instead, that loss is motivation and learning.

Kelly, for instance, remembers that game as one of her favorite athletic memories.

Not the outcome, but the way the team battled and got within a game of another shot at a title.

"My favorite is winning the State Championship as a sophomore," she said. "We had no seniors on the team when we won. It was great. Last year we lost a heartbreaker. The way we lost gave us motivation this season. We were one game from the Garden. We were so close. We wanted it so bad."

Kelly said the final shot by Millis is something they don't want to happen again – to anybody.

"It was boxing out," she said. "We didn't box out. We worked on that yesterday in practice. We'll probably see Millis again. It's becoming a little like a rivalry thing. We beat them the first time. They beat us last year."

Lehr agreed.

"We learned from that game," she said. "Having a trip to the Garden taken away at the last second was heartbreaking."

Crough also wants another shot, but isn't looking too far ahead.

"I think we're even more focused on one game at a time," she said. "But we want to get to the Garden again. We're going to go all out. Right now we're looking at our scrimmage against Oliver Ames."

While a State Championship is the ultimate goal, first and foremost for this team, they are extremely proud of the 20-0 record they compiled during the regular season.

"It means a lot to us," Lehr said of their regular season. "We've worked hard for it. It was an accomplishment. There aren't words that can describe 20-0. It's just proof of our hard work every day.'"

All three are quick to credit their teammates for the team's success.

"We only lost three seniors from last year," Kelly said. "The bench from last year is playing more. Even though there are only five starters, we have eight or nine who could start. I think we have the deepest bench in the league. It helps. It keeps us fresh down the stretch."

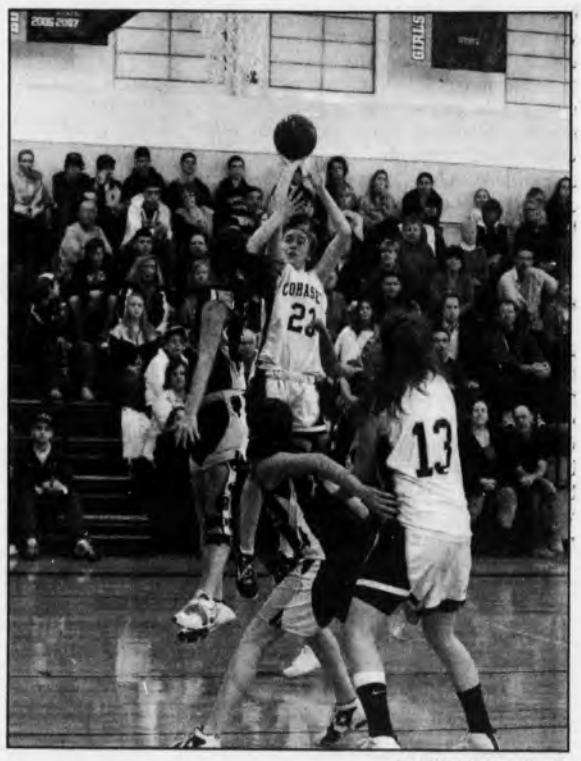
"This season meant a lot," Crough said. "Everyone on the team really wants to win. We work really hard in practice. We go two hours as hard as we can to get everything done."

As leaders, the three seniors have a similar plan.

"We just try to keep everyone focused," Crough said. "All three of us work hard to make sure everyone knows their part and to keep everyone in line. It isn't that hard. Everyone is well rounded and knows what's expected of them. All of us (seniors) have experience in the tournament. Me, Meredith, Tori, we've been to the tournament. We've won it. The freshmen and sophomores have seen what we've gone through and what's at stake, what's ahead."

One thing that has made this team so deadly is versatility.

Every player can score points, defend, and are able to switch things up at a moment's notice.



"We go game-by-game on the way we play," Crough said. "If there's one player on another team that's their big scorer, we might try to shut them down. We like to take control early. If someone is playing a fast paced game, we might play to slow them down. If a team is slower, we might run the ball. Everybody contributes."

Lehr, who plans to play at St. Anselm College in New Hampshire next year, echoed the thought.

"We play solid defense and have the offense to back it up," she said. "We really have the athleticism to run with any team or slow it down. We enjoy that."

Crough said she's not worried about headlines. She just wants to help her team.

"I know what I do is important," she said. "Passes assists. As long as I help the team."

PHOTOS/LAURA SINCLAIR
Cohasset senior Samantha Crough helped lead the Skippers to a 20-0 regular season.

Cohasset senior Tori Lehr helped lead the Skippers to a 20-0 regular season.

Lehr said the seniors have come a long way.

"In our freshman year we were 50-50 all season," she said. "Then we lost a couple of seniors and had no idea how things would work out. We won the State Championship that year."

Lehr said the group has had a lot of help from coach John LeVangie and his staff.

"As players we're pretty good," she said. "But without a solid coaching staff to guide us we wouldn't be that good. They really help us a lot. It's nice to have that."

For Lehr, the title was her career highlight, and she's hoping for another.

"Being on the Garden floor with the team and winning was amazing," Lehr said. "It felt like being a Celtics player. I think this year we have even more confidence. That year we didn't have high expectations."

Crough said her team is ready to roll.

"We're excited. Really excited," she said. "The whole team is ready to go. We can't wait anymore.

Seeding will be announced this afternoon.

"(Greg) Devine was five-of-eight from the free throw line," Ruggiero said. "The size differential and strength differential was big. They pounded us on the boards. They took 27 free throws. We had some unacceptable fouls. I give credit to them. They did a nice job to come back."

Ruggiero was pleased with some aspects of the game.

"Kyrel Jaundoo (11 points) had an outstanding game," he said. "Sam Richardson had 16. Robert Jones had 19. That lifted the team."

FRESH START with Lucie Rice – Part 4 Strength Training for Adults

What is strength training?

Strength training, also known as resistance training, weight training and lifting weights, is a simple process of stressing targeted muscles through the use of resistance or weight in such a way as to produce increased muscle growth and strength. Bodybuilding and power lifting are also types of strength training but are not the type that most adults will ever need or consider doing.

Is it really necessary to do if I am already active and getting in my "cardio"?

The general recommendations are to strength train 2 or more times per week on non-consecutive days. As both men and women age, without some type of resistance training, they will lose strength. The weakness may become more apparent earlier if you have been sedentary from childhood We used to think loss of strength was a natural and unavoidable part of the aging process. Now we know that while some strength loss is unavoidable, adequate strength can be maintained well into later life (80s+).

Can I strength train without going to a club or gym?

Yes. I have a client who is in great shape and does all his training at home (actually in his dorm room). Remember strength training can be done with machines, free weights (dumbbells and barbells), resistance cords, and bodyweight (i.e. push ups). The videos on the website show many exercises that can be done at home for beginner, intermediate and advanced.

I have never strength trained and have been inactive for many years, where should I start?

First, speak with you doctor and make sure you are ready for exercise, especially if you have health issues, are older, or overweight/obese. The Fresh Start beginner videos show simple exercises you can do to ease into strength training – at first some are done with little or no weight. Everybody who is new to strength training should go slowly. I encourage all my clients to take 2-4 weeks to allow their body to acclimate to this new activity by going especially gently. I find that most people have "weak links" or areas of greater weakness. Hence, it is best to slowly build a base of strength.

At first how many repetitions and sets should I do?

One set of 8-12 repetitions for each major muscle group is a good way to start. This means you will do whatever exercise you have chosen 8-12 times which will be one set. Over time you can increase this to 2 sets.

How do I know how much weight to use?

You should choose a weight that you can lift for 8-12 times and by the final repetition you feel that you could not do too many more. You should be able to lift this weight with good form which means your posture is straight and you can control the weight throughout the movement.

How long should I wait between sets?

Wait 1-2 minutes/or until you feel ready to continue.

How quickly should I lift the weight?

One repetition ought to take around 5-7 seconds to complete, which will feel slow for many people. The point is to keep that muscle working continually for 60 seconds or so (i.e. 12 repetitions of 5 seconds).

How many exercises should I do?

Eventually, you should work all major muscle groups. If you want to go at a slower pace, you could start with 3-4 exercises and then build to 8-10. I encourage my clients to remember to work the upper body (chest, shoulders, upper back, and arms), the core (lower back, abdominals/obliques) and lower body (gluteals/buttocks, quadriceps/front of thigh and hamstrings/back of thigh).

I have osteoporosis/osteopenia (early stage bone density loss). Can strength training help me with this?

Strength training is one of the key ways to maintain bone density. This is a common problem among post-menopausal women in particular, though it is increasing among men especially as life expectancy has increased. Strength training can both reduce bone density loss and modestly build bone density though it must be done in conjunction with adequate nutrition and in some cases with medication. It is best to have this evaluated by your physician who can best direct your care.

Personal trainer Lucie Rice answers questions about strength training this week

What are the biggest mistakes you see people make when strength training?

Common mistakes are using too much weight or using too little weight. As always I think first about function. Over time you should be lifting enough weight to facilitate the life activities you engage in or wish to engage in. If you have a 27 pound son or grandson who likes to jump into your arms, it would be a good idea to be able to life 27 pounds plus! Some people however lift too much weight. You can see this occur when they start swinging their bodies in awkward ways in an attempt to move a too large weight. I often say use "muscle not momentum". You should be able to control whatever weight you are lifting through a full range of motion or it is too heavy

I have heard about techniques such as high intensity training, split routines, plyometrics and other new training techniques for athletes, should I try these things?

When I work with athletes, bodybuilders, and others seeking special purpose strength training we often use these techniques. I reserve the higher intensity training methods for those with the physical capability to do so, the wish to do so, and the understanding of increased risk of injury due to some of these techniques. For many athletes and other wishing to perform or work at the highest levels these techniques are often valuable.

Go to www.wickedlocal.com and look for the Fresh Start tab at the top of the page to read the complete transcript of this article as well as Lucie's other articles and to watch video of many of the exercise mentioned above.

It's all or nothing

FROM HOCKEY, PAGE 17

Goetz, one of the league's leading scorers, has dazzled opponents all season long with his tremendous stickhandling and playmaking abilities.

Rockland came back strong and eventually took the lead at the end of the first period, 2-1.

Andy McKenna tied the game at two, only to have Rockland respond with two quick strikes to increase their lead to 4-2.

The third period had both teams flying, with numerous scoring opportunities.

It wasn't until sophomore John Collins intercepted an errant clearing pass and patiently skated to the slot and ripped a wrist shot to the top corner to close the gap to one.

Cohasset pulled netminder Jack Nelson in the final few minutes and dominated the play, but it was to no avail as the Rockland goalie slammed the door shut for a 4-3 win.

The Skippers had to get over that disappointment quickly as they faced off against an even tougher opponent in Division 2 Mansfield, Tuesday afternoon at the Bog in Kingston.

Mansfield had beaten the Skippers handily earlier in the season and were in for quite a shock as the boys played with desperation and took a quick 2-1 lead off of two strikes by senior Andy McKenna, assisted both times by linemate Anders Goetz.

Mansfield stormed back as Cohasset tried in vain to kill off some untimely penalties and had to head to the locker room down 3-2 after the first period.

The second period was a defensive battle with limited scoring opportunities as Skippers defensemen Brian Scott and Sean McKenna did a great job in neutralizing a very potent Mansfield offense.

Sophomore Travers Craven had a terrific game as he narrowly missed tying the game up on several occasions. Mansfield made it a 4-2 contest at the end of the second period with beautiful give and go one timer that goaltender Jack Nelson never had a chance on.

The third period was a tug of war as both teams played a strong defensive game and didn't allow for many quality scoring chances.

In what must have seemed a case of déjà vu, the Skippers again pulled their goalie with just under two minutes remaining. Again and again the Skippers blasted shots on net and with just under a minute remaining senior Connor Queenan was able to bang one home to make it a one goal deficit 4-3.

After a timeout and with their goalie still pulled, the Skippers tried in vain for that elusive point only to be denied again for a hard fought 4-3 loss.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

Keeping Camp Budget Friendly

Most families over the last couple of years have become extremely budget conscious. And, like many, you've probably taken some steps to curb any big spending, or you've begun cutting the nonessential "fat" from your budget. But one childhood joy that may still be within reach is a life-changing summer camp experience.

It isn't necessary to break the bank to provide a life-changing camp experience for your child. Camps often offer scholarships or other financial aid.

It's important when doing your research not to rule out any camp. The critical issue is choosing the camp that's the best fit for your child. Go about the search process the same way you get references for anything else. Once you've developed your list of potential camps, ask if they offer financial aid and how to apply. Camp websites are each different; but if you search carefully, you'll find information about navigating the financial aid application process.

Bette Bussel, executive director of ACA, New England does caution against waiting too long to do your research. "The sooner families apply to various camps the better, because there are limited scholarship dollars." Financial aid options and cost effective fees put camp within reach for many families.

Additional Resources

If you're just beginning your search for financial aid to send your child to camp, here are some resources to consider contacting; they might give scholarships themselves or offer advice on where else you can look:

- Check with your church or synagogue.
- Get in touch with social services groups and child serving non-profit organizations in your community.
- Explore local funding streams with your town and school system.
- Visit individual camp websites. Most of them clearly outline whether or not they offer financial assistance for their campers and how to apply.

Provided by the American Camp Association, New England, the region's leading source for "all things summer camp." Additional camp search resources available online:

One of Onne van der Wal's stunning photographs. According to Focus Gallery owner, Cindy Vallino, "Onne's not only an incredible photographer, but a great speaker. The stories he tells are as amazing as the photographs!"

Nautical photographer visits Focus Gallery

On Sunday, Feb. 21 from 3 to 5 p.m. renowned nautical, sailing and yacht photographer, Onne van der Wal, will make a return visit to the Focus Gallery in Cohasset. Van der Wal will give a presentation titled "High Latitudes" – a visual journey showing images from his recent photographic expeditions to remote high latitude areas, as far north as Spitsbergen in the Norwegian Artic and as far south as Antarctica. The presentation will include images of sailing in and around these regions as well as the native wildlife, raging oceans, fishing and the flora and fauna that make these areas so photographically stunning. Van der Wal will also discuss his unique experience in 2003 photographing an epic journey to retrace the steps of Sir Ernest Shackleton on the Island of South Georgia in the Falkland Islands.

Van der Wal's photographs have been featured in countless publications and in advertising materials for a long list of clients. His fine art photographs are in numerous private and public collections around the world. He has also received the sponsorship by CANON as a Canon "Explorer of Light" – a recognition given to only 50 photographers in the world.

According to Focus Gallery owner, Cindy Vallino, "Onne's not only an incredible photographer, but a great speaker. The stories he tells are as amazing as the photographs!" The slideshow presentation on Feb. 21 will begin at 3 p.m. at the Dillon Gallery at the South Shore Art Center, followed by a reception and show of Van der Wal's fine art photography at the Focus Gallery directly across the street. Tickets are $15 per person and may be purchased at the gallery at 15 Depot Court, or by calling 781-383-0663. Vallino encourages families to come – "Onne's presentation would be of interest to all ages, and may be the perfect finish to the winter school break."

The Focus Gallery specializes in fine art photographic prints by a number of regional and internationally recognized photographers, including Mr. Van der Wal. More details about the High Latitudes presentation may be found at www.thefocusgallery.com.

Rolling out the yoga mat

Balance Studio hosts Haiti benefit

Dr. Paul Cotter, a Cohasset resident will describe his work with CRUDEM, an organization designed to support the largest private hospital in Haiti, Hospital Sacre Coeur.

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Attention all yogis!! On Friday, Feb. 26th the Balance Studio in Cohasset is rolling out a welcome mat — yoga of course — for all those who want to see the benefits of their yoga practice extend beyond themselves, all the way to Haiti. 100 percent of the proceeds of this very special fundraiser will go to Partners In Health (www.pih.org) and CRUDEM (www.crudem.org).

This unique fundraiser will go from 6:30 to 10 p.m. and involves more than yoga. It will be an evening to inspire…beginning with guest speaker Dr. Paul Cotter. Dr. Cotter, a Cohasset resident will describe his work with CRUDEM, an organization designed to support the largest private hospital in Haiti, Hospital Sacre Coeur.

Dr. Cotter's talk will be followed by 10 minutes of meditation focused on all those in Haiti, and a 90-minute warm Vinyasa practice. The yoga will be taught by a number of Balance Studio teachers who will each take a turn leading students through a series of 108 sun salutations and assisting them with their postures. This portion of the evening has limited space...so sign up early!

At 8:30, after yoga, all are invited (yogis and non-yogis alike) to a catered party to include chair massages, henna tattoos, and a silent auction. The auction items are so fantastic they are guaranteed to open wallets, just as the inspiring session of yoga will open hearts and minds to the needs of the people of Haiti as they cope with the aftermath of the devastating earthquake.

Balance Studio is pleased to have the support of 5 South Main, Bia Bistro, Red Lion Inn and Derby Street Wine & Spirits among local caterers and merchants providing wine and food. Silent auction event partners include some of the following: a Maine Coast Weekend Getaway, Cut River Gallery, Derby Street Wine & Spirits, DeScenza Diamonds, EK Designs, Jen Kelly Fine Art, Lululemon Athletica, Mariposa Massage and Body Therapy, Melissa Bomeisler Photography, Ports, REI, Sage Stones, SeaLore Designs (specially commissioned Haiti necklace), and Toast Restaurant. Bidding for the silent auction opens TODAY (at Balance Studio) and items will be on display for the entire week leading up to the event.

Donation for the evening is $75 for one Yogi, $100 for two. $35 for post-yoga festivities only. Tickets may be purchased at Balance Studio or online at www.balancestudiocohasset.com.

Summer Xtreme program for middle school students

Cohasset Recreation Department announces its Summer Xtreme program, which is available to middle school students. Summer Xtreme has students entering grades six through nine traveling to field trip destinations around the region, ranging from theme parks and paintball fields to outings such as the Codzilla thrill ride out of Long Wharf, Boston, which will be paired with an IMAX movie.

With a $99/week fee, Cohasset Recreation Department is bridging the gap many parents face each summer, the gap between the quality and affordability of summer programs. "This program fills that void where it offers the bests of both worlds; providing the kids the independence they are looking for while hanging out with new and old friends, but most importantly for parents it is in a fun and safe atmosphere," said Carroll.

What's in store this summer?

Week one: June 28 through July 1: Paintball and Nantasket Beach.

Week two: July 5 through 8: Ice skating and Six Flags.

Week three: July 12 through 15: Morton's Pond and Starland.

Week four: July 19 through 22: Water Wizz and Lazer Zone.

Week five: July 26 through 29: Kayaking and Codzilla.

Week six: Aug. 2 through 5: Paw Sox and Boston Bowl and Billiards.

Week seven: Aug. 9 through 12, Pat's Training Camp and Deep Sea Fishing.

The program meets four days a week at Cohasset High School, Monday through Thursday, with field trips on Tuesdays and Thursdays. On Mondays and Wednesdays, the group of about 45 middle school students will participate in various sports, crafts, challenges, team builders and social activities. The program is supervised by counselors and directors with many years of experience working with children.

Director of the program Michael Curtin has been a middle school teacher at Atlantic Middle School for 15 years teaching math, science and technology. Curtin has worked for Quincy Recreation for 20 years, running gyms and after school programs. He also acted as sports specialist during summer recreation in Quincy. Curtin was co-recreational director for three summers at Great Harbors Resident Association in Falmouth where he operated the swimming pool, organized activities for adults and children and ran tournaments. He is the father of two girls.

Assistant director of the program, Michael Barra, has been involved in recreation departments on the South Shore for the past decade. Barra enjoys all forms of outdoor activity and engages in kayaking, mountain biking, snowboarding, hiking with his golden retriever and tent camping in his free time.

To register, call Cohasset Recreation Department at 781-383-4109 or email recreation@townofcohasset.org. Applications are available online at www.cohassetrec.com.

Social Service League to award local grants

The Social Service League of Cohasset announces that it is now accepting grant applications through March 1. Working with community leaders, the Social Service League directs the majority of its giving through local grants that address pressing needs in the communities it serves. . The primary areas of focus are elder service programs, teen safety programs and families in crisis.

Local grants are accepted on a rolling basis and awarded twice annually. Grant applications submitted by the March 1 deadline will be reviewed by the League, voted on by its board of directors and awarded in May.

To be considered for funding, qualified non-profit organizations must fill out a Local Grant Application, found on the League's website at www.socialserviceleagueofcohasset.org. Organizations seeking funding must operate in at least one of the League's designated South Shore communities and provide direct assistance to people in need within at least one of its areas of focus.

Circuit Breaker

The state Circuit Breaker law allows homeowners, 65 or over, who meet certain income eligibility requirements to apply for a state income tax credit of up to $960. The qualifying home value has been reduced to $788,000 for the year 2009.

The Circuit Breaker allows elderly homeowners to get a refundable state tax credit if their local property tax, sewer, and water bills exceed more than 10 percent of their income. Elderly renters can also take advantage of this law if their tax, sewer, and water bills exceed 25 percent of their annual income. To figure out how much the state may refund to you, get a copy of State Income Tax Schedule CB at the public library or call 1-800-392-6089 and press 1 to wait for an agent.

Even if you owe no state taxes, you can get back up to $960. To qualify for this credit, you must be a Massachusetts resident, age 65 or older, and own or rent residential property in Massachusetts as your primary residence. In addition, your annual income must be less than $51,000 if you are a single filer who is not the head of household, or less than $64,000 if you are the head of household, or less than $77,000 for taxpayers filing jointly.

You can claim up to three years retroactively by contacting the Department of Revenue, so you may be eligible to receive a check for up to $3,490. If you go to a professional tax preparer, make sure to ask them to calculate your Circuit Breaker property Tax credit.

Atlantica Restaurant, Harbor Inn help Haiti

The tips raised were $503 and Atlantica is matching the number raised to bring the total to $1,006 to be donated to the UN World Food Program to benefit Haiti.

The management team of the Cohasset Harbor Resort hosted its annual friends and family party on Jan. 31.

Guests dined on exquisite entrees and desserts which included beef tenderloin carving station, baked stuffed sole, South American inspired taco and fajita station and a sundae bar complete with all the toppings.

Director of special events Michelle Scully said "it's always nice to show our staff, loyal customers and clients that we appreciate them". Michelle worked hard organizing this event with a guest list exceeding 200 friends and family members throughout the South Shore.

Of the many exquisite dishes served and compliments of gratitude received nothing was greater than the large helping for Haiti generated by all the gratuities earned at the bar throughout the evening.

The tips raised were $503 and Atlantica is matching the number raised to bring the total to $1,006 to be donated to the UN World Food Program to benefit Haiti.

Dining, Friends & Family served with a large helping for Haiti made this year's Friends of Atlantica Restaurant & Cohasset Harbor Inn party feel all that much more important.

Quilt show, luncheon benefits high risk children

Tickets are available for $15 by calling the Second Congregational Church at 781-383-9474 or by sending a self addressed stamped envelope to the church at 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 with your check.

The calendar may say spring begins on March 20, but it comes three weeks earlier at Second Congregational Church in Cohasset with the 16th benefit Quilt Show and Luncheon from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. March 6.

The sanctuary comes alive with more than 60 quilts gently draped over the pews. Each has a story to tell with names like Grandma's Stripping in the Garden, Third Time's the Charm!, Iris Fantasy, Sailor Boy or The Amusing Adult Alphabet. Waiters in a white table clothed dining room appointed with flowers serve the luncheon.

Tickets are available for $15 by calling the Second Congregational Church at 781-383-9474 or by sending a self addressed stamped envelope to the church at 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 with your check. Reservations for groups of four or more are accepted for specific luncheon seatings, each half hour, by contacting the church.

All proceeds benefit The Spark Center in Mattapan serving some of Boston's most high risk children: those living with complicated medical conditions as well as those with significant family or social concerns. The entire event is handicap accessible.

Take part in police survey

In an effort to identify the needs of our community, the Cohasset Police Department has linked a survey to its web page at: www.cohassetpolice.com

Please take a few minutes and complete the survey. For those who do not have computer access, copies of the survey will be placed at Cohasset Police Station and Town Hall. Additionally, each police car will have copies of the survey and officers would be glad to drop off and pick up surveys from your home.

For those who do not have computer access, copies of the survey will be placed at Cohasset Police Station and Town Hall.

You can call the Cohasset Police Department at 781-383-1212.

Cohasset Police issue monthly report

CHS juniors assisting with projects

Three of the students are working a community service project and the fourth is assisting the chief of police and patrol commander in developing a department mission statement.

Special projects/achievements / innovations:

In early January, Town Manager William Griffin announced that Mark M. DeLuca would lead the Cohasset Police Department as the new Chief of Police. Chief DeLuca was welcomed to the department by Brian W. Noonan, Interim Chief of Police. Chief DeLuca and Chief Noonan worked together throughout January to ensure a smooth change in command, which took place on Jan. 25.

The Executive Office of Public Safety and Security announced that the Cohasset Police Department was awarded a grant through the Statewide Emergency Telecommunication Board for $21,932. This grant will be used to defray costs associated with running a 9-1-1 center. This grant was written and applied for by Sergeant Jeffrey Treanor, the midnight to 8 a.m. shift commander.

Chief DeLuca appointed Police Officer Regen Steverman as the department's elder affairs liaison. Officer Steverman will work with Cohasset Elder Affairs and provide outreach, support and crime prevention training, to senior residents.

Police officers Patrick Reardon, Daniel Williams and Jay St Ives, all members of the Cohasset Police Department's warrant apprehension team, conducted warrant sweeps during January throughout the South Shore. These officers track and arrest offenders that have failed to respond to multiple notices to appear from the criminal courts.

The department is currently hosting four Cohasset High School juniors. Three of the students are working a community service project and the fourth is assisting the chief of police and patrol commander in developing a department mission statement. These students will work with the department through the spring.

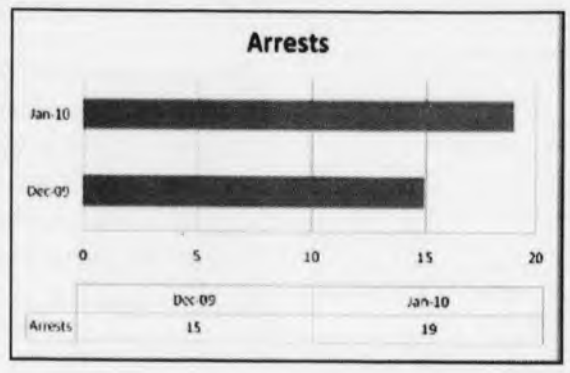
Monthly activities:

Patrol Division - Cases of Interest:

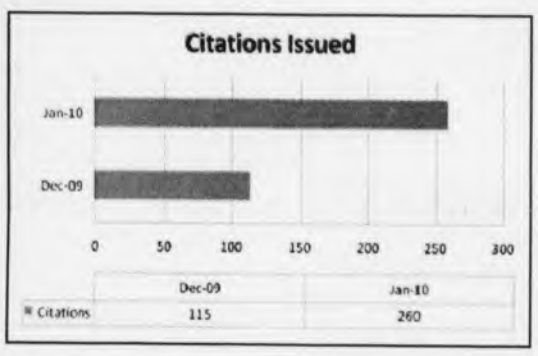
• On Jan. 5, at about 4:30 p.m., police officers were dispatched to Shaw's Supermarket on Route 3A to investigate a male that was passed out near the entrance of the store. Officers encountered a 46-year-old Scituate male who had stolen and ingested a quantity of vanilla extract. This male was placed under arrest and held at the Cohasset Police station. He was charged with shoplifting.

• On Jan. 8, at about 12:15 p.m., police officers were dispatched to Stop & Shop Supermarket on Route 3A for a report of larceny from a person. On scene officers were met by the victim, a 42-year-old female from Cohasset. The victim reported that a male had stolen her purse from her shopping cart. Detectives and patrol officers reviewed security footage and through investigation were able to identify a suspect. The suspect, a 32-year-old male from Hull, was later interviewed by detectives and gave a full confession.

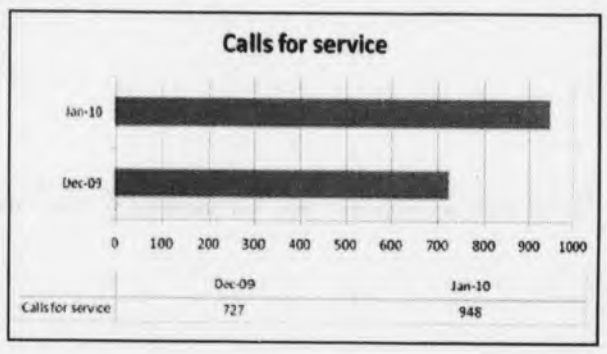
• On Jan. 13, at about 2:20 p.m., police officers responded to a Ripley Road business to investigate a dispute between a landlord and tenant. During the course of the investigation, the business owner disclosed that his business partner had threatened to "shoot him in the head" and "burn his building down." As a result of those threats, a 47-year-old Scituate female was summonsed to court for threats to commit a crime.



• On Jan. 15, at about 9 a.m., officers took a report of an attempted breaking and entering to a commercial building on King Street. The owner reported that person or persons unknown broke a plate glass window and attempted to enter the store. No merchandise was stolen and the case remains under investigation by CID.



Training:



Police Officer Regen Steverman attended a two-day class on methamphetamine labs and drug interdiction.

Annual in-service training, which includes updates in criminal and motor vehicle law, as well as recertification in CPR and First Responder training, is being completed throughout the winter for all sworn personnel.

Ongoing training is being conducted at roll call regarding the department's revised evidence policies.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MARCH 1, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Having second thoughts could be a good thing, even if you're determined to go through with your plans. You might find it worthwhile to take a fresh look at how things have been set up.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Financial matters could continue to be a problem until you're able to straighten out some of the more pesky situations. Once that happens, the rest should be easier to unsnarl.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Family matters once again take center stage, and should be dealt with competently and quickly. And, again, insist on others taking on their fair share of the responsibilities.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your creative pursuits seem to be running into a roadblock. But rather than blame outside factors, look within to see if you might be holding back your efforts for some reason.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Keep that keen Cat's Eye focused on relevant aspects of this new situation in your life. Don't be distracted by trivial matters. You need the pertinent facts before making a decision.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) As much as you prefer doing things on your own, continue to accept help if you still need to resolve the problem affecting your project. Some cheerful news is about to come your way.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) While you might begrudge the added time it will take to get your project from point A to B to C, etc., you could benefit from the facts that will emerge over this expanded time span.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Regarding your workplace suggestions, be prepared to produce the facts to counter reactions from skeptics who feel your approach is unreasonable or even impossible.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Savvy Sagittarians will look for work-related answers on their own rather than rely on unproved assumptions. It might take more time to do so, but the payoff is worth it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your aspects continue to favor family issues, with special emphasis this week on changes in and around your home. Get everyone to suggest what he or she would like to see done.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A matter you thought had been settled might still produce surprises. Best advice: Continue to gather facts to bolster your position just in case you need to produce them quickly.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) While your instincts are usually right when discerning 'twixt truth and deception, you could benefit from doing more research on the new "prospect" that you've been pitched.

BORN THIS WEEK: Your wisdom is only matched by your generosity, making you the sort of friend everyone hopes to have.

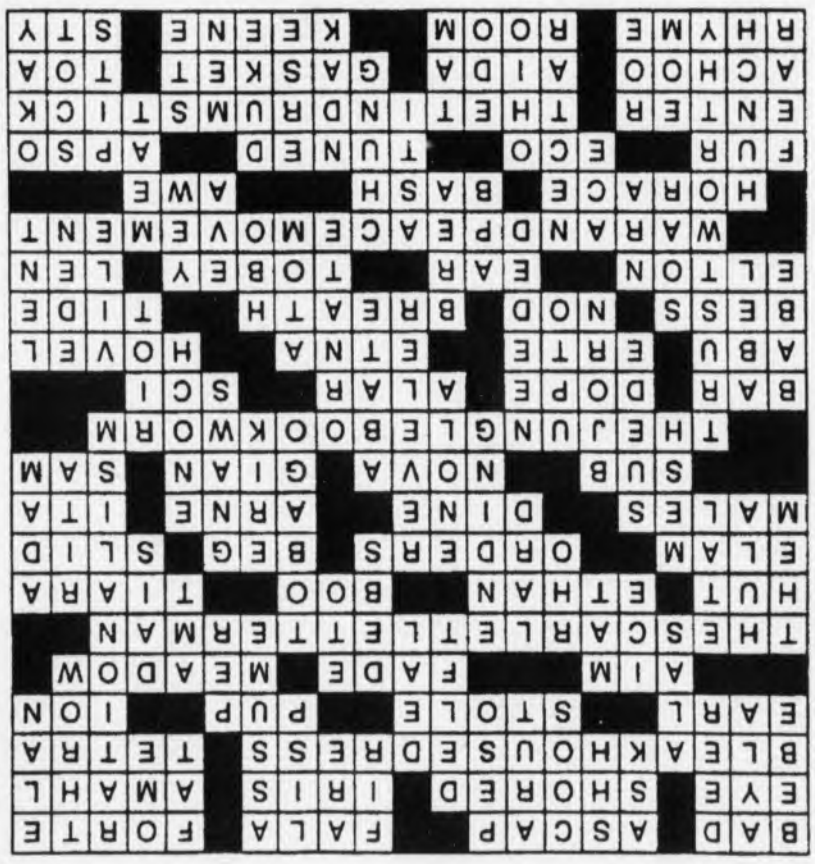
Fun By The Numbers



Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Level: Moderate

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Award-winning jazz quartet coming to Cohasset

Syncopation, an award-winning vocal jazz quartet based in Boston, will perform an all a cappella show at First Parish Cohasset at 4 pm on Sunday, Feb. 21. . Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

You may recognize Syncopation from this past year's Boston Pops Fourth of July performance at the Hatch Shell, where they were the featured guests. These four singer/musicians have performed across the United States at notable events like the Tanglewood Jazz Festival, The Tri-C Vocal Jazz Festival, The Boston Globe Jazz Festival, and The Meihou Music Festival. The group regularly tours Japan. They are also the winners of the 2008 Annual Boston Harmony Sweepstakes A Cappella Festival.

The Boston Globe describes Syncopation as "the 21st Century Manhattan Transfer or Lambert, Hendricks & Ross," and it is easy to see why. Like those legendary top-notch vocal groups, Syncopation performs jazz and pop music that is timeless, up-to-the-minute and arranged with killer tight vocal harmonies.

Syncopation, an award-winning vocal jazz quartet based in Boston, will perform an all a cappella show at First Parish Cohasset at 4 pm on Sunday, Feb. 21.

You may recognize Syncopation from this past year's Boston Pops Fourth of July performance at the Hatch Shell, where they were the featured guests.

Syncopation's distinctive style reflects bebop, Latin, and pop influences. The group usually performs with a band, but their a cappella performances are equally exhilarating. They were formed in Boston in January of 2002 and mentored by the great Cheryl Bentyne of the Manhattan Transfer.

Syncopation is: soprano Aubrey Logan, alto Christine Fawson, tenor David Thorne Scott and bass Tsunenori "Lee" Abe (who also is the group's arranger/composer). More information about the group, including bios of the musicians, can be found at www.jazzsyncopation.com.

"We try to have something for everyone," says David Thorne Scott. "When we perform with a band, we each play horns; two trumpets, two trombones. Our a cappella shows draw from jazz, pop and world music." Christine Fawson adds, "We don't think of ourselves as an a cappella group. We are a versatile vocal group that sometimes performs without instruments!"

Syncopation's performance schedule this spring includes performances at high schools (Belmont and Hopkinton), jazz clubs (Ryles in Cambridge, MA and the Hi-Hat in Providence, RI), and concert halls (Merrimack College in North Andover, MA and Chelmsford Performing Arts Center in Chelmsford, MA).

Aubrey Logan took top honors in the 2009 Montreux Jazz Festival vocal competition. Lee Abe's book of arrangements was recently published by Yamaha Music.

For more information about the concert, please contact Allegra Martin at (617) 872-0461.

Gulf Association reaffirms Marshland Hunting Regulations

At the February meeting of the board of the Gulf Association the problem of hunting in the Gulf River marshes in both Scituate and Cohasset was discussed. On two occasions, October 2009 and December 2010, two hunters were observed shooting waterfowl along the Gulf River.

On the first occasion hunters were situated on the Cohasset side of the marsh. Cohasset Police were called and went forward with an investigation of the hunting issue. Hunters were allowed to remain on that occasion as they were viewed to be more than 500 feet from any dwellings. Upon further review of the situation, the police and environmental officer became aware of zoning article 47 that was passed by vote of Town Meeting in April 1978. Article 47 stipulates that there is no hunting allowed on the Cohasset side of the Gulf River Marsh. Further, it was learned that the Town of Scituate had also outlawed hunting on the Scituate side of the Gulf River Marsh according to public safety bylaw #30100.

At the February meeting of the board of the Gulf Association it was felt by board members that many people living along the Gulf River were not aware of the zoning regulations prohibiting hunting on the Gulf River Marsh. Efforts are being made by the association to rectify that situation. Those living along or near the Gulf River are encouraged to post their own land with "no hunting signs" and to inform police immediately should they see or hear firearms being discharged anywhere along the Gulf River.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Anne Lee Chase

Anne Lee Chase

HULL – Anne Lee Chase, age 53, of Hull, formerly of Cohasset died February 13 at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, after a short and courageous struggle with cancer.

She was the loving daughter of Barbara A. (Sullivan) Chase of Cohasset, MA and the late Francis Michael Chase. In addition to her mother, Anne is survived by her two brothers Francis G. Chase, and his wife Barbara McIntyre Chase, formally of Hingham, MA and Michael C. Chase, and his wife Carolyn Buonanno Chase of East Greenwich, RI. She was the proud and loving aunt of Courtney and Conor Chase and Tommy, Margaret, Phoebe and Christian Chase. She was actively involved in each of her nieces and nephews lives and loved them as her own children.

Anne was born and raised in Cohasset and graduated from Milton Academy. She went on to graduate from Simmons College in Boston with a degree in Art History. For more than twenty years Anne was the Office Manager of Morgan Stanley Smith Barney's office in Hingham, MA where she was the beloved colleague of all there. Anne was previously employed at the Whitney Museum in New York.

Besides her love and devotion to her mother, brothers and their families, she loved cooking, her monthly book group, playing the piano and listening to music. Anne enjoyed the arts and was a docent at several museums including the China Trade Museum in Milton, MA and the Fogg Art Museum in Cambridge, MA. Anne also loved vacationing in September in East Orleans, MA. She dedicated herself to helping her family.

A Mass of Christian Burial for Anne was held on Thursday, February 18 in St. Anthony's Church, 10 Summer St., Cohasset, MA. Arrangements by McNamara Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset, MA.

In lieu of flowers, donations in her memory may be made to Sunset Point Camp, 185 Columbia Road, Dorchester, MA 02121 or to Ovations for the Cure of Ovarian Cancer.

Scar will feel at home

'Lion King' roars into Boston Opera House

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

The Tree of Life from "The Lion King" National Tour.

Understudying not one, but two roles in the national tour of "The Lion King," which opened this week at the Boston Opera House, keeps actor Nicholas Carrière plenty busy. But if the West Bridgewater native – who steps into the role of Scar for the Feb. 27 matinee and Feb. 28 evening performance – ever decides to moonlight, he may want to look into group sales.

"I have sold about 90 tickets so far for the two performances that I'm definitely doing in Boston. I think even my dentist is coming to see one of the shows," explained Carrière recently by telephone from Hartford.

Carrière, the youngest of nine children of Dr. Arthur C. and Mrs. Ann Carrière of West Bridgewater, has been on the road with the Disney musical as an understudy for Scar and Pumbaa for the past six months, but his current tour stop will provide some of his family with their first opportunity to see him in the show that won six 1998 Tony Awards including Best Musical.

"Boston will be the first time my parents have seen me in this show. It will make my father very happy to see me working as an actor and actually getting paid for it," says Carrière with a laugh. "I'm not nervous at all about performing in front of them. As long as I know they're not late, I'll be fine. When you come from a big family like ours, it's always hard to get everyone organized."

West Bridgewater native Nicholas Carrière.

Organization is just what director and Newton native Julie Taymor requires of her company when executing her vision of an African jungle inhabited by Mufasa the Lion King, his queen, Saradi, their newborn son, Simba the prince, and Mufasa's evil-doing brother, Scar, as well as a host of other Pridelands creatures including Timon, a wise-cracking meerkat, and Pumbaa, a warm-hearted warthog.

Taymor's Tony Award-winning design for the show includes more than 200 rod, shadow, and full-sized puppets, 49 wigs, and an almost equal number of masks and headdresses worn by 53 cast members. Based on the 1994 animated Disney feature of the same name, the stage show uses Elton John and Tim Rice's music for that movie as well as three new songs by the pair, and additional musical material by Taymor, Jay Rifkin, Hans Zimmer, Mark Mancina and South African composer Lebo M.

"The logistics of this production run perfectly. It has been out for many years now and everyone knows exactly what is expected of them. When you step in as someone new to the company, however, it is terrifying. You have to know exactly what you're doing at all times. It is very daunting and very physically demanding, too. The Scar costume weighs 45 pounds and has a mechanical head powered by battery packs that attach to your thighs. Figuring out how to not only play the character but also make the costume work was a real challenge."

While he is working in Boston, Carrière plans to spend at least some of his free time on the South Shore.

"I'll be in West Bridgewater on the weekends. New York is my base now, but my parents' house is home. I love West Bridgewater and I'm excited to be coming back. This is a big homecoming. I've been away for 10 years. I'm also hoping to get people from the cast down to Marshfield where my family has a summer cottage. Our company is a very tight-knit group. We see a lot of each other and I want as many of them as possible to be able to experience the beauty of Brant Rock beach."

For Carrière – a 1998 graduate of Thayer Academy in Braintree who earned his Bachelor of Arts in English and theater from Pennsylvania's Muhlenberg College in 2002 and his master's degree in Fine Arts from the Yale Drama School two years ago – "The Lion King" has been a surprise.

"I went to Yale because I was and am interested in classical theater. Then I got this show and even though I never expected to be doing anything like this, I'm having the greatest time. I have also learned more in the past six months than I ever would have otherwise. Being an understudy is a funny position, because you don't work all the time. It is a thrill to get that call, though. I've played Scar maybe 25 times and Pumbaa about 10 since I joined the show. I enjoy Pumbaa, of course, but I have a blast as Scar. Now that I am no longer scared, I get to just go play and have fun."

"The Lion King" will be at the Boston Opera House, 539 Washington St., Boston, through March 21. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-982-2787 or go online at Broadway-AcrossAmerica.com/Boston.

Taking in 'The Murderer's Daughters'

North River Arts Society hosts first-ever author series

By Jennifer H. McInerney
CORRESPONDENT

If a man commits a monstrous deed, such as the murder of his wife, does that single act categorically define him as a monster?

Debut novelist Randy Susan Meyers, who worked with men in a Certified Batterer Intervention Program for many years, discovered that this was not necessarily the case. Often, these men had children whom they loved dearly, children who—as a result of a violent act and its penalties—no longer had a mother or a father in their lives. She was equally astounded at the level of denial these fathers were in about the residual impact their behavior had on their kids. When Meyers interviewed them about the whereabouts of their children during the crime, they invariably answered: They were sleeping.

"But these children were not sleeping," she observes. "It really, really bothered me, what these children had to go through."

The dichotomy of a doting father committing homicide intrigued Meyers—so much so that she made it the subject of her first novel, "The Murderer's Daughters," which came out last month.

"So often in literature and the media, it's the story of the victim or the victimized that gets told, and rarely the story of the collateral damage. I was more interested in telling the children's story."

In her novel, Meyers unflinchingly explores the dismantled lives of sisters Lulu and Merry, while their mother lies in an early grave and their father languishes in jail. For one sister, a jagged scar across her chest is a daily reminder of the tragedy; for the other, rage and bitterness are constant companions.

The story's premise derives not only from Meyers' professional experience working with batterers, but also from a chilling personal connection.

"My father apparently tried to kill my mother, but, though I was there, I don't remember it. I was only about 4 years old," she acknowledges. "The entire first chapter of the book is based on stories my sister told me about when she was forced to let my father into the house, although she had been told not to."

Her sister's retelling of the attempted murder stirred Meyers' writerly instincts. She found herself contemplating the tantalizing, yet torturous, "what if" scenario—what if her father had succeeded?

At about the same time, she came upon an eye-opening letter to the editor from a woman who had survived a family murder and gone on to lead a successful career, ultimately working for the Clinton Administration. Combining these two pieces with her first-hand knowledge of batterers set the novel in motion, and took her farther than any of her previous writing projects ever had: all the way to a publishing contract with St. Martin's Press.

Meyers, a longtime student at the Grub Street writing center in Boston, and now an instructor, will be the featured author in the first-ever Author Series, presented by the North River Arts Society Writers Workshop. The event, which takes place from 2 to 4 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 27, at the G.A.R. Hall in Marshfield Hills, is free and open to the public. Meyers will discuss "The Writer's Relationship with the Reader" and read an excerpt from her novel; a question-and-answer session and book-signing will follow.

The NRAS Writers Workshop, which was established in September, consists of writers from all over the South Shore who are working on projects in a variety of genres, from children's literature to historical fiction. About 15 "regulars" meet monthly at the G.A.R. Hall, the NRAS' headquarters.

Throughout the 18 months she spent writing her novel, Meyers shared her work-in-progress with a similar group.

"Having your writing critiqued by other writers is an essential part of the process," Meyers notes. "For example, when I first started writing "The Murderer's Daughters," I thought I'd tell the story by jumping back and forth between the main characters' childhood and adulthood, but that did not work. My writers' group made it very clear that that did not work. Honestly, it wasn't working for me either, and hearing their opinions made it easier for me to give up that approach and try writing the story from the girls' points of view, which I liked much better. Telling it that way, I got to live the story as it went along."

In fact, writing the narrative from both sisters' perspectives has proven profoundly effective.

"People are always telling me which sister is their favorite, and asking me who my favorite is, but I cannot pick a favorite child," she continues. "Whichever sister's voice I was writing in, I was very comfortable. I have equal feelings for both of them."

Early reviews of The Murderer's Daughters have been overwhelmingly positive. The book has been hailed as "unforgettable…clear-eyed, insightful…impressively executed…disturbing and convincing," by the Boston Globe, and "powerful…thought-provoking…[and] heart-tugging," by Boston magazine. The Associated Press calls Meyers' writing "dramatic without being overdone."

For additional information and to read a brief writing-specific interview with Meyers, visit www.nraswritersworkshop.blogspot.com. Copies of "The Murderer's Daughters" will be available for purchase and can be signed by the author at the event; a portion of the proceeds will support the North River Arts Society, a nonprofit organization that has been providing arts education and events on the South Shore for more than 30 years.

The Big Melt presented by The North & South Rivers Watershed Association, the South Shore Natural Science Center and the Mass Audubon South Regional Headquarters at 7 p.m. Feb. 24. Join Woods Hole scientist, Sarah Das, as she recounts her latest expedition to Greenland in July of 2008. Dr. Das, along with National Geographic photographers, witnessed a never before seen phenomenon—the sudden draining of a glacier lake. Highlighted in a recent NOVA special entitled Extreme Ice this expedition found that as glacial lakes grow, large cracks can open suddenly in the lakes' bottoms, allowing water to drain in a dramatic waterfall more than a half-mile down to the bedrock beneath the ice sheet. The water lubricates the base of the glacier, like grease on a railroad track, allowing glaciers to flow faster. As global temperatures rise, more lakes and cracks may form, accelerating the flow of ice to the sea. Admission is free of charge. The lectures are at the South Shore Natural Science Center located on Jacobs Lane in Norwell. For information visit www.nsrwa.org or contact the NSRWA at 781-659-8168, Mass Audubon at 781-659-9400 or SSNSC at 781-659-2559.

TOWERING ISSUE

First Parish proposing cell antenna in spire

Would require fiberglass steeple

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cell phones are a part of our everyday life. They keep us in constant contact and availability to family members, friends and clients. Cohasset is notorious for having spots in town where cell service is spotty, if not non-existent.

Enter T-Mobile and its proposal to install several cell antennas in the spire of First Parish Church on Cohasset Common — and let the discussion ensue over historic value and integrity for one of the most prominent buildings in town.

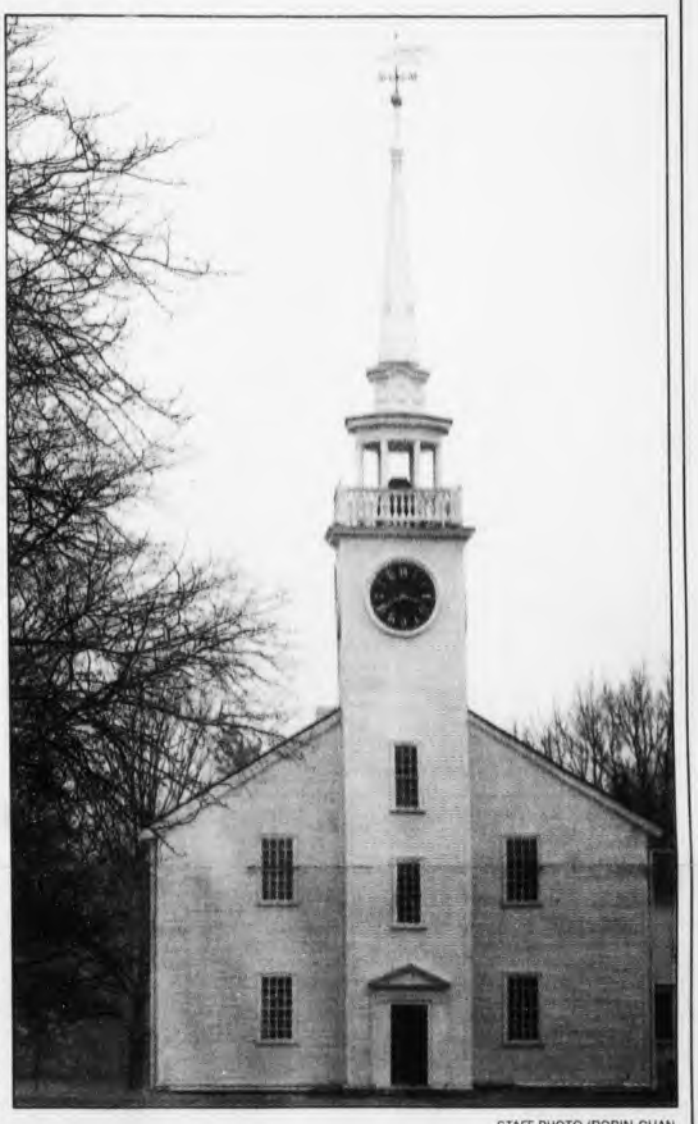
At the crux of the proposal is the installation of the cell antennas requires the replacement of the wooden steeple with a fiberglass replacement that would visually match the original. Already the Historical Commission and Common Historic District are opposed to the use of fiberglass because it is a non-historic material.

Thrown into the mix is First Parish's need for funding to keep up with the regular maintenance of their two historic properties, the meetinghouse and the Parish House, which is on North Main Street.

In mid-January, EBI Consulting, on behalf of T-Mobile Northeast, wrote to the town seeking comment as to how the proposed project might affect the historic property.

T-Mobile approached First Parish about installing three panel antennas within a proposed steeple at a height of 64 feet above ground level. In order for the antennas to work properly, the wooden steeple will need to be replaced with a fiberglass replacement, which T-Mobile said will match the current steeple in design, dimension, color, texture and other visual qualities. Support equipment will need to be installed in the basement level of the building as well.

"The fiberglass reproduction will be such that from the street you won't be able to see the difference," said parishioner Rod Hobson, who was attending the Selectmen's meeting Monday night for another issue and decided to comment.



He said the church was as adamant as anyone about maintaining the historic look of the building.

"(T-Mobile) is going to do an awful lot of things they don't want to do because we want them," Hobson said. In a phone interview, Hobson said a Unitarian church in Duxbury has the antennas of several cell service providers in its steeple.

"We said we'd consider it if what it entailed they were able to do without affecting the appearance of the building. If it did, we wouldn't have even thought of it," Hobson said by phone.

What may involve the Board of Selectmen is the proposal includes a 10-foot wide access easement across the Common to North Main Street. An easement would be required if the electrical wiring was put underground. If such an easement was sought, it would need Town Meeting approval, Town Manager Bill Griffin said.

'We will sadly miss him'

Tragic accident claims life of John Roy

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A dedicated father, loving husband and wonderful neighbor is how many in Cohasset will remember long-time resident John Roy.

"He was very gentle, very friendly, very outgoing."
— The Rev. John Mulvehill

The Old Coach Road resident was killed in a bus crash while on an educational bus tour in Florida earlier this week. Roy's wife, Dolores, was with her husband on the trip and was among those injured in the crash.

The 79-year-old retired attorney was an active member of St. Anthony's Parish and served as a Eucharistic minister.

"He was very responsible and interested in doing anything he could," Father John Mulvehill, pastor at St. Anthony's, adding he served the

Let the race begin...

Four-way school board contest is highlight

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

It's official – there is a four-way race for two seats on the School Committee.

The four citizens who pulled papers to signal their intent to run for School Committee returned their nomination papers and had their signatures certified.

Current School Committee chair Adrienne MacCarthy, Flintlock Ridge Road resident Jeanne Astino, Beach Street resident Paul Ognibene and Linda Snowdale of Mill Lane are seeking two three-year term seats on the School Committee.

This is the first time in four years there has been a balloted race for a School Committee seat.

There is not a race for two Board of Selectmen seats. Incumbent Paul Carlson is seeking re-election and Leland Jenkins of 198 Jerusalem Road put his hat into the ring. Two-term Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer is stepping down.

The Mariner caught up with sophomores, Carly Oddleifson and Anya Gruber, this week. Carly and Anya recently organized a collection for Partners in Health to benefit Haiti earthquake relief efforts. They researched different organizations and liked Partners in Health because more than 90 percent of donations received go to help those in need. The girls set up a table with flyers and information about Partners in Health at the recent CHS Cabaret and collected $400.

Fun fact about yourself: I played violin in a Sister Hazel concert (Carly). I had one of my poems published in a book when I was 11 (Anya).

Goal: For Cohasset to continue relief efforts to Haiti (Carly). To be a successful artist of some type (Anya).

Person you'd most like to meet: Paul Farmer (Carly). My great-great-great-great grandparents (Anya).

Biggest worry: AP Euro exam (Carly). It's a waste of time to worry! (Anya).

Home Instead SENIOR CARE

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

IS IT TIME YET?

When might it be the appropriate time to bring someone in to provide home care for a senior? Perhaps the at-home senior has issues with forgetfulness and there is a concern over his or her physical safety. Family and friends may not be available during the hours when the senior needs assistance. Keep in mind that home care may be implemented over a period of time, starting with simple household duties and developing into more extensive services when the individual needs of the senior change. If home care is something that you have considered, contact a home care provider to schedule an initial confidential meeting to discuss your needs and learn about the range of services offered.

We offer a diverse menu of services to match your needs. That means we can provide everything from the occasional respite visit, to overnight care, to part-time visits, and finally, if necessary, 24-hour long-term care. Call 781-878-2994 today to set up an initial sit-down to discuss your needs, your parent's needs, and what we can do to help you both. We're available at any time, day or night, because we know that a crisis may strike at any time. Our address is 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

P.S. People who view home care assistance as a convenience generally handle it better than those who view outside help as a necessity.

To you, it's about finding a trusted partner. To us, it's personal.

POLICE BEAT

MV crashes, arrest, footprints, and missing battery

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Police went to the scene and found footprints in the snow but none near the residence. It looked as though the teens were cutting through from Pond Street to Oak Street or Hill Street, police said.

MV accidents

• At 4:27 p.m. on Tuesday (Feb. 16) there was a two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) by Stop & Shop. A 2000 Dodge pickup truck heading north on Route 3A saw a police cruiser approaching in the opposite direction and pulled to the right. The 2000 Chrysler Voyager Van behind the pickup attempted to stop but the roadway was slick due to snowy weather and rear-ended the truck. There were no apparent injuries and neither vehicle was towed. A 47-year-old Cohasset man operated the pickup and a 17-year-old Cohasset boy was driving the van. No citations were issued.

• At 9 p.m. on Saturday (Feb. 20), a police officer, who responded to a fire alarm on Howard Gleason Road, backed up to get out of the way of the fire engine, striking a stonewall. The cruiser sustained minor damage; no one was hurt. The town insurance will make restitution with the owner of the wall, police said.

• At 2:39 p.m. on Sunday (Feb. 21), there was a two-car accident on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) by Tedeschi Plaza. A 2004 Audi, operated by an 84-year-old Scituate woman, pulled out of the plaza to head north and failed to yield to a 2006 Chevrolet Monte Carlo, operated by an 80-year-old Marshfield man. There was a collision; the Monte Carlo was towed and there were no reported injuries. The Scituate woman was cited for failure to yield the right of way.

Drive-off

Mobil Mart called police last week and provided a license plate of a vehicle in an apparent "drive-off."

Police located the owner who lives in Cohasset and explained she had used the key fob transponder that apparently did not register. She planned to return and pay for the gas, police said.

Suspicious jacket

The owner of a local business called police after finding an Adidas jacket with spots of blood in various locations on it on the couch in her establishment. The jacket had not been there when she had stepped out a few minutes earlier. She was not sure whom it belonged to. Police said there was nothing in the pockets and checked the business for any other evidence. Police are holding the jacket at the station as "found property." The report came in at 9:07 p.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 17).

Footprints

A concerned resident notified police at 9:49 p.m. on Wednesday (Feb. 17) after seeing three teens run around the back of the house. Police went to the scene and found footprints in the snow but none near the residence. It looked as though the teens were cutting through from Pond Street to Oak Street or Hill Street, police said.

Snow pile

A concerned motorist went to the police station to complain about the height of the snow pile in front of the former Cohasset Hardware building (by the town pump) at the corner of South Main and Elm streets on Thursday (Feb. 18) at about 7:44 a.m. The walk-in said the snow pile impeded the sight lines making it difficult to turn the corner. Police notified the DPW but believe that nature may have taken its course and depleted the snow naturally.

Broken down

Police had a 1997 Jeep Grand Cherokee towed from the intersection of North Main Street and Jerusalem Road last Thursday (Feb. 18) at about 10 a.m. because the vehicle was partially in the roadway and posed a safety issue. There was a note in the vehicle explaining it had broken down and the owner would return, but police were unable to contact the owner immediately. The keys were inside but the Jeep would not start. Police left a message for the owner.

Arrest

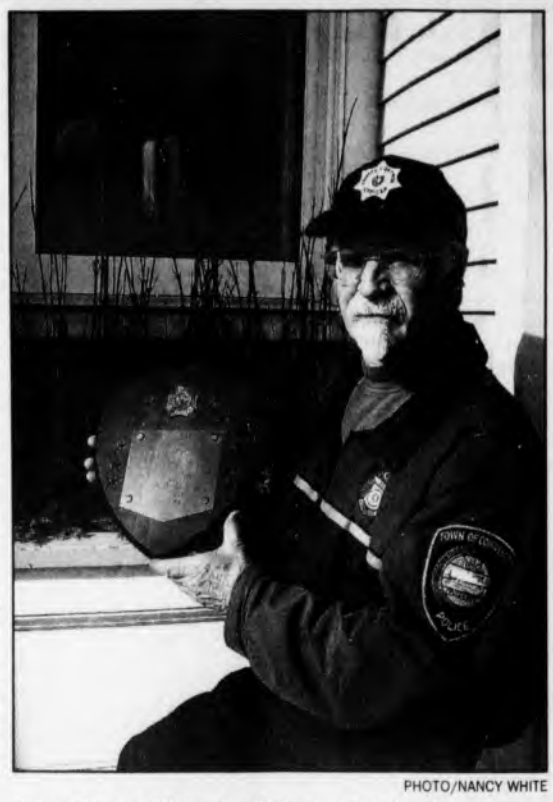
Police arrested a 21-year-old Cohasset man in a 1997 Ford Taurus on Beechwood Street by Norman Todd Road on Thursday (Feb. 18) at about 1:25 p.m. The officer knew the 21-year-old was wanted on a warrant and stopped the car.

Upon stopping him and based on his physical appearance, the officer had probable cause to believe that he was under the influence of drugs. He was charged with the warrant and for operating under the influence of drugs. He was also cited for defective equipment (brake light out).

Further investigation revealed syringes in the vehicle as well as unidentified prescription pills.

Medical evaluation

A 56-year-old man found staggering along Elm Street in front of the police station was evaluated by paramedics and transported to the hospital. Police said his condition was not alcohol-related.



Missing battery

A resident, who could not start his car using the key fob, reported to police that his battery had been stolen overnight. The call came in at 7 a.m. on Sunday. However, the man soon realized that the battery was not missing after all. He had opened the hood but was looking on the wrong side of the engine for the battery and saw a space where a battery might fit, police said. The battery was still under the hood but on the other side of the engine.

History mystery

Kansas City plaque did time with Cohasset Police

By Nancy White

Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy holds the plaque from Kansas City that dates back to the mid-1950s that he found in the basement of the police station.

About two years ago, Animal Control Officer Paul Murphy came across a curious plaque in the basement of the Cohasset Police Department.

The plaque was given to the Kansas City Terminal Railroad, Union Station Memorial, in Kansas City, Missouri, in recognition of "outstanding work and generous support" from the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) Post 7000. The year on the plaque is 1954-1955.

It was an unusual item to find in the basement of small town police station on the east coast. Murphy thought so, too, so he prevented it from being thrown in the trash. During a more recent clean up of the basement, Murphy again stumbled across the plaque.

Murphy saw that there was some historic value to the plaque – maybe not for someone in Cohasset, but for its owners or givers. He set out to track down its rightful owners, or at least their descendents. This time he decided to take action.

"To me it's significant for something, it doesn't belong in the dump. It has some historic value to it," Murphy said. Using the vast information available on the Internet, he set out to locate VFW Post 7000. He contacted the VFW headquarters, but they unfortunately had no record of the post ever even existing.

He next gave a call to Union Station in Kansas City. He told them the story of the plaque. It turned out the station had undergone a restoration and now has a small museum to commemorate its history.

"To me it's significant for something, it doesn't belong in the dump. It has some historic value to it."
— Paul Murphy

According to the Union Station website, at its peak during WWII, an estimated one million travelers passed through the Station.

"I'm sure the plaque had a connection with World War II veterans going through there," Murphy gathered, but the connection to Cohasset is still unknown.

"How it ended up in Cohasset, I have no idea," Murphy said.

Murphy intends to shine up the 55-year-old plaque and send it off to Kansas City where it will be put on display at the museum.

He is hopeful someone reading the Mariner might know the story behind the plaque.

"I'm going to keep it for a couple of weeks to see if anyone comes forward," Murphy said.

Murphy can be contacted through the police department at 781-383-1212.

The Meetinghouse is unique in that it is a privately owned building on public land.

Hobson said the parish is hopeful another cell service provider will install antennas in the steeple as well.

"We are a small group of people that maintain that building and any revenue coming in would obviously be helpful," Hobson said.

This is not the first time First Parish has looked to creative and new venues for revenue. Last year, First Parish auctioned off several historical silver beakers to raise money to keep up with the maintenance of their two historical buildings, the Meetinghouse and Parish house.

STAFF PHOTO/ROBIN CHAN

What may involve the Board of Selectmen is the proposal includes a 10-foot wide access easement across the Common to North Main Street. An easement would be required if the electrical wiring was put underground.

Historic concerns

Both the Cohasset Historical Commission and the Historical Society found significant adverse impact on the historical integrity of the building and site. The use of fiberglass was cited in both letters as the primary objection.

First Parish Meeting House was built in 1747 and is part of the Cohasset Common Historic District, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

According to parishioner Art Myles, the steeple is not original to the building. It was destroyed by lightning and they believed replaced sometime in the 1930. Between 2000 and 2002, the legs of the steeple were restored and the church roof was replaced following historical guidelines.

"The First Parish Meeting House is a landmark building on the Common, the focal point of this district," wrote Rebecca Bates-McArthur, chair of the Historical Commission.

Bates-McArthur notes as a building on the National Register, guidelines require renovations to be done in the same materials and features as the original, "we would object strongly to replacing the spire with fiberglass."

The Cohasset Common Historic District Commission is currently reviewing the proposal. The commission has asked for a material sample of the fiberglass and the detailing. Although they have not made a final decision, an initial discussion revealed concern for the project, according to a letter sent to the Town Manager's office.

"While the cell antennas will not be seen from the Common, the spire will need to be changed from wood to fiberglass which is concern of our committee. Our committee is often conflicted with the use of modern materials while trying to maintain historical accuracy," said Sarah Gomez of the Common Historic District Commission.

Griffin said the Massachusetts Historical Commission is also reviewing the proposal.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he would like to be sure the installation of cell antennas would improve cell service in the town and asked to see a post-installation coverage map.

"We're far from being able to resolve this," said Selectmen chair Paul Carlson. "We're going to have to do more work on this."

The installation of cell phone antennas in church steeples is not unusual. Next door in Hingham, three churches in the downtown area have installed cell antennas in their steeples in recent years: First Baptist Church, Hingham Congregational Church and New North Church.

Sewer 'equity'

Petition seeks 50/50 split of Little Harbor project cost

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A citizen's petition article could pave the way for a debt exclusion override. It's on a familiar topic for many longtime residents — the Little Harbor sewer expansion project.

A group of citizens have proposed splitting the cost of the sewer project 50/50 between the benefiting residents and the whole town. The other two recent sewer expansion projects for the North and Central districts are being paid for under this scenario.

However, according to a vote taken at the 2005 Annual Town Meeting, the cost of the largest sewer expansion project, involving 487 homes in Little Harbor, is being 100 percent borne by the benefiting residents.

At Monday night's Selectmen's meeting the proponents of the article came to state their case. Alexander Koines of 380 Atlantic Ave., one of the homes benefiting from the Little Harbor sewer project, said the article is about equity.

"We're asking voters at Town Meeting to fund 50 percent of the cost of the project to relieve some of the burden," Koines said. The request involves consideration of an approximate $6 million debt exclusion override for a 20-year period.

"It's about the community pitching in and helping out."
— Alexander Koines, 380 Atlantic Ave.

The request puts the Little Harbor sewer project in line with the previous two sewer expansions, which Koines said set a precedent.

According to Koines's calculations, the cost per the average non-Little Harbor household would be about $100 per year for the next 20 years.

"It's about the community pitching in and helping out," Koines said.

The town is about halfway through the 20-year obligation to pay for the Central and North sewer expansion projects.

Both Selectmen Paul Carlson and Ralph Dormitzer said the issue was subject of much discussion at the time it was originally voted on in 2005, and during the previous consideration for Central and North districts.

"Many thought it was a mistake to do it 50/50," Carlson said.

Koines agreed, but said the precedent was set with the first two projects and it was only equitable for it to continue with the third project.

Selectman Ted Carr said he would like to know more about the process that led voters to support 100 percent user-paid sewer betterment, "I'm a process person and it seems like a process was followed in the past."

From the audience James Gilman of Rust Way asked Town Manager Bill Griffin if a 50/50 split for sewer projects was typical in his municipal experience. Griffin said in his experience he had never seen the 50/50 split, the cost was always 100 percent borne by those benefiting, "it was a surprise to me."

If Town Meeting votes in favor of this article, it will need to go to a ballot vote. Griffin said the Board of Selectmen would need to put in on the ballot and it may involve a special election. The vote could not take place on scheduled April 10, 2010 Town Election.

Shingles vaccine available from heath department

The Town of Cohasset has an opportunity to obtain Zoster vaccine from the Mass. Dept of Public Health for free. It's a onetime offer, as the state has been able to purchase the vaccine with federal stimulus money from the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. The vaccine would be for any Cohasset resident 60 years of age and older.

The Shingles vaccine was recently recommended by the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices (ACIP) to reduce the risk of shingles and its associated pain in people 60 years old or older.

The Shingles vaccine was recently recommended by the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices (ACIP) to reduce the risk of shingles and its associated pain in people 60 years old or older.

Shingles is a painful skin rash caused by a virus. Pain, itching or tingling of the skin which is followed by a painful skin rash of blister-like lesions, usually localized to a small area on one side of the body, and often the face or trunk. Other symptoms can include fever, headache, chills and upset stomach.

If any resident is interested they should call Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin at 781-383-2210 to be placed on the vaccine list.

'We will sadly miss him'

parish for many years and frequently made visits to homebound seniors.

"He was very gentle, very friendly, very outgoing," Mulvehill said. "He had an intellectual curiosity, was always asking about scripture and theology…it was a quest for knowledge that led him on the trip."

The program they were involved in, called "Exploritas," is based in Boston. It was previously known as Elderhostel, a nonprofit, lifelong learning and educational travel group. Mulvehill said everyone he had spoken to say the couple was looking forward to the trip.

His wife, Dolores, is still in a Florida hospital recovering from multiple fractures sustained in the bus crash. The couple celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in 2009.

The bus that the couple and 30 others they were traveling with was hit by a car, then ran off the road and rolled over at least twice, ejecting several passengers. Another passenger connected to the South Shore, Joan Horsch, 78, a Weymouth native currently living in Virginia, was also killed in the tour bus crash.

The group had just visited murals in Lake Placid, Florida, about 30 miles northwest of Lake Okeechobee, and was headed back to a nearby hotel when the accident occurred.

Long-time friend and neighbor Paul Carlson said John had a "warm, dry sense of humor and was always ready to help out a neighbor or friend in anyway."

"We will sadly miss him. We also wish Dolores a full and speedy recovery," Carlson said.

Another neighbor, Bill Signorelli, remembered him as a good neighbor. Signorelli said he moved to the neighborhood in 1973, and Roy had already been on Old Coach Road for several years.

"We're just so sorry," Signorelli said. "I had a great chat with him Saturday. He had bought a new automobile for his wife and he was so happy.

"If you needed some help for whatever you might be working on at the time, and John recognized it, he'd be there to help you," Signorelli said. "We have nice memories of him. It's just hard to believe he's passed. It's very very hard."

Signorelli said Roy was very dedicated to yard work and paid careful attention to the neighborhood.

"Whenever I was outside he'd come over," he said. "He loved to work around the yard, and he kept his yard in meticulous condition."

In February 2007, the Mariner featured the Roy couple as part of a feature on 'lifelong Valentines.' According to the article, the Roys met on a blind date in New York City right after John passed the bar. From there, the couple began dating just about every weekend.

John cited having a good sense of humor and being able to take things in stride were important, "you have to be able to laugh at yourself and laugh together," he was quoted as saying.

Arrangements are being handled by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home in Cohasset, but are still being finalized.

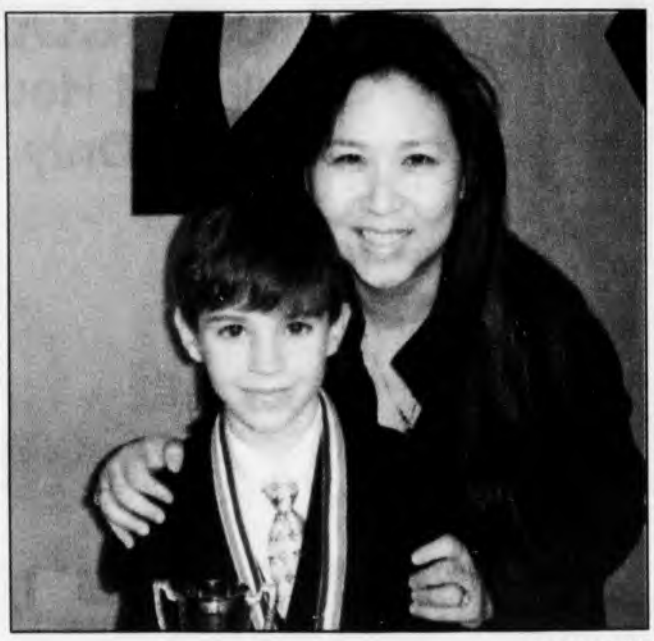
Young pianist shines at Conservatory

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

BYE, FEBRUARY



Hello Cohasset. The end of February is here and heading out with, well, sort of a bang. The weather has been a bit ick this week and into the weekend but who knows, maybe March will bring a bit more snow and then jump us right into Spring. I know that sometimes the month of March, for me anyways gets a bit long with weather that cannot make up its mind but we can all deal with it no matter what.

We have a number of Cohasset students in several schools that have been recognized for their work and dedication.

YOUNG PIANIST

Congratulations to Cohasset piano student Desmond Herzfelder for having placed second in his division of the South Shore Conservatory's 22nd annual Concerto Competition. Desmond is a student of piano instructor Hui-Min Wang. He received a trophy and performed in the winners' concert following the competition.

The Concerto Competition is open to all current Conservatory students and made possible by support from the Mary DeForest Seymour Endowment Fund. For more information, visit www.sscmusic.org.

Desmond Herzfelder and his piano instructor Hui-Min Wang.

QUINCY

Congratulations are first being sent out to Thomson Jaffe and Ellen Tarpey, who both made the Fall 2009 Deans list at Quincy College. Nice work to both of you on your accomplishments.

DELAWARE

From the University of Delaware came the news that Melissa Crawford, a senior Fashion Merchandising major in the College of Education and Public Policy, was named to the Deans' List this past Fall, 2009. Nice to hear Melissa, keep up the great work.

BROOKS

Junior, Peter McKenna, another Cohasset student received Honors this past semester at Brooks School in North Andover, Mass. This news was so nice to receive and you should be very proud of this Peter.

SCHOLAR ATHLETE

Here is a great bit of news and hope that today is a great one for this young lady from Cohasset. Notre Dame Academy senior Courtney Culhane of Cohasset qualified to run the 2-mile at the MIAA All State Indoor Track Championship at the Reggie in Boston. This is Courtney's first year running winter track (took a break from ice hockey) and was very excited to qualify and run in states.

Courtney received early decision admittance in December to Cornell University, Class of 2014 — where she will study history and anthropology and plans to run marathons in the future. We are all sending good luck thoughts and wishes your way today Courtney! Regardless of the outcome of the state meet, you should be so proud of all that you have done so far and for all that will be heading your way in the future. (For more, see sports)

IN THE UK

Cohasset resident Megan Sacks, a junior at Gettysburg College, is spending the Spring 2010 semester studying in United Kingdom. What a wonderful opportunity for you Megan. Enjoy all that this experience brings to you and share with all the people you meet and work with, your personality and strengths.

STONEHILL

Stonehill College recently named Cohasset resident Michael W. Pecca, a member of the class of 2010, to its Dean's List for the fall 2009 semester. Congrats Michael from your family and friends!

PASSION PLUNGE

Here is a feel good story that happens each year and is something that you and the family could go and cheer for or even, join in the plunge. March Madness is Saturday, March 6th this year. It's the 12th Passion Plunge for Special Olympics Massachusetts (SOMA)! If you're looking for a great event to take part in, or to go watch and cheer on the Plungers, this is it! There's a costume parade at 11:15 a.m., followed by the mad dash of the plungers into the surf at noon at the Mary Jeannette Murray Bathhouse on Nantasket Beach.

Jay Nothnagle, plunging for his 10th time, is an athlete and Captain of the South Shore Mariners Team, which includes Cohasset plungers: Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Jack Delorenzo, Ron Goodwin, Bill Greentree, Jeff Nothnagle (Board Chair), Graham Sida, Nick Sida, and Doug Yeager, plus six from other South Shore towns. The funds they raise come back to our local Mariners program that has 90 athletes from age 8 to 66 from seven area towns. So "come on down" to Nantasket Beach on Saturday, March 6th, and please support our athletes with a pledge! You can do this with a check to your favorite plunger (payable to Special Olympics), or on-line at www.PassionPlunge.org, a secure site. Local participants would also love to have you plunge with them — you can register at that same site! Thanks in advance for your interest and support for this very worthwhile group.

PET CALENDAR

The Scituate Animal Shelter is now accepting entries for the 2011 Pet Calendar photo contest. Approximately 275 photos will be displayed in its "Paw Prints" 2011 Calendar; winning photo will be featured on the calendar cover. Entries are just $10 each and must be received by April 15. Don't miss this opportunity to have your adorable pet published. Photo submission information can be found at www.ScituateAnimalShelter.org. All proceeds from the pet calendar will support the exceptional care of the animals at the Scituate Animal Shelter

FOOTLOOSE

Get ready Cohasset to kick off those shoes, as the prestigious Cohasset Dramatic Club (CDC) will present the smash Broadway hit Footloose, from March 12-28 at Town Hall. The show is directed by Lisa Pratt, music directed by Mark Bono, choreographed by Caroline Maus and produced by Cecelia Chapman. Tickets are $18 for general admission and $14 for seniors, students and groups and can be purchased at Paperscapes, Cohasset Village, Buttonwood Books CJC Hwy, Cohasset or via reservation at 617-697-2115. Tickets may also be purchased the day of the show, one hour prior to the show at the box office. For more information, go to; www.cohassetdramaticclub.org.

That is the news for this week Cohasset. Send in all of your news for the upcoming week no later than Tuesday by 5 pm.

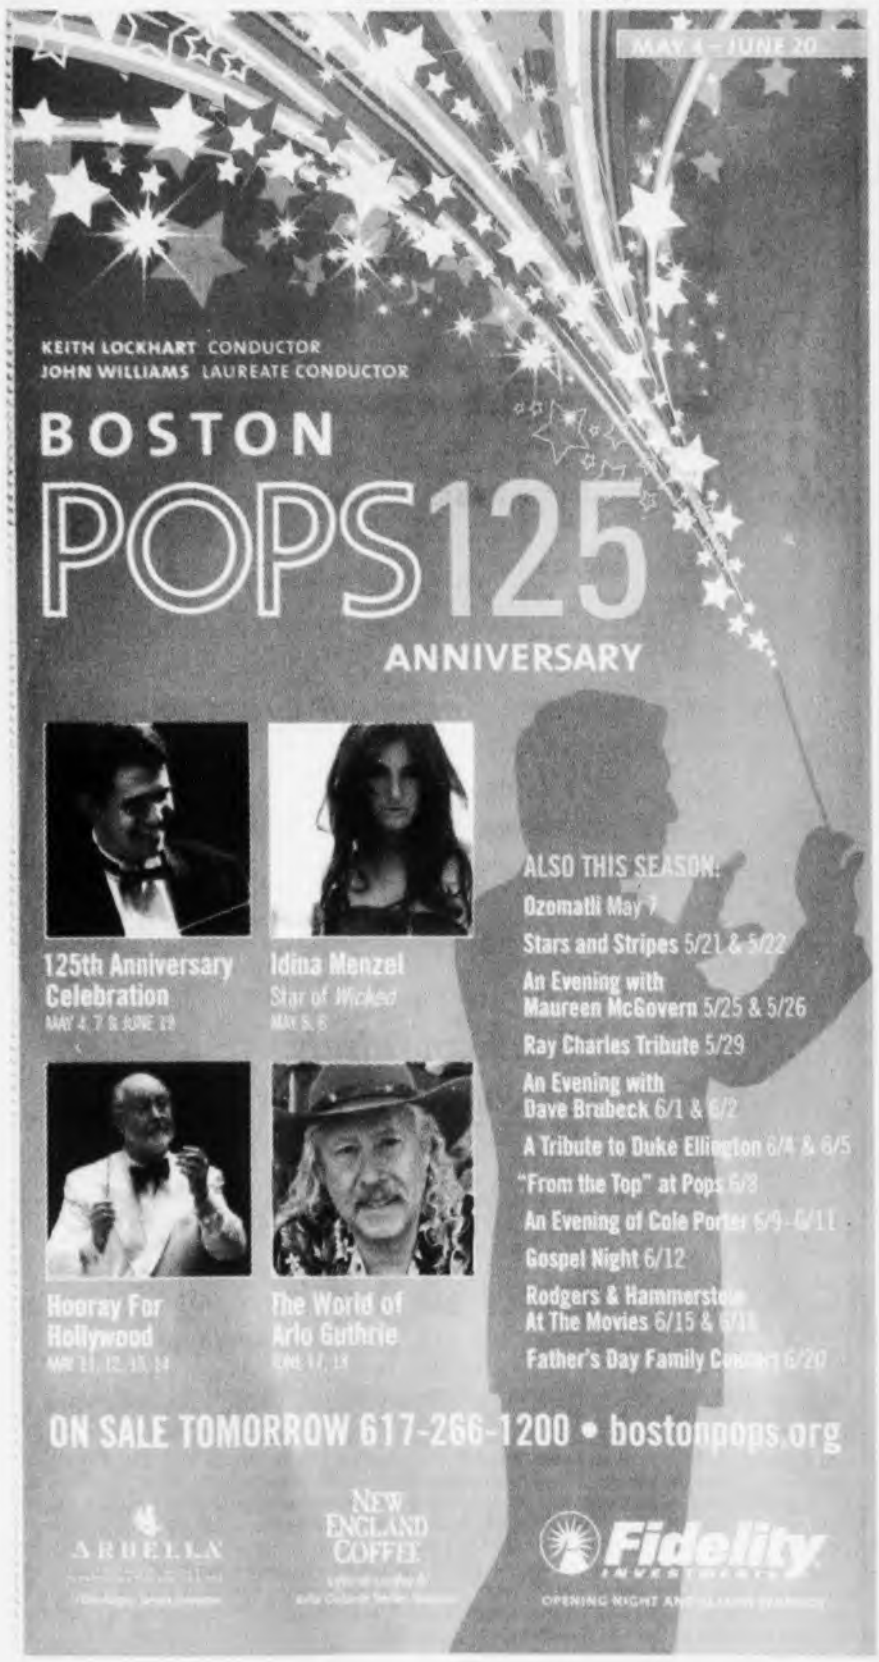
Guild - St. Onge

Lindsay and George Cooney of Cohasset and Peter Guild of Quincy announce the engagement of their daughter, Lydia Jordan Guild, to Mark Jefferson St. Onge, son of Harry and Kathleen St. Onge of Cohasset.



The bride-to-be is a graduate of Cohasset High School and the University of Vermont. She is pursuing her master's degree in education at Lesley University. She is currently a teacher at Derby Academy.

Her fiancé is a graduate of Proctor Academy in New Hampshire and Bethany College in West Virginia. He is currently employed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The couple met while sailing at the Cohasset Yacht Club. They became engaged during a seaside hike in Acadia National Park in September 2009.

An August 2010 wedding is planned in Cohasset.

Mia and Nick Petrocelli riding in their third Kids PanMass Challenge Bike Ride in Hingham last year. Volunteer for the 2010 event at Hingham Library Wednesday, March 3 at 7pm. The ride will be Sunday, June 13 this year.

Volunteer for Kids Pan Mass Challenge

The fourth annual Kids PanMass Challenge Bike Ride in Hingham is Sunday, June 13, from 9 a.m. to noon. The 2010 ride will take place entirely in Wompautck State Park and just like the events from previous years, kids from across the South Shore will raise funds for the Jimmy Fund to benefit Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

The initial volunteer meeting will take place from 7 to 8:45 p.m., on Wednesday, March 3, at Hingham Library. A variety of volunteer roles from lending ideas and concepts at the beginning of planning to just helping out on June 13 will be outlined and available for sign up.

Each year about 500 kids participate and more than 100 volunteers help put the day together. More than $150,000 has been raised by the children of the South Shore to aid the fight against cancer in the three years the event has taken place. The purpose of the Kids PMC Bike Ride is not only for the kids to have fun, but to teach them the pleasures of helping others and initiate them into the world of philanthropy.

More than $150,000 has been raised by the children of the South Shore to aid the fight against cancer in the three years the event has taken place.

The Kids PMC Bike Ride is an outgrowth of the adult 190 mile two-day Pan Mass Challenge Bike Ride that has raised more than $270 million in its 31 year existence. All funds raised by the adult PMC as well as the Kids PMC go to the Jimmy Fund.

Kids can register now and volunteers can sign up on line at kids.pmc.org/hingham. South Shore businesses and organizations are encouraged to join in supporting the event. More information is available by email at : pmchingham@comcast.net.

The exhibit includes a small display of accessories a woman might have donned for her trip in town: a hat with built-in curls to hang down her back, high button boots, and an embroidered carpet bag.

Historical Society mini-exhibit has train trip in mind

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Each and every day scores of commuters head into Boston to work their 9-to-5 on the Greenbush commuter rail. But, back in 1890, that trek was more of an event rather than part of the daily grind.

The latest "vignette" displaying a selection of the Cohasset Historical Society's extensive textile collection is devoted to a trip into Boston on the train.

The Cohasset lady is heading into Boston for a bit of shopping. She is wearing a circa 1890 green matelasse coat (origin unknown) with intricate raised braid flower trim embroidery on velvet. The coat splits in the back to allow the lady to wear a bustle. Even the inside of the coat is a sight to see; it is made of iridescent fabric.

"You can tell this coat was made to fit the woman perfectly," said Martha Fisher, staff member at the Historical Society.

To go along with the mannequin and coat is appropriate accessories: gloves, jewelry, compact, a hat with curls, and authentic S.S. Pierce, a now-defunct food purveyor boxes and even a bill of lading. There is also a carpetbag for the lady's smaller purchases, high button boots, and a large train schedule is hung on the wall.

The Historical Society has over 3,000 cataloged pieces of historical textiles from elaborate ball gowns, to fancy hats to children's clothes.

The small monthly displays are a new venture for 2010 and seemed like a good way to showcase pieces of the collection without significant time it takes to put together a full exhibit.

In May, the Historical Society plans to display prom dresses from the decades. If anyone would like to loan or give a prom dress to the society for the display, contact Historical Society director Lynne DeGiacomo at 781-383-1434.

The Cohasset Historical Society is located at the Paul Pratt Memorial Building at 106 South Main St. The Historical Society is open weekdays from 10a.m. to 4p.m.

Princess is such fun to watch and is becoming more and more friendly.

This cat is a real Princess

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is looking for shelter for Princess, a shiny black young female with white on the very tip of her tail. She's extremely playful and graceful in her motions. She's such fun to watch and is becoming more and more friendly, though I doubt she'll become a lap cat. She is part Siamese but is not all that talkative.

If you're interested in her or any of our felines, please check out our website at www.hsar.org.

Shelter hours are 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., on Mondays, and 2 to 3 p.m., on Saturdays. If these hours are inconvenient, please give Shirley a call at 781-925-3380 for adoption appointments only. The shelter telephone numbers are 781-925-3121 or 877-378-1195. We are located at 50 L Street, Hull, and the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull, MA 02045. Email address is hsar.org@hsar.org.

If you're interested in her or any of our felines, please check out our website at www.hsar.org.

Four-way school board contest is election highlight

What could have been a race for Water Commission between incumbent Nathaniel Palmer and Christopher Seebeck of 36 Riverview Drive came up dry. Two-term Water Commissioner Nathaniel Palmer did not return his nomination papers to the Town Clerk's office and will not be running for re-election.

"I spoke with Chris (Seebeck) at length and I felt good about him coming into the role and felt good about the board as a whole," Palmer said in a phone interview. He said his growing family and increased work responsibility also weighed into his decision to step down.

The other race that could have been for the Board of Library Trustees may fall flat as well. Assistant Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre said Library Trustee candidate Henry Rattenbury intends to withdraw his name.

Candidates have until Monday, March 1 to withdraw and not have their name appear on the April 10 ballot.

There will be at least one sticker, or write-in, campaign for the one seat that does not have a candidate. Maria Osborne of 22 Spring St. told the Mariner this week she intends to seek the one-year term seat on the Recreation Commission. Current appointed member Andrew Quigley pulled papers to run for seat, but later bowed out.

This is the first time in four years there has been a balloted race for a School Committee seat.

Osborne grew up in Cohasset as Maria Kierce and recently moved back into town with her young family. As a kid, she spent her summers at the Old Osgood School Recreation Program.

"I have fond memories of how much fun it was," Osborne said. Her kids, Kyle, 8, and Mackenzie, 7, were introduced to the Cohasset community this past summer through the summer recreation program.

"It's amazing what they are doing now with their programming. There are all different kinds of activities – really different creative avenues for kids, and it's affordable," Osborne said. "I want to give back to the community and rec programs that have given back to me."

Town election will be held on Saturday, April 10.

Below are the candidates in detail:

- Library Trustees (three three-year terms): Sarah Pease of Sankey Road, Stacey Weaver of Nichols Road, Henry Rattenbury of Briarwood Lane and Teresa Polhemus of Tad Lane.
- Recreation Commission (one five-year term): Abigail Alves of Stockbridge St.
- Board of Selectmen (two three-year terms): Paul Carlson of Old Coach Road and Leland Jenkins of Jerusalem Road.
- Housing Authority (one five-year term): Helen "Taffy" Nothnagle of Atlantic Ave.
- Planning Board (one five-year term): Stuart Ivimey of Sankey Road.
- Planning Board associate member (one three-year term): William Hannon of Linden Drive.
- Sewer Commission (one three-year term): James Dow of North Main St.
- Water Commission (one three-year term): Christopher Seebeck of Riverview Drive.
- Board of Assessors (one three-year term): Elsa Miller of Reservoir Road.
- Board of Health (one three-year term): Steve Bobo of Jerusalem Road.

*School Committee (two three-year terms): Linda Snowdale of Mill Lane, Adrienne MacCarthy of Doane St., Paul Ognibene of Beach St. and Jeanne Astino of Flintrock Ridge Road.

*Denotes confirmed race for that position(s).

Friday, March 5, 2009 is the last day to register for the Annual Town Meeting to be held on Saturday, March 27, 2010 and for the Annual Town Election to be held on Saturday, April 10, 2010.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Astino announces new website

Jeanne Astino, a candidate for School Committee in Cohasset, is pleased to announce that she has a website up and running. The website has been designed for townspeople to learn more about her and where she stands on issues and challenges facing our schools. This website can be accessed at www.astino.info .

The website is also intended as an interactive exchange of information and the site contains the first in a series of short surveys designed to hear your thoughts on our schools. Jeanne invites all to visit the site, read about her and take the first survey. In the near future there will be others geared toward students and teachers. From time to time the content will change slightly, so check back periodically to see what might be new. The page contains a link to her email address also, and Jeanne welcomes the opportunity to discuss your thoughts and concerns about our schools via email (jeanneastino@gmail.com) or by telephone at 781-383-2206.

Palmer steps down from water board

The following is an announcement from Water Commissioner Nathaniel Palmer.

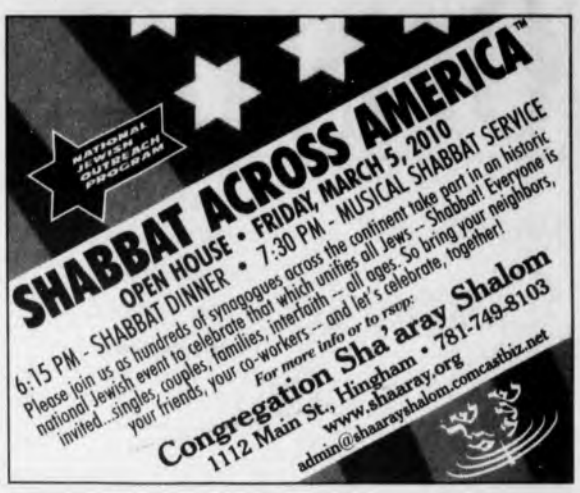
"It is with mixed emotions, among them sense of confidence in both my fellow Commissioners and my successor, that I announce I will not be seeking a third term as Water Commissioner. Having now had the opportunity to speak at great length with Chris Seebeck, I am confidant he will serve our town well. With my family doubling in size over the past six years, and with my professional obligations having also grown considerably, I am thankful for the chance to help facilitate that opportunity for Mr. Seebeck, as well as to ensure continuity among the board.

"Over the past six years, what we have accomplished as a board represents an extraordinary transformation. It was not that long before I was first elected that nearly half the water produced could not be accounted for, that in many places throughout town there was not sufficient water pressure to fight a fire (a fact proven out through tragedy) and on one fateful day it was impossible to deliver water at all to many homes. The quality of Cohasset's water earned it few fans, yet worse is that it would have had no chance of meeting the far stricter regulatory and safety standards in place today.

"The culmination of these events necessitated of one the greatest turn-around initiatives in our town's long history, one that required the reversal of literally generations of neglect, and one that I am proud to have been a part of. I hold a debt of gratitude for my fellow commissioners for the commitment, contributions and personal sacrifice I have watched them make over the last six years. When I first ran for this office I had hoped, but also wondered if, one person could actually make a difference. Now, I believe that indeed one can, but far more important is the dedication of the team. I grateful for the chance to be a part of the team we have in place. For those who have not taken the plunge into this 350-year experiment of small town, self-government, I can only encourage you to do so."

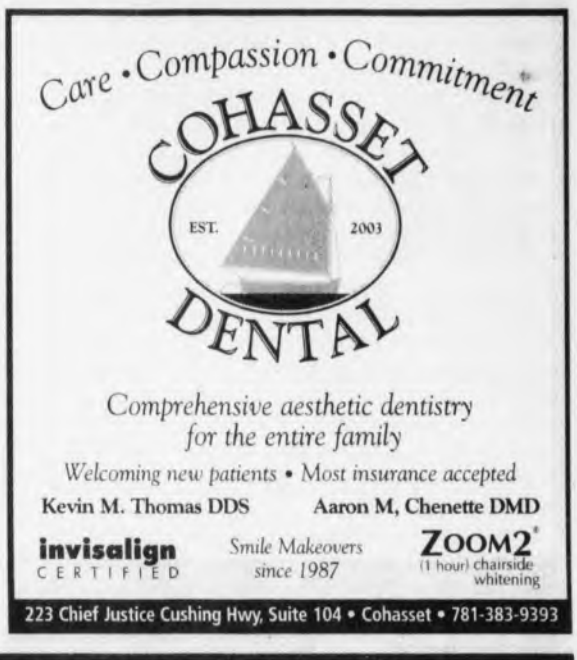
Gulf Association reaffirms Marshland Hunting Regulations

At the February meeting of the board of the Gulf Association the problem of hunting in the Gulf River marshes in both Scituate and Cohasset was discussed. On two occasions, October 2009 and December 2010, two hunters were observed shooting waterfowl along the Gulf River.



On the first occasion hunters were situated on the Cohasset side of the marsh. Cohasset Police were called and went forward with an investigation of the hunting issue. Hunters were allowed to remain on that occasion as they were viewed to be more than 500 feet from any dwellings. Upon further review of the situation, the police and environmental officer became aware of zoning article 47 that was passed by vote of Town Meeting in April 1978. Article 47 stipulates that there is no hunting allowed on the Cohasset side of the Gulf River Marsh. Further, it was learned that the Town of Scituate had also outlawed hunting on the Scituate side of the Gulf River Marsh according to public safety bylaw #30100.

At the February meeting of the board of the Gulf Association it was felt by board members that many people living along the Gulf River were not aware of the zoning regulations prohibiting hunting on the Gulf River Marsh. Efforts are being made by the association to rectify that situation. Those living along or near the Gulf River are encouraged to post their own land with "no hunting signs" and to inform police immediately should they see or hear firearms being discharged anywhere along the Gulf River.



Organic farming and gardening course

The South Shore Community Center will offer a new and exciting course this coming spring – Organic Farming and Gardening at Holly Hill Farm with John Belber. This is an opportunity for adults and families who wish to learn about working in a garden, while at the same time — help others in their community. This program will feature hands-on opportunities for participants to grow seeds, start seedlings, discuss soil and compost, prepare growing beds, transplant and discuss garden plans. Each participant will be able to take plants and plans home or be part of a community garden where some of the produce will go to a local food pantry. The session will end with a "salad party" in May.

This six-week course will take place at Holly Hill Farm beginning on Sunday, April 25 from 2 to 3:30 p.m. The cost is $150 per person with children ages 4 to 12 free when accompanying an adult participant. There is also a $20 materials fee payable to Holly Hill at the first class, which will cover seeds, pots and soil for the complete session. Call 781-383-0088 to register or stop by the Center at 3 North Main St.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

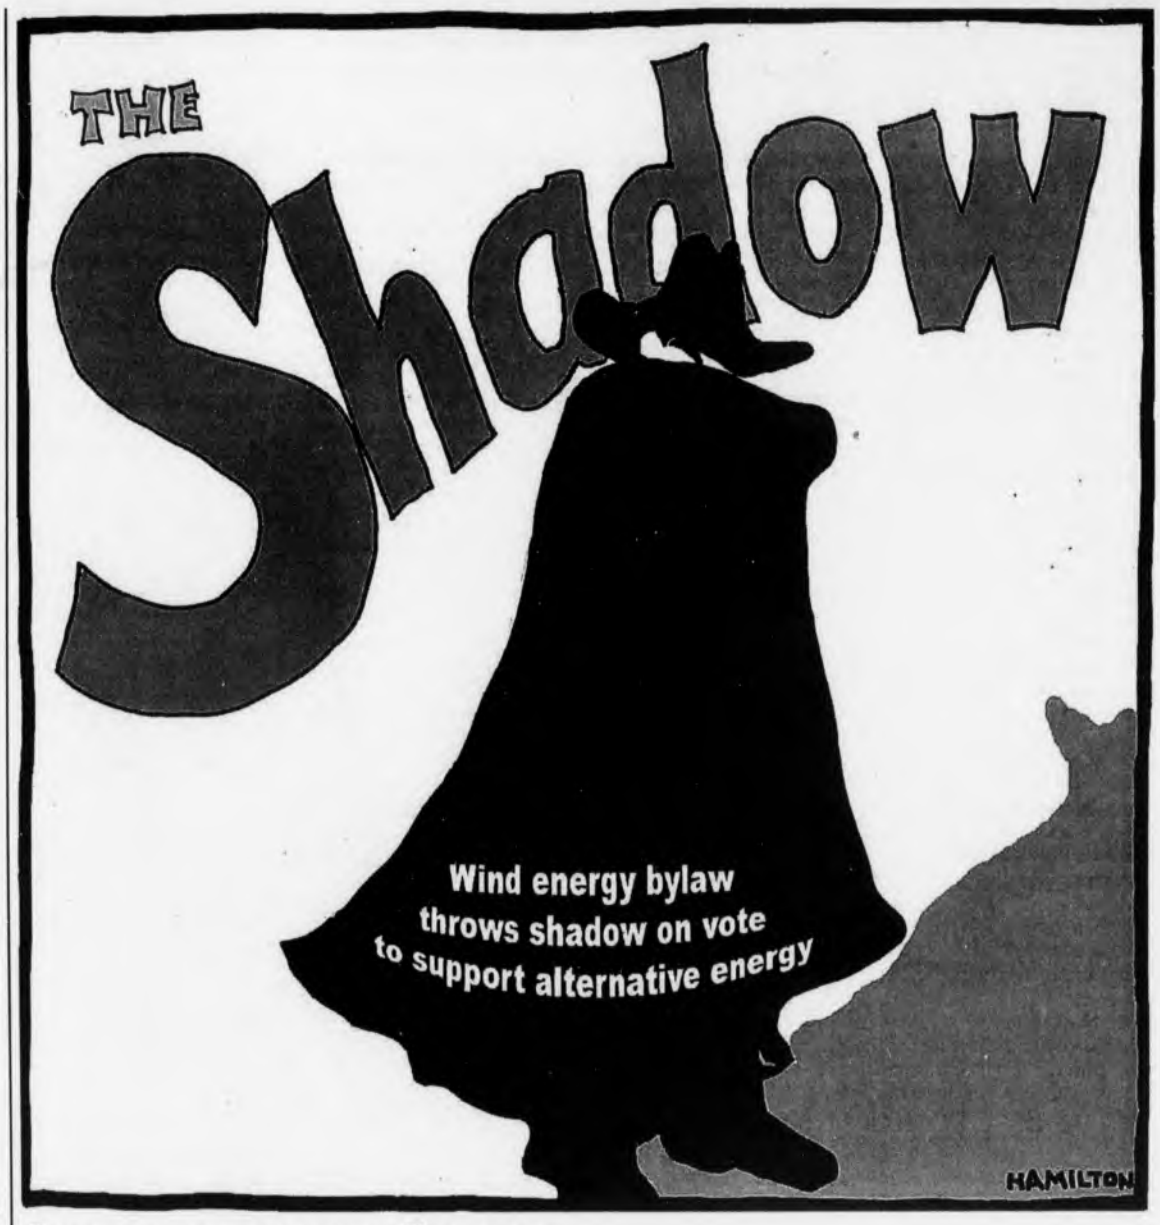
Come to your census

Stand up and be counted. Or sit down, or lie prone. It doesn't really matter, as long as you're counted.

Hopefully by now you know the U.S. government is gearing up to collect data for the 2010 Census. In March, the U.S. Census will be delivered to every residence in the country. All you need to do is take the 10 minutes or so to answer the 10 questions on the form.

That 10 minutes could add up to money down the road for your community and may help decide whether Massachusetts keeps its current level of representation in the U.S. House of Representatives.

The federal census is different than the local census, which is conducted yearly, and is an important determining factor for distribution of federal funds. Beyond the $400 billion per year potentially up for grabs for state and local governments over the next 10 years, the outcome of the census could also shift the balance of power in the U.S. House of Representatives. If Massachusetts sees a significant dip in population from the 2000 U.S. Census, as some experts have predicted, it could potentially cost Massachusetts a seat in the U.S. House. The census is also used to define the state's legislative districts and other important functional areas of state and local government.



The 2010 Census questionnaire is one of the shortest in history, rivaling the length and scope of questions asked in the very first census, administered in 1790.

Here's how it works: Each member in the household answers seven questions: name, gender, race, ethnicity, and whether they sometimes live somewhere else. The head of household answers how many people live in the residence, whether it is a house, apartment, or mobile home, and provides a telephone number for Census workers to follow up if any information is incomplete or missing.

Accurate data is essential, so it's imperative everyone takes the time to fill out the form. The last time the U.S. Census was taken, Massachusetts had a 74 percent participation rate, slightly above the national average of 72 percent participation. That's not good enough. While 100 percent participation is an unrealistic goal, it certainly is reasonable to expect 80-85 percent participation in this important exercise with so much on the line.

You can start by doing your part and making sure you fill out the questionnaire and return it in a timely fashion. April 1 is being targeted as Census Day. Consider that day the deadline for returning the census. By mid-April through July, you can expect census takers to visit households that do not return the questionnaires and take a household count in person.

The state is serious about the federal census this time around. You should take it seriously as well.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Questions about new Verizon 'fee'

TO THE EDITOR:

Today's Verizon bill, on page four [eight pt. type I think] informed me that "Effective with your March bill, Verizon will collect a monthly fee of $1.26 per telephone line on residence customer bills to help defray the cost of a new local property tax that Massachusetts cities and towns now levy on Verizon's telephone poles and wires located on public property. State law permits but does not require Verizon to pass along this new local tax."

Gee, I wish I could pass along this new tax assessed by the state on Verizon but paid by me. Clearly ratepayers are the lowest step on the food chain. It actually reminds me of Cohasset's debate on placing utility wires underground. At a televised selectmen's meeting Merle Brown rose to object when one discussant thought the selectmen ought to consider going along with the idea that the town would go forward with the "undergrounding" of the wires and permit the utilities to pass the cost along to the town residents in their utility bills. Wow, that is a very creative way to avoid town meeting! But saner heads prevailed and the selectmen dropped that notion. Thanks Merle.

Still, Verizon's note to me got me thinking. Walking my dog for 15 years I noticed that many if not most of the poles in my neighborhood are/were owned by Eastern Edison [they had little plaques saying so nailed to the poles]. Of course, Eastern Edison was then a division of Massachusetts Electric. So my question to any lawyers out there is Verizon adding a blanket tax pass-along to all Verizon users in Massachusetts even when the locality in which the Verizon customer lives is a town in which Verizon owns no poles?

Now a $1.26 per phone line seems minuscule. But multiplied by the number of Verizon customers (let's say one million in Massachusetts as a working number) means $1,260,000 will be paid to the state via a tax on a private business which has been "permitted" to pass on the tax burden to me. Come on! Shame on the lawmakers.

My question to fellow Cohasset residents is this: Can I deduct this tax on my income tax form since Verizon doesn't even attempt to hide this "new tax" by calling it a fee?

Soviet tactic on 'Obama-care'

TO THE EDITOR:

Rumors abound today of "Obama-care" shortly to be impelled upon us by a 51 Senatorial majority vote — rather than the usual 60 votes required for significant legislation.

The nation's health care is certainly a significant issue. However, the current approach of Congress is reportedly so anathema to the majority of citizens that the administration seems compelled to search for further stratagems for Congressional passage.

To amend some 2,000 pages in the present bill even with the aid of several cooperative Republicans would add many more controversial pages. Then to force the resulting 'mish mash' through Congress with the 51 votes of essentially one political organization suggest a Soviet tactic. This is not the morally creditable way we run our country on an issue so overwhelmingly vital and exorbitant.

Let's start again making use of the meditative minds of truly both political parties, now only illusory.

Support for Haiti relief appreciated

TO THE TOWN OF COHASSET:

Thank you so much to all who donated to Partners in Health at the high school Cabaret event at the Atlantica on Jan. 21. We raised $400! The money has been sent to Haiti to help the victims of the recent earthquake. We think it's wonderful how our community can come together to make a difference.

Thanks so much!

HEALTH NOTES

Black swans and disasters

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Lately, you may have seen the brightly lighted ships in the offing on Mass Bay at night. These are mainly liquid natural gas tankers bringing LNG to several sites off Boston. The trade has been going on since the 1970s and is now a fair fraction of the total volume of natural resources entering New England through Boston. Mayor Menino has commented on the trade as a hazard, particularly since the origin of one of the tankers is Yemen. For the record, although security for LNG in the early days of the 1970s may have been a bit casual, it is up to date now and exceedingly rigorous. Nevertheless, there could always be a Black Swan. In his book of the same name, N.N.Taleb warns us that although, we are now collecting more data than ever in history and it is undergoing ever more refined processing, our traditions, heritage and humanity frequently cause facts about impending disasters like 9-11; epidemics like autism and diabetes, or the earthquake in Haiti, to arrive unheralded. Probably the greatest health related black swan was the plague called the Black Death one of the deadliest pandemics in human history, peaking in Europe between 1348 and 1350. The Black Death is estimated to have killed 30 to 60 percent of Europe's population, reducing world population from an estimated 450 million to between 350 and 375 million in 1400.

Taleb calls such events black swans based on the fact that in England, where most sophisticated literature was being produced in the industrial age, no one had ever heard of swans being any color but white. Black swans existed in other countries — unreported or noticed, but not in England.

It seems that human beings, because of the vast combination of precocious attributes, memory, cognition strength, ability to create avenues of science and technology and create beauty and ugliness, we are frequently unable to predict or protect ourselves from the most egregious of disasters. Thus: black swans.

Implications for Cohasset geographically attractive, drawing the affluent, with a combination of old and what's known, blessingly not specified, as "new" and "old" wealth. Full of slim, attractive women aging gracefully and exercising appropriately. Men, mostly in good health, but with little inclination to provide broad support for political goals or government service. Our children; healthy and well educated, but with a high incidence of self-indulgence as observed by the increasing numbers of drug related incidents. Such a definition cannot define the diversity of backgrounds from which such a population is taken. There is, however, a coherence of sentiment, which might offer a breeding ground for black swans.

Taleb calls such events black swans based on the fact that in England, where most sophisticated literature was being produced in the industrial age, no one had ever heard of swans being any color but white.

We're a population made up of individuals with equal background and attributes, the town could never produce men which, seeing a need, would raise a large sum of money for a turf field at the high school to benefit many of Cohasset's neediest youngsters. It would never produce a postal worker whose offspring now manages a major Boston engineering company. We would never have the son of a doctor with war service as captain of a warship in wartime that gave us a son who turned out to be a skilled trader in one of the most important commodities of the current century.

We also, for some reason, have spawned organizations, which may deflect black swans or at least limit their effect. We have a group of people who propose ownership of a lighthouse to ensure its natural weathering rather than modernization. We have two men's groups: one with a topsy turvy demographic , and another named after a type of singer where the members don't sing. Cohasset has some of the most outlandish and improbable citizens it's possible to have in one place. Hopefully it'll be proof against black swans. Who Knows?

By the way, the reason the ships are so brightly lighted is in part because most skippers have a terror of having any small craft running in close alongside and causing a black swan event.

For more information call Tara Tradd at 383-4116.

For the record, Steve Bobo made technical integrity inspections on every LNG tanker in service to the United States until about 1986.

Steve Bobo is a long-time member of the Cohasset Board of Health.

Morning visit from a giant

COMMENTARY

JOHN NESTEL

Early on a Tuesday morning I was waking from a deep slumber and looked up into the tree visible from the French doors in front of my bed. An enormous bird was perched on a branch with its large talons holding on and seemed to be peering down on me. At first I was taken back by such a large presence up high in the tree as I had only seen small birds and nothing larger than a cackling black crow from time to time. At night we had heard sounds of what seemed to be an owl and thought maybe this owl had come to visit. Quickly I awakened my 6-year-old daughter to share in this rare and beautiful moment. She came into the room sleepy eyed and when able to focus on the enormous bird showed the expression of a small child opening a grand birthday present.

As we watched what we determined to be a mammoth hawk take in the sights of its surroundings we then witnessed something unusual. Black crows that are frequent inhabitants of this same tree circled the hawk and landed on different branches enveloping it. They began cawing in an effort to intimidate the great bird and assert territorial boundaries. The massive hawk of course could shred one of these crows in seconds with its huge sharp talons clearly visible to us from inside the house. The hawk lingered in defiance of the crows for long enough to communicate it was not scared of them but then spread its wings and flew to a denser tree across the street. A few minutes later, now downstairs, my daughter yelled with excitement that the hawk had returned and when I came to view it I noticed that this was another hawk slightly smaller in size but with similar markings and possibly the mate of our previous visitor. It stayed long enough for me to snap some nice pictures and then left with a branch in its beak for the very same tree that its predecessor had gone to.

We were all left in awe of a special display that nature had bestowed to start our day and realized that it makes sense to look up at the trees every now and then.

John Nestel lives at 692 Jerusalem Road.

Showing proper respect for our flag

VETERANS
JOE MCELROY

The laws relating to the flag of the United States of America are found in detail in the United States Code. The code can be found by using a search engine on the Internet. The following are some "dos" and "don'ts."

"No disrespect should be shown to the flag of the United States of America. The flag represents a living country and is itself considered a living thing."

"Flags should never be worn unless it is in the form of a patch for a uniform or a lapel pin, worn on the left lapel close to the wearer's heart. "The flag should never be used as wearing apparel, bedding or drapery."

"The flag should never have placed upon it, nor on any part of it, nor attached to it any mark, insignia, letter, word, figure, design, picture or drawing of any nature."

When the flag passes in a procession, or when it is hoisted or lowered, all should face the flag and salute. To salute, all persons come to attention. Those in uniform and veterans give the appropriate formal salute. Citizens not in uniform salute by placing their right hand over the heart and men with head cover should remove it and hold it to left shoulder, hand over the heart. Members of organizations in formation salute upon command of the person in charge.

The Pledge of Allegiance should be rendered by standing at attention, facing the flag, and saluting.

When the national anthem is played or sung, citizens should stand at attention, salute at the first note, and hold the salute through the last note. The salute is directed to the flag, if displayed, otherwise to the music.

"The flag, when it is in such condition that it is no longer a fitting emblem for display, should be destroyed in a dignified way, preferably by burning."

"The flag, when it is in such condition that it is no longer a fitting emblem for display, should be destroyed in a dignified way, preferably by burning."

"No other flag or pennant should be placed above or, if on the same level, to the right of the flag of the United States of America. [The flag's own right]"

"When the flag is displayed on a motorcar, the staff shall be fixed firmly to the chassis or clamped to the right fender."

Other things to remember: Flags should never be flown in inclement weather unless they are an all-weather material. If flying the flag at night, it needs to be illuminated and the flag should always be at the peak of the flagpole unless ordered to half-staff by the President of the United States or the Governor of the state. The flag should never touch anything below it. The flag should never be dipped to anyone or anything. It should never be carried flat or horizontally, it should always be aloft and free.

When the flag becomes tattered or torn, it should be respectfully retired. The Cohasset American Legion has a drop-off box for worn flags. The Legion will respectfully dispose of those turned in.

Half-truths on nuclear power plants

COMMENTARY

PAT GRANAHAN

My dear Mr. President:

I thought the nuclear dinosaur monster was buried for good. Now, after 30 years, you have unleashed this nightmare upon us once again.

The renowned Dante Aligheri, in his Inferno, wrote: "The hottest places in hell are reserved for those, who, in time of great moral crisis, maintain their neutrality." I have been comfortable in neutral for 30 years, so now the time has come for me to get into high gear once again.

When you announced the proposed construction of twin nuclear power plants in Georgia with a last sentence jaw-dropper. "Nuclear plants produce no carbon emissions", it as if you had uttered Commandment No 11. Mr. President, that sentence has a ring of truth to it, but it is a half-truth at best. We cannot deal with half-truths and survive.

Your words are like heavy stones upon me.

What you did not say:

Plutonium (not carbon dioxide which pales in comparison) is the byproduct of nuclear plants.

Plutonium exists for half a million years.

There is no place to store plutonium safely.

Radiation releases (planned and unplanned) from nuclear power plants are a regular occurrence.

Radiation releases from power plants cause cancers.

Nor did you mention nuclear power plant accidents:

- Chernobyl, Russia
- Three Mile Island, Pennsylvania
- Brown's Ferry, Alabama
- Vermont Yankee's recent leaks of radioactive contamination into ground water.

Did you not know that after the atomic bomb there were leftovers in fission material and, dare I say, scientist without jobs? Thus the nuclear industry was born. The Atomic Energy Commission worked out a risk-benefit analysis in which the loss of lives was an acceptable tradeoff for the "safe" nuclear energy.

There is no evacuation plan from any nuclear plant in the United States. The cumbersome bureaucratic agencies involved in the planning were created to lull the public into thinking there was some place to go.

There is no evacuation plan from any nuclear plant in the United States.

In this time of financial crisis another bailout to the tune of $8.3 billion to help the builders of these plants in Georgia, not to mention the billions in next year's budget to jump-start the nuclear industry. Isn't the Price Anderson Act, which limits government's and corporations' liability in case of an accident sufficient?

The ordinary citizen struggles to insulate his/her house or apply solar panels. Most people have a nuclear exclusion clause on their homeowners' insurance policy. No coverage for us in case of an accident. We contribute to the decommissioning of power plants in our utility bills. What more can be asked of us?

As for "green" jobs whom are we kidding? Nuclear workers are at extremely high risk,

To promote these new nuclear plans you may have stepped across the aisle, but in doing so you stumbled badly,

I have dusted off. Dr. Helen Caldicott's primer, "Nuclear Madness"; Dr. Rosalie Bertelle's, "No Immediate Danger"; Dr. John Gofman's "Poisoned Power" and the late Howard Zinn's', "The Zinn Reader." Your nuclear advisors should dust off these same books before you and they make any further nuclear power decisions. I hesitate to suggest these be bedtime readings in the White House, but if you made them mandatory readings, I believe you and your advisors would be less irresponsible with our future.

I am going to take my four-wheel drive (a walker I use after knee surgery) and go to Georgia and camp out in protest. If you remember in the 1970s we formed the Clamshell Alliance, The Abalone Alliance, etc.

Now I am considering forming the Muscleshell Alliance. We may be older, but we still have muscle.

Alice Patricia Granahan, a Hingham resident, is Founder and President of REACH (Responsible Energy Alternatives Coalition of Hingham, founded in the 1970s to fight nuclear power).

SENIOR HAPPENINGS

Foot care program is March 3

For more information about these programs, please call the Senior Center, 3 N. Main St., at 781-383-9112.

March 3rd:

- Foot Care. Time: 11-11:30am. Presenter: Linda Krasner. Discussion of foot care offered by the Center
- 2010 Census — Time: 11:30-12noon. Presenter: Pedro De Jesus. Discussion of census data used to appropriate funding for senior needs.

March 10th — Meeting the New Police Chief. Time: 11-12noon. Presenter: Mark DeLuca, Cohasset Police Chief

March 17th — St. Patrick's Day Luncheon ($7). Time: 12-1:00pm Luncheon. Place: St. Anthony's Conference Center. 1-2 pm- Irish Step Dancers.

March 24th — Apothecare Pharmacy: Services for Seniors. Time: 11-12noon. Presenter: Jennifer Severance RN BSN. Discussion of free delivery service, pillbox preps and calls for renewal of prescriptions.

March 31st — Remembering When: A Fire and Prevention Program. Time: 11-12noon. Presenter: Robert Silvia, Cohasset Fire Chief.

Chair yoga — Kathy Dunn, an exercise instructor, will start Chair Yoga exercises on March 9th Tuesday (1-2pm). Chair Yoga will be offered every Tuesday (1-2pm) (fee $3.00 per session).

Please call 781-383-9112 to sign-up for the exercise sessions.

SPWA to host presentation

Straits Pond Watershed Association invites the public to "Plantings to Attract Birds" led by Sally Avery, Audubon volunteer and experienced birder; and Judy Dorner from Hull Garden Club. The focus will be on what to plant in order to attract birds around Straits Pond and adjacent communities.

The presentation will take place from 3:30 to 5 p.m., on Sunday, Feb. 28, at the Estuary Center, George Washington Boulevard, Hull. Refreshments will be served. For more information, call Sue Lofchie 781-9250535.

CMI receives grant from 1772 Foundation

Leading this renaissance is Richard Wilmore, who has just returned home from a successful career in Washington with the North West School of Wooden Boat Building.

Cohasset Maritime Institute, CMI, has received a restricted grant in the amount of $15,000 from the prestigious 1772 Foundation to revive Cohasset's historic craft of traditional wooden boat building. Given the Foundation's mission to preserve historic structures and historic craftsmanship, CMI's proposal to preserve the maritime craft of boatbuilding in America's official home to lifesaving was a natural fit, according to 1772 Foundation president Stan Geary. The boatbuilding program is scheduled to launch on April 1, 2010. Sign ups and information are available at the CMI website, www.rowcmi.com.

Cohasset is America's Official Home to Lifesaving. For over 200 years, the rocks off Cohasset have claimed boats of all descriptions leaving the crews and their skippers more wary, if still alive. By 1789, the Massachusetts Humane Society erected huts of refuge along the coast to sustain survivors until local townspeople came to their rescue. Further recognizing that this benevolent action was insufficient, the Humane Society established its very first lifesaving station at Cohasset in 1807, equipped with a 26', eight-oared surfboat for use by volunteer crews such as the one pictured on the left. CMI was conceived in 1994 to revive this unique maritime history by promoting traditional rowing, wooden boat building, and associated maritime skills. Thanks to Community Preservation Committee support and a town meeting endorsement to revive the town's historic boathouse (a former US Lighthouse Service boathouse and the home of renowned Hagerty rowing and sailing vessels), the building and rowing of traditional wooden craft is taking root once again in Cohasset. Leading this renaissance is Richard Wilmore, a Cohasset native and CHS graduate who has just returned home from a successful career in Washington with the North West School of Wooden Boat Building.

The inaugural program, building the Swampscott Dory, will be modeled after Mr. Wilmore's successful program at the North West School. Students may elect to sign up for all 10 building modules and participate in the construction of the project from lofting the lines to finishing the bright work. Others may want to simply jump in and out of the project as best fits personal schedules. Says Wilmore, "I'm really looking forward to launching our first traditional plank on frame boat in Cohasset, but I'm even more excited to think about growing a true community boat building program in my home town." Wilmore's goal is to teach students to build at least two new boats each year and to celebrate the launch of each vessel with the maritime community. Adds Jack Buckley, a CMI founder, "we will launch a true community boat building program to preserve the endangered art and science of traditional wooden boat building. We will not only bring Cohasset's unique maritime heritage to life, we will teach the students who join our program essential 21st century science, technology, engineering, and math (STEM) skills inherent in boat building." Quoting from the Partnership for 21st Century Learning, Buckley says the program seeks to be a home where young people can meet to combine "the wisdom of the past with the insights and technologies of today."

Register now for Road Race by the Sea

If running or walking is not your idea of fun, then please volunteer and help make the race the best it can be for all of our participants.

For 34 years Cohasset has been home to one of the most scenic 6.2-mile road race-courses in New England. This year on-line registrations are already double what they were at this time last year and race organizers expect a sell out within the next few weeks. So register now at www.roadracebythesea.com to secure your spot at this year's race, which takes place on Sunday, April 11th at 1 p.m.

There is also a fantastic family event and fun walk...the Fran Coffey Memorial Walk by the Sea, which starts and ends at Sandy Beach at 10 a.m. that same day. Walkers are encouraged to register on line at www.roadracebythesea.com

If running or walking is not your idea of fun, then please volunteer and help make the race the best it can be for all of our participants. If you have a group of friends, family or coworkers who would like to help out at registration, water-stops or offer support along the route, please contact roadracebythesea@gmail.com

This race is a Cohasset tradition and registering on race day used to be standard Cohasset practice. However, races all over the country are enjoying sell out fields and our 6.2-mile course which winds along the beautiful Atlantic coastline is sure to be part of the trend. This year the race is capped at1770, the year in which this town was incorporated. The number of registered runners is well on its way toward reaching that field size limit. So if the Cohasset Rotary Road Race by the Sea 10K is on your list of "must do" events for 2010 please register now! Don't allow your hometown race to start with out you! Haiti relief subject of library talk

Join Ali Lutz, Haiti Coordinator for Partners in Health, as she presents a slide show and lecture of the work being done in Haiti on Sunday, March 7 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. at the library.

When the Project Committee of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library chose Tracy Kidder's Mountains Beyond Mountains last summer as the selection for the 2010 Cohasset Reads Together town-wide reading program it was because they believed Kidder's incredible biography of Dr. Paul Farmer, and his work in Haiti were worthy of a community conversation and could possibly raise awareness of an old crisis. Now, in a tragic irony, the library's scheduled programs that focus on Haiti, and Dr. Farmer's organization, Partners in Health, have taken on a profoundly new significance, as our town, and indeed the world, has a renewed focus on what we can all do to help this small country.

Join Ali Lutz, Haiti Coordinator for Partners in Health, as she presents a slide show and lecture of the work being done in Haiti on Sunday, March 7 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. in the Meeting Room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Dr. Paul Farmer founded Partners In Health in 1987 by along with Thomas J. White, and Todd McCormack, joined soon thereafter by Ophelia Dahl and Jim Yong Kim. The history of Partners In Health is recounted in Kidder's Pulitzer Prize winning book.

"Partners in Health as an organization that provides comprehensive healthcare to some of the poorest communities in the world. We don't just treat disease we tackle the root causes of disease, which is poverty," says Lutz in a recent interview. "Even when Haiti is no longer on the front page there will still be millions of people who need to rebuild their lives."

It was Mountains Beyond Mountains that inspired Lutz to work at Partners in Health. Her work in Haiti, and that of her colleagues is truly an inspiration. Lutz spent two weeks there coordinating medical care after the earthquake. Her talk will include her first hand account on the earthquake's short and long term affects on the people of Haiti.

Ali Lutz is a speaker who is not to be missed. The talk is part of Cohasset Reads Together, sponsored by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Visit www.cohassetlibrary.org for more information. The event is free and open to the public. Light refreshments will be served.

CSCR teams up with NOAA oceanographer

CSCR will receive a response to its Letter of Intent in early March. In the meantime, a pilot version of the project will go forward.

In many ways, the recent State of the Harbor Forum functioned as a needs assessment concerning problems in Cohasset Harbor. Foremost among the concerns expressed by panelists and audience members were excessive volumes of fresh water flowing into Cohasset Harbor, questionable tidal exchange, a degraded habitat, and closed shellfish beds. CSCR has already undertaken two significant efforts to address citizen concerns about Cohasset harbor tidal flushing and salinity values.

NOAA oceanographer Jim Manning, UMASS Boston research assistant and CHS graduate Grant Emde, and CSCR president Jack Buckley submitted a Letter of Intent to NOAA's Environmental Literacy Grant program requesting $250,000 over five years to conduct and complete a tidal flushing study of Cohasset and Massachusetts Bays waters. Jim is an oceanographer whose specialty in tracking, displaying, and predicting, i.e., modeling Gulf of Maine currents directly benefits lobstermen throughout Massachusetts Bay. Mr. Manning's work with lobstermen in the Gulf of Maine can be viewed at the following links. The eMOLT project: http://www.emolt.org; www.nefsc.noaa.gov/epd/ocean/MainPage/DrifterUpdates.html

CSCR will receive a response to its Letter of Intent in early March. At that time, reviewers will inform CSCR if it has a viable project worthy of a full proposal. In the meantime, a pilot version of the project will go forward. Jim Manning, Grant Emde, and CSCR students and staff will launch a pilot study of Cohasset harbor salinity and surface and bottom tidal currents utilizing technologies developed by Manning and his colleagues (current "drifters" and bottom current meters, in conjunction with YSI probes and GIS hand held devices, thanks to the training and good will of the Cohasset Water Department). The pilot project will begin as early as mid-March, but the bulk of research will take place during the spring and summer.

Students interested in participating in this exciting research project should contact CSCR at 40 Parker Ave, Cohasset, MA 02025 or e-mail jcbuckleyjr@gmail.com.

THE HOUSE AND SENATE. Last week was a very slow one on Beacon Hill as the House and Senate met only in brief, informal sessions.

The Legislature for many years has not scheduled any formal important sessions during the February school vacation week.

The official list from the state treasurer's office of "per diems" collected by 160 state representatives in 2009 for "mileage, meals and lodging" expenses reveals that House lawmakers have collected a total of $474,383. Per diems are paid by the state to representatives "for each day for travel from his place of residence to the Statehouse and return therefrom, while in the performance of his official duties, upon certification to the state treasurer that he was present at the Statehouse."

These per diems are paid to representatives above and beyond their annual base salary that in January 2009 was raised 5.5 percent from $58,236 to $61,439 under the terms of a constitutional amendment approved by the voters in 1998. The amendment requires legislative salaries to be increased or decreased biennially at the same rate as the state's median household income.

The new $61,439 salary represents an increase of $15,029 or 32 percent over the $46,410 salary that legislators received following approval of the constitutional amendment in 1998.

In addition, 62 representatives or nearly 40 percent of the 160 House members also receive additional stipends ranging from $7,500 to $35,000 for serving as committee chairs or in other leadership positions. This group includes 53 Democrats and nine GOP members.

The 2009 statistics indicate that representatives received annual per diem payments ranging from $20 to $14,900. All 16 Republican representatives collected per diems. Of the chamber's 144 Democrats, 108 collected per diems while 36 Democrats have so far chosen not to apply for any money. State law does not establish a deadline that representatives must meet in order to collect the per diems.

The amount of the per diem varies and is based on the city or town in which a representative resides and its distance from the Statehouse. These payments are taxable and range from $10 per day for representatives who reside in the Greater Boston area to $90 for some Western Massachusetts lawmakers and $100 for those in Nantucket. Representatives who are from areas that are a long distance from Boston's Statehouse often are the ones who collect the highest total of annual per diems. The Legislature in 2000 approved the doubling of these per diems to the current amounts.

Supporters of per diems say that it is a reasonable practice. They note that per diems had not been raised for many years despite the rising costs of travel, food and lodging.

Opponents say that the very idea of paying legislators to drive to work is ridiculous - especially in light of the recession and the state's economy that have led to recent budget cuts of more than $1 billion and the loss of thousands of jobs. They note that other state workers and most private workers are not paid additional money for commuting to and from work.

The representative who received the most money in 2009 is Rep. Timothy Madden (D-Nantucket) with $14,900. The other top 13 recipients who top the $7,000 mark include Reps. Daniel Bosley (D-North Adams) $13,860; William "Smitty" Pignatelli (D-Lenox) $9,360; Denis Guyer (D-Dalton) $8,938; John Fresolo (D-Worcester) $8,712; Ellen Story (D-Amherst) $8,640; John Binienda (D-Worcester) $8,424; Joseph Wagner (D-Chicopee) $8,160; Christopher Donelan (D-Orange) $8,100; John Scibak (D-South Hadley) $7,860; Sarah Peake (D-Provincetown) $7,844; Todd Smola (R-Palmer) $7,500; Demetrius Atsalis (D-Barnstable) $7,300 and Robert Koczera D-New Bedford) $7,245.

LOCAL REPRESENTATIVES' PER DIEMS FOR MILEAGE, MEALS AND LODGING IN 2009

The dollar figure next to the representative's name represents the total amount of per diem money that the state paid the legislator in 2009. The number in parentheses represents the number of days that the representative certified that he or she was at the Statehouse in 2009.

A total of 36 of the state's 160 representatives did not list any days and did not request any per diems. This should not be construed to mean that they were never at the Statehouse in 2009. It simply means that they chose not to list the number of days and not to request their per diems.

BAN CIRCUMCISION (S 1777) - A public hearing is scheduled for March 2 on a measure filed by private citizen Charles Antonelli of Quincy that would ban male circumcision of anyone under the age of 18 unless medically necessary. The measure imposes a fine and/or up to 14 years in prison on anyone who violates this ban. Antonelli is the Massachusetts director of MGMbill.org - a group working to ban what it calls "male genital mutilation."

ALLOW RESIDENT ALIENS TO VOTE (H 4306) - The Election Laws Committee held a hearing on a bill, already approved by Amherst's town meeting, that would allow resident aliens over 18 years of age to vote in local Amherst elections including ballot questions and races for School Committee and Selectman.

A resident alien is a legal foreigner who is a resident of the United States but does not have citizenship. The person would have to have a green card or have been in the United States for more than 31 days during the current year along with having been in the country for at least 183 days over a three-year period that includes the current year.

Plaza hearings plug along

Parking, fire lane discussed

By Nancy White

The application for a 30,000-square-foot building to be located to the rear of the property (pictured here) between the other buildings at Cohasset Plaza is currently before the planning board for a site plan review.

Not much new was presented at the second public hearing for a new building being proposed at Cohasset Plaza on Route 3A.

The application for a 30,000-square-foot building located to the rear of the property between the other two already-built buildings is currently before the planning board for site plan review.

Parking, traffic impacts and screening options were some of the topics of discussion.

There are currently 542 parking spaces on the site with the new building about 79 spaces will be eliminated. The plan adds an addition 32 spaces for a total of 495, which complies with the parking bylaw.

Planning Board chair Al Moore said he wanted to make sure that even with the newly created parking spaces, the plaza kept intact the "green space" that makes the shopping plaza attractive. Civil engineer for the project, Jack O'Leary of Merrill Associates, said they didn't need to touch the existing green space to create the new spaces.

"If you're not touching (the green spaces) that makes me somewhat at ease," Moore said.

Moore pointed out that although in the past the plaza has had excess parking, allowing the Christmas trees to be sold there during the holiday season, with the new configuration that might not be possible.

One of Moore's other concerns with the parking was ensuring the approved drive-thru, which used to belong to Dunkin' Donuts, was taken into account in the parking configuration.

Parking, traffic impacts and screening options were some of the topics of discussion.

Planning board member Clark Brewer has some aesthetic concerns about the fire lane proposed for the rear of the building. The plans call for a fire lane bordered by a 12-foot retaining wall.

"It's a nasty area…I'm wondering if there is a way of combining screening with the site design," Brewer said. "I just picture an old Ruffles potato chip bag rolling around there and think there is something better than that (design-wise)."

O'Leary said they would look into other options to spruce up the rear of the building.

The project plans to meet with the Design Review Board and the Conservation Commission for consideration for a stormwater permit in the coming weeks, before coming back to the Planning Board.

Attorney for the project, Charles Humphreys, said there are currently no specific tenants for the proposed building, but they intend to seek three larger tenants to occupy the space. He said the new building will allow the landlord to offer tenants space that is three times the size of the current space available at the plaza.

The plaza, which currently has two large buildings at either end of the site, is home to Stop & Shop, Feng Shui, Papa Gino's, Blockbuster and others.

Town budget tight, but balanced

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"Our priority has been to do the best we can and still provide services for the town."
— Town Manager Bill Griffin

The town services side of the budget is tight, but Town Manager Bill Griffin said the budget he is sending to Town Meeting is a balanced one.

The fiscal 2011 town operating budget was revealed on Monday night at the Board of Selectmen's meeting.

A recommended figure of $8,780,899 is recommended for general government budget, an increase of 2.3 percent, or $200,483, over fiscal 2010.

Early in the budget process, Griffin asked department heads to prepare level-funded budgets with ideas on how the budget could be reduced 5 percent.

"Our priority has been to do the best we can and still provide services for the town. The budget is tight and it has been balanced with sacrifice," Griffin said. "It still falls short of all department needs."

He commended the department heads for their hard work during the process.

There are still some outstanding budget pieces that will be finalized in the coming weeks. The school department and School Committee have not certified their budget for the coming year. They have a public hearing on the budget scheduled for this coming Wednesday, March 3 to certify the budget for Town Meeting. The water and sewer departments, both enterprise funds, have not finalized their budgets either.

Through the allowed 2-1/2 percent increase in the tax levy allowed under Proposition 2-1/2 and $325,000 of projected new growth, which includes the new commercial development Old Colony Square on Route 3A, Griffin projects the new tax levy revenue to increase by $949,281.

Although Governor Deval Patrick's proposed budget outlined level funding of local aid, Griffin is taking a slightly more conservative tact. In his budget, he projects level funding for Chapter 70 state aid and a 5 percent reduction in the second state aid category dubbed General Assistance. The 5 percent reduction translates to about $12,000.

Local receipts are expected to be down $150,000, primarily in motor vehicle excise (which is down 7 percent year over year) and investment earnings

Griffin has been working toward weaning the town off its use of free cash to offset the budget. In fiscal 2011, the practice has been discontinued, largely, he quipped, because there isn't any of it to use.

At the same time, some budget line items are going up. Pension assessment is increasing by $46,000, retired teacher's health assessment is going up $5,000 and Medicare tax is rising $12,000. On the positive side, the cost of health insurance is staying level for the next fiscal year.

Griffin cited three areas of the budget that from consistently year after year demand more funding than they are allocated: police overtime, legal service and snow and ice.

"One thing we're trying to do once and for all, to the extent that we can, is to fully fund (those three areas)," Griffin said.

For example, of the $67,000 increase, or 4.52 percent, to the administrative services budget, $60,000 is devoted to legal services line item to more realistically budget the expense. In an $84,000 increase to the public safety budget, $60,000 is for the police overtime line item. And lastly, the DPW budget is increasing by $26,000, but $25,000 is earmarked for snow and ice.

The Board of Selectmen will review the budget and make their recommendation at their meeting on Monday, March 1.

Treat's Pond decision needed by April 15

The Army Corps of Engineers is seeking a final decision on whether the town would like to move forward with the proposed aquatic habitat restoration project at Treat's Pond. The deadline is April 15.

In 2006, a concept restoration plan and preliminary cost estimates were presented to the town. The project was a highly controversial throughout 2008. During the process the Board of Selectmen never committed to the project, but did not want to close the door on the approximately $1-million in funding the project would have brought to town.

In September, 2008 a letter was sent to the Army Corps indicating the town planned to discuss the project – and its associated options – at Special Town Meeting in November. Although five articles were drafted concerning the project and its options, the Selectmen ultimately pulled all the articles before the warrant went to press citing the need to greater discussion and education on the issue. The last official correspondence from the town to the Army Corps was that letter in Sept. 2008.

"Due to this inactivity, and the ongoing National demand, we must make the funds available for other restoration efforts," states John Kennelly, chief of planning for the Army Corps.

If the Army Corps does not receive a letter of support by April 15, the project will be terminated and funds re-programmed, the letter said.

Board of Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said this week he did not know when or if the board would discuss the topic.

The Army Corps project proposal is separate from the Sandy Cove easement sought and signed by the Board of Selectmen and a group of residents last year. The easement allows the town to access the end of the Treat's Pond drainage outfall on Sandy Cove.

ConComm looking for associate members

The Cohasset Conservation Commission is looking for interested citizens who want to serve as an associate member. There are two associate member positions currently available. The Conservation Commission enforces and administers the State Wetlands Protection Act, Cohasset Wetlands Bylaw and the Cohasset Stormwater Bylaw. Interested citizens should forward a letter of interest with their background to Jennifer Oram, Town Manager's Office in Town Hall. Associate members are appointed by the Board of Selectman.

Joining Get in Shape for Women is one of the best things I've done for myself. At first I was intimidated by all of the equipment and I didn't think I would be capable of using the weights and machinery. However, with the help and encouragement of my trainers, I not only began to lose weight but I have also gained strength and stamina. The atmosphere is warm and inviting and having a personal trainer is a great luxury. I would encourage other women to give yourself the gift of "Get in Shape for Women," you'll be glad you did.

Cohasset wrestlers qualify for All-States

Cohasset wrestlers Jack Murphy and Andrew Littauer qualified to wrestle at the All-State Wrestling Championship on Friday and Saturday in Salem.

Wrestling

Murphy finished second in the 145-pound division at Friday and Saturday's Div. 3 State Championship meet at their home mat in Cohasset and Littauer was sixth in the 152-pound division.

"We wrestled well," Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said. "Eight kids wrestled for us and all of them won at least one match."

Gus Helbock came close to advancing to the All-States, finishing eighth.

"Gus Helbock lost a heartbreaker in the consolation match," Sweeney said. "Cam Washak finished in the top eight too."

Murphy lost 10-5 in the finals to Pembroke's Pat Claflin.

"He's a tough kid," Murphy said of Claflin. "I've wrestled him many times before. We know each other's strengths and weaknesses. I guess he knew mine better than I knew his."

Still, Murphy felt he fought the good battle.

"I've faced him six times and every time I'm getting closer and closer," he said. "Hopefully I'll get another shot."

Murphy is excited about making All-States, although he would have liked to have won the title.

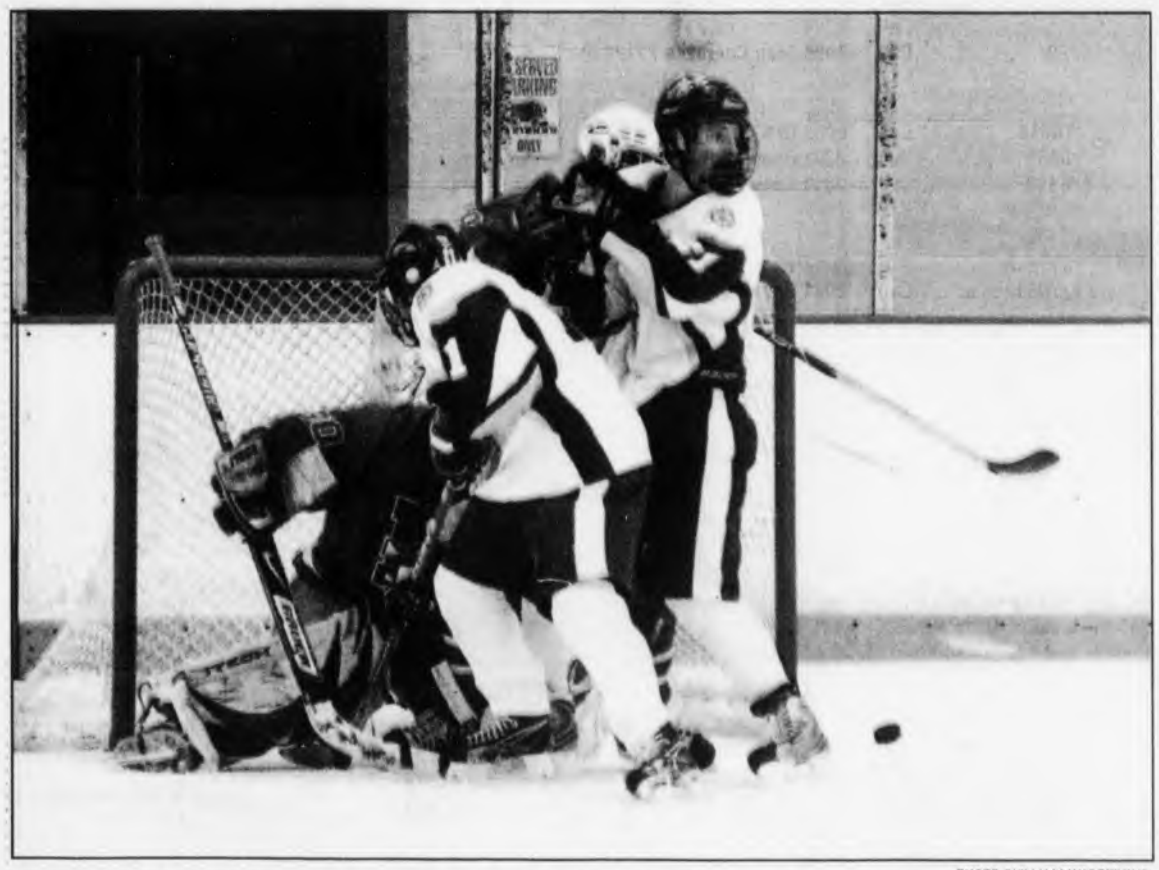
Icemen looking ahead after disappointing finish

The Cohasset Skippers dropped a hard fought 7-4, season ending loss to Mashpee last Friday to miss making the state tournament by one point.

As disappointed as the boys must be, coach Bob Walsh has to be encouraged about the future of the program.

Walsh can look forward to returning high scoring forwards Anders Goetz, Alex Evans, John Collins and Jamie Faber to pick up the slack left by graduating seniors Andy McKenna and Connor Queenan. Current juniors Andrew Whitney, Travers Craven, Tyler Judge, as well as sophomore Vinny Calorio are all solid contributers who will see considerably more ice time next year.



Hockey

Brian Scott, thought by many to be the premier defenseman in the South Shore league will be back for his senior year along with fellow seniors, hard hitting Sam Leahy and the always reliable Eric Bartucca.

Coleman Hernan and Brendan Kearney are both experienced blue liners that have huge upside potential. Coach Walsh must be thrilled to know that defenseman Sean McKenna will doling out crushing checks for the next two years.

The freshman class has Connor Goetz, Jack Kuppens and Ryan McGovern, to name just a few, that show great potential and we will undoubtedly be seeing their names on future scoresheets. Junior goalie Jack Nelson, who on short notice took on the goaltending duties left vacant by last years senior all league goalie Jonny Wade, consistently

The No. 1 seeded Cohasset girls basketball team opened their Div. 4 South Sectional tournament run with a 73-47 victory over No. 16 seed Harwich on Monday night at Cohasset.

The Skippers used a balanced attack with 12 points from Lindsey Davis, 13 from Samantha Crough to go with her nine boards and three blocks and 13 points from Meredith Kelly.

Cohasset improved to 21-0 and will face eighth-seeded West Bridgewater on Friday night at 7 p.m. at home.

NDA's Culhane qualifies for All-State track

NDA senior Courtney Culhane, of Cohasset, (No. 13) qualified to run the 2 mile at the MIAA All State Indoor Track Championship at the Reggie Lewis Center in Boston on February 26, 2010.

This is Courtney's first year running winter track (she took a break from ice hockey) and was very excited to qualify and run in states. Courtney received an early decision admittance in early December to Cornell University - class of 2014 - where she will study history and anthropology and plans to run marathons in the future.

improved as the year went along and should have a terrific senior year in net.

This year's tight knit team graduates five seniors, all of whom were great leaders. Harry Cipolla, arguably the team's fastest skater, was a constant menace to opposing teams with his relentless forechecking.

Harry was vitally important to the team in his role as a defensive forward, and his many contributions did not always show up in the scoresheet.

'"Harry Cipolla has been unbelievable," Walsh said during a break in the action in a win against Carver earlier in the season. "He's playing great hockey. For the first three years of his high school career he had limited playing time. This year he came on strong. He's become a great puck carrier and playmaker. This his senior year and he has all the confidence in the world. He's one of my favorite players to watch this year."

Walsh said Cipolla sets a perfect example for the team, especially when it comes to sacrifice.

We have a bigger team this year than we've had in the past," Walsh said. "Not everybody is going to dress for every varsity game. Some guys get upset by that. They think they should be playing. I tell them that nobody should complain unless they've been in Harry's shoes.

"As a freshman he played maybe four games. He suited up for 12 games as a sophomore and in his junior year he didn't play much. He kept working at it, making himself better and now he's our starting center. I'm proud of him."

Defenseman Geoff Evans returned to hockey his senior year after a three year hiatus from the sport. The rust wore off quickly for Geoff and he added valuable depth to the blue line with his consistent and steady play. Andrew McKenna was nothing short of a scoring machine this year.

His tenacious and hard nosed play and willingness to go to the net made him one of the league's top scorers. Connor Queenan will be sorely missed next year. A great two way player, he not only could put the puck in the net, but was relentless on the backcheck to help out the defense.

A special pat on the back has to go to Brendan Doonan. Brendan was coming off his junior year where he had in excess of thirty goals and was widely acknowledged to be one of the best players in the league. Unfortunately, Brendan suffered a season ending broken arm in just the third game, cutting short a great career. Brendan exemplified what it means to be a team captain, as he was at every game cheering on his teammates and offering encouragement.

Missing the tournament was certainly a disappointment, but with the pipeline filled with this much talent, the Skippers are sure to be back next year as one of the leagues top teams.

– FRESH START with Lucie Rice –

Ace certified personal trainer Lucie Rice demonstrates a hamstring stretch with Jane Pearson.

Part 5: Flexibility of the body, mind

All this information is great, but I am starting to feel that all of this is overwhelming. How can I re-focus and achieve my goals?

First and foremost, remember the most basic rule of fitness as it impacts health – some movement is better than none. So whatever you have begun doing is valuable.

How much time would I need to maintain/improve my flexibility?

The ACSM guideline on flexibility is to stretch 3-5 times per week or even daily if possible. It recommends static stretching for 15-30 seconds per target or major muscle muscles group. Static stretching is a continuous stretch (don't bounce and try to breathe) where you go to the point that you can feel the stretch and then you hold it for 15-30 seconds. You may experience discomfort, but avoid anything that is painful. Stretching is critical, especially as we age, to maintain overall flexibility and range of motion throughout the body. This might translate into 5-10 minutes of stretching per day 7 times per week or 3 times 20 minutes per week. It is best to stretch when your muscles are warm so it is the perfect post cardio or strength training warm-down. You can over-stretch so go slow at this activity as well as all others at first.

Can yoga improve flexibility?

There are many types of yoga, each with its own focus and history. Yoga can increase flexibility as well as build strength (maintaining certain yoga postures can build muscular strength through the use of body weight as resistance – think plank for all those who have tried yoga). Find what works for you.

Are there other ways to become flexible?

I was at my most flexible while studying for my black belt in martial arts. We did regular consistent stretching to develop our flexibility so that we could execute certain kicks and other strikes. I developed the ability to kick well over my head height. It also was the time in my life I learned true physical discipline-what a wonderful skill.

What do mean by flexibility of the mind?

I mean that to have success in improving your health and in maintaining that healthy lifestyle, you have to creative about how to make that happen in your life.

So when you say "flexibility of the mind", what you are really saying is that we are the masters of our own destiny when it comes to fitness?

Yes to some degree. We all have what I call limiters – areas of weakness or limit, sometimes they are physical, i.e. difficulty with ambulation, sometimes they are mental, i.e. .stepping into a gym, but we can overcome them all by finding a pathway through/around the limit. I evaluate the athletes I work with in the same way – I identify and strengthen areas of weakness. You can begin to direct you own health and fitness by engaging in movement, learning about exercise/fitness/health, seeking and receiving appropriate professional assistance. Flexibility in mind and body - think of the possibilities - think about ballroom dance – it will help your basic cardiovascular conditioning and improve your flexibility as you move in new/old ways- think outdoor gardening come spring, it will help with heart health, strength and flexibility- think of simple stretching for 10 minutes after brushing your teeth in the morning – think daily movement – think movement.

In the end, it sounds like you are saying that the "optimal goal" though is daily exercise. Is this true?

Yes and no. Daily movement is the goal, but that may not include formal exercise every day. If you painted your kitchen on Saturday and shoveled on Sunday you may be covered…

You have given us three areas to focus on: cardiovascular health, strength training and flexibility, are we done?

There is one more critical factor in health and it is nutrition. Next week's article will focus on the 4th central component to create and maintain fitness and health - nutrition and weight management.

Please send any updates about your progress, questions, thoughts, etc. to Lucie Rice at 781-635-6258 or luciericе63@comcast.net

Full-Time Professional and Mother Finds Time to Lose 15 Pounds!

I am a 50 year old working mother who has lost about 15 pounds here at Get In Shape. Working full time and being a mother of two teen children, it was hard to find time to take care of myself. On my 50th birthday I decided that 3 hours a week was a present I would give myself. Scheduling set times and having motivating trainers has worked for me. The results have been better than I expected. Working out with women my age who are my neighbors and friends has had the added benefit of being fun as well. This program works if you do the work and I would recommend it to anyone who wants to get in shape.

onship winner Nick Camby) in the record book, but this is big. It was good to beat the No. three seed and the kid from Carver (Mike Cabral). Then I went six minutes (against Claflin)."

Murphy said his goals at All-States are modest.

"I want to win one or two matches," he said. "To show everyone I earned it."

Murphy will wrestle Xaverian's Anthony Agnitti in the opening round, while Littauer will face St. John Prep's Nick Roberts.

Sweeney, who was doing double-duty, coaching his eight wrestlers and playing host to the event, said it was a good one.

"This tournament has been fantastic," Sweeney said a few minutes before Murphy's match. "I'm partial to it because it's ours. Things have been going every well. Everything has been on time. There's been some great wrestling."

Notes:

For the weekend, 224 wrestlers from 53 teams competed over the weekend.

Cohasset High School Administrator, Jack DeLorenzo, was presented a special award before the finals of the state tournament by the Massachusetts Interscholastic Wrestling Coaches Association for Hall of Fame Fan and Contributor.

DeLorenzo was recognized for his outstanding contributions to the sport of high school wrestling as an administrator. He was instrumental in starting and directing the Cohasset Wrestling Tournament 19 years ago, helped bring the first MIAA State Tournament to Cohasset in 2004 and, as we all know, is a great supporter and fan of all our high school sports at Cohasset.

Sweeney nominated and presented DeLorenzo with the award.

The best part is that Jack thought he was there to present Coach Sweeney with an award so he was totally suprised.

Cohasset's Rob McCunney named Most Valuable Player

D1 Regional Baseball MVP Rob McCunney of Cohasset with Eagles Head Coach Norm Walsh and AssistantCoach John Lynch. BC High clenched their second consecutive state championship title last spring.

Boston College High School senior Rob McCunney of Cohasset was recently named Most Valuable Player in the 2009 South Sectional Regionals of the Division 1 state baseball tournament last spring. The award was given by the Massachusetts Baseball Coaches Association (MBCA) at their annual meeting. As shortstop, McCunney helped the Eagles clench their second consecutive Division 1 state title.

"Defense was a key to our success all year and the tournament was no exception," said BC High coach Norm Walsh. "McCunney was the anchor at shortstop with 9 putouts and 10 assists, making only one error in the six game series. McCunney hit .357 in the post season with 3 triples, 2 doubles and 7 RBIs."

West Bridgewater is led by a solid defense that can run a press.

Elise White led West Bridgewater's scoring against Avon with 26 points.

West Bridgewater also notched 14 offensive rebounds in the game.

This will be the final chance to see this year's group of seniors playing at home.

Tickets are $7 for adults, $5 for students and senior citizens. It is an MIAA contest so only MIAA Passes will be accepted at the gate. South Shore League and regular season home passes cannot be used.

The next round will be played at a neutral site.

In other Monday night action, No. 12 Millis edged No. 5 Hull 47-46 at Hull and will play No. 4 seed Blue Hills tonight.

Blue Hills beat No. 13 Greater New Bedford 66-60 on Monday.

Should Millis beat Blue Hills and Cohasset beat West Bridgewater, the two teams will get a rematch of last year's South Sectional Final.

In the other South bracket, winners were No. 2 South Shore Christian, No. 10 Norfolk County Aggie, No. 3 Nantucket and No. 6 Westport.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

SUMMER CAMPS OFFER FACE-TIME

By Bette Bussel – Executive Director American Camp Association, New England

CamUnplugged from the constant buzz of computers, television, video games, and cell phones, children find themselves at camp — making genuine connections with other children, rediscovering the fun in physical fitness, learning their own strengths, and finding their own voices.

The world today is completely technology-centric; and children frequently spend as much solitary time "plugged in" to various forms of technology per day as they spend in school. Summer camps offer a refreshing and unique break from that routine.

Camps foster the development of social skills. Campers learn how to engage in-person with peers and adults as they pursue fun and interesting activities and build skills. And research shows that what campers learn can be extremely useful back at school and even at home. It's a common sight at camp for a group of campers and counselors to be sharing a meal while they also share animated conversation—swapping stories, enjoying a laugh, or debriefing an earlier adventure or experience. Kids connect with other kids throughout the camp day—during activities, between activities, after activities; and at camp, this opportunity for connection is facilitated by trained, caring role models known as counselors.

Campers also have many opportunities to interact with those role models and caring adults. It's this person to person opportunity for interaction that helps create "community" at camp, that gives kids the sense that camp is where they belong. Camp offers social networking at its best—face to face!

Democratic Town Committee movie night and talk

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee is continuing its efforts to inform citizens on issues of local, national and international interest with two back-to-back events back March 5 and 6.

After the regular monthly meeting, at 10 a.m., on Saturday, March 6, the committee will hear from two local citizens, Nader and Connie Afshar, who have spent many years living, traveling and working in Afghanistan.

The committee will present the movie "Kite Runner," which is based on a best-selling book of the same name by Khaled Hosseini, at 7 p.m., on Friday, March 5. The movie is about the early life of Khalid Abdalla who grew up in Afghanistan and immigrated to the United States as a young man. Abdalla returns to his war-ravaged country to try to repay his debts to a loyal childhood friend whose trust he once betrayed. This is the story of family, friendship and bravery in the face of danger. The movie reveals how life was before and during the take-over by the Taliban. The committee's previous movie night presentation was "Charlie Wilson's War," shown last November, which depicted the successful efforts of Congressman Charles Wilson, who very recently passed away, who prevailed on the U.S. Congress to support the Mujahideen in their successful efforts to drive the Russians out of Afghanistan in the 80s. Wilson advocated for continuing the U.S. presence in Afghanistan, which was denied by Congress.

After the regular monthly meeting, at 10 a.m., on Saturday, March 6, the committee will hear from two local citizens, Nader and Connie Afshar, who have spent many years living, traveling and working in Afghanistan. In the 70s they traveled extensively in Afghanistan, the Federally Administered Tribal Territories and Belugistan Province in Pakistan. In recent months, Nader Afshar traveled to Afghanistan to work on a development project for Afghanistan through the United States Agency for International Development. His recent experiences working in Afghanistan and he and his wife Connie's travels throughout the region in the past, should provide a prospective on the culture, people and regional politics of Afghanistan. Mr. Afshar's experiences working to promote a USAID project will provide little known, first-hand information about some of the recent development efforts by the United States that are currently under way in Afghanistan.

Both events will take place in the Meeting Room of Paul Pratt Library.

Additional delegates who are registered Democrats in Cohasset and are members of a minority group, youth, ages 18 through 35, or disabled citizen can apply to become an add-on delegate by filling out an application. To obtain an application, contact Massachusetts Democratic Party headquarters at 56 Roland St., North Lobby, Suite 203, Boston, MA 02129 or call 617-776-2676 and request an add-on application. Applications for add-on delegates must be received by April 5.

Those who are interested in grassroots campaign organizing can attend the Democratic Campaign Institute on Friday, Feb. 26, through Sunday, Feb. 28, at the Westin Hotel, Waltham. To register and for more information go to the website at www.massdems.org or call Massachusetts Democratic Party headquarters at 617-776-2676.

Nikita Khrushchev's son coming to town

Professor Sergei Khrushchev of Brown University, son of former Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, will make a special appearance with award-winning film producer and Boston College professor John Michalczyk at "Breaking Through: Remembering the Berlin Wall and the End of the Cold War," a fundraising event at the Red Lion Inn in Cohasset on Sunday, Feb. 28.

COURTESY PHOTO

Professor Sergei Khrushchev will comment at the Feb. 28 event about his father's perspective on building the Berlin Wall.

This event will celebrate the 20th anniversary of the fall of the Berlin Wall and will also support post-production costs of Michalczyk's new film, "Writing on the Wall: Remembering the Berlin Wall," which premiered at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston in October.

In this production, Khrushchev recalls his father's perspective in building the Berlin Wall, and he will comment further at the event.

Cocktails and appetizers will be served at 4 p.m., and the program will start at 5:15 p.m. A dinner with the special guests will be held at 6:30 p.m. Cost per person for cocktails, appetizers and the program will be $75. Cost per person for cocktails, appetizers, program and the special dinner will be $150.

For registration information, send e-mail to Janice Brown at janice.h.brown@bankofamerica.com or call 781-826-6831.

Pajama Potluck

The community is invited to a Pajama Potluck at 6 p.m. Friday evening Feb. 26, at First Parish Unitarian Universalist. It's a pajama potluck for all ages in the Parish House at 23 North Main St. Kids come in your pajamas. Adults come in your comfort clothes.

There's no agenda, just a dinner made possible by each person or family bring something to feed eight or so. Board games or Bananagrams or Go Fish are also welcome—whatever sounds like a fun activity for all ages.

A cozy corner set up with blankets and pillows will await the sleepiest of sleepyheads. For more information, contact First Parish Unitarian Universalist in Cohasset at 781-383-1100.

Recreation Notes

Summer Xtreme for middle-schoolers

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office, or visit www.cohassetrec.com or call 781-383-4109.

Summer Xtreme – This innovative program for middle school students entering grades six to eight meets for seven one-week sessions Monday through Thursday from June 28 to Aug. 12 at Cohasset High School. Children from all over the South Shore will engage in socially dynamic activities four days a week, including two field trips every week. The program is filling fast, but there is still limited availability. Don't miss out on this unique opportunity. Applications may be mailed in or dropped off in person. Fee is just $99 per week.

Paintball and Nantasket Beach June 28 to July 1.

Ice Skating and Six Flags July 5 to 8 is full.

Morton's Pond and Starland July 12 to 15.

Water Wizz and Lazer Zone July 19 to 22 is full.

Kayaking and Codzilla/Aquarium/Imax July 26 to 29

Pawtucket Red Sox and Boston Bowl and Billiards Aug. 2 to 5.

Patriots Training Camp and Deep Sea Fishing Trip Aug. 9 to 12.

Drama Kids – Drama Kids presents a performance workshop for young actors 7 to 11. Meeting Thursdays, March 4 through May 13 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. the workshop focuses on the performance aspects of theatrical production. Actors will learn how to use voice, movement and creativity to present a character on stage with costumes, props and scenery. The program uses a variety of drama activities to enhance verbal and communication skills while increasing confidence and self-esteem in students. Fee is $175.

Babysitter's Training Course – This one-day, three-hour, held on March 27, from 9 a.m. to noon. The course is designed to assist fifth through eighth graders to be better babysitters and to learn the do's and don'ts of being home alone. Instructed by Kimberly Cleary, nurse and mom. The course will cover information on child development, playing with younger children, basic first aid, fire safety and prevention, and the overall responsibilities of babysitting. Each class is limited to 18 pre-registered students. Fee is $20 per student.

How to Read a Nautical Chart – A three-hour seminar course meeting Saturday, March 13, from 9 a.m. to noon, unraveling the mystery of charts. When navigating on land you use a map. It depicts the various thoroughfares, their directions and names. Major areas such as parks, lakes etc. would also be noted. By selecting the prescribed route, you would be able to reach a desired destination. At sea there are no streets, no separate areas, no differences from abutting or surrounding areas. With no land mass over the horizon, everything looks the same. For navigating at sea, we use a chart. By knowing our latitude and longitude, we can locate our position anywhere on earth. Navigators must also be warned of dangerous areas, leading them through safe passages and directing them within set patterns to prevent collisions. For this, Aids to Navigation are depicted on nautical charts. Other available information on nautical charts includes, but is not limited to, depth of water, bottom type, magnetic variations affecting the compass, chart scales, and inter-tidal information. This course will provide the navigator with the knowledge to interpret the chart's contents to navigate safely to their destination and return to port. Text and training chart included. The class will be held at Cohasset Town Hall and the fee is $50.

Recreation Fair – One of the biggest problems families run into when planning summer activities is that their options are spread out over many venues and information isn't always available when it's needed.

The Recreation Fair is Cohasset's solution, and then some. The Cohasset Recreation Department is hosting this year's event at the Deer Hill School on Sunday, March 21, from 1 to 4 p.m.. In addition to fun games, food and giveaways the fair will be the kick-off event for summer registrations for a variety of youth programs in town including the summer recreation program, sailing, all of the recreation departments summer programs, and more.

CPR & AED Two-Year Certification – American Heart Association CPR course held on the evening of Wednesday, March 31, from 6 to 10 p.m. instructed by members of the Cohasset Fire Department; CPR instruction includes adult, child and infant CPR. Two-year certification card is provided after completion of the course. Training or retraining should be a habit, and National CPR and AED Awareness Week is an annual reminder to make sure people are prepared. The more you practice CPR, the more automatic the skill will become – that way, if you are faced with an emergency, you will feel confident and know what to do. Sudden Cardiac Arrest claims too many lives each year. We are asking everyone to get trained in CPR. The course will be held at Cohasset Town Hall, the fee is $48.

Cross Country Running Club – Meet on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 4 to 5 p.m. beginning April 6 and continuing through May 20, for an hour of running related stations. We will train runners for 1 mile competitive meets against local running groups. The program is for boys and girls grades three through five - all levels of interested runners are welcome. Parent volunteers welcome, contact Kelly Grech if you would like to help out 781-383-0349. The fee is $60 per runner. Program meets at Milliken Field.

Introduction to Geocaching – This course, held the evening of Saturday, April 17, from 4 to 5 p.m. is focused on the up-and-coming activity of Geo Caching, a modern day treasure hunting experience. You will learn how to get coordinates for a geo trip and learn the skills necessary to use a GPS system. Later on use the GPS to find a treasure of your own. This course is designed to be enjoyed by individuals, couples and families. This course, which meets at Cohasset Town Hall, is open to all ages and families. The fee is $40 per child, and $75 per adult.

Rock Climbing – Students ages 8 and up have fun while learning techniques and how to use the equipment necessary to climb with confidence by professional guides. Top-roping allows for a safe climbing experience that builds confidence. This program meets from 9 a.m. to noon, Monday, April 19 to Wednesday, April 21 during April vacation week at Quarry Hills in Quincy. The fee is $95 per climber.

Nantucket Daffodil Festival – The Cohasset Recreation Department will be taking a group of travelers on a trip to Nantucket for the day on Saturday, April 24. Bus departs Cohasset Town Hall at 6 a.m. for a day of fun on the island. The fee is $119, which includes a guided tour, or $99 without the tour. Includes round trip motor coach transportation to Hyannis, round trip Fast Ferry to Nantucket and Guide and tour. You will have time to shop and have lunch on your own.

New York City in The Springtime – For a fee of $49 per person, transportation will be provided directly from Cohasset Town Hall to and from Rockefeller Center. Bus departs at 6 a.m. sharp on the morning of Saturday, May 22. Travelers under the age of 18 must be accompanied by an adult. You may plan your own itinerary to include activities such as museums, sightseeing at Times Square and beyond, dining at any of the numerous eateries in the city and so much more. Shopping is a must when you're in the Big Apple, and don't forget to ask for you're tax discount for being an out of state shopper to take advantage of some fantastic savings.

Red Sox Games – Miss your chance to get Red Sox tickets? Cohasset Recreation has you covered with tickets available to three different Red Sox games. Friday, May 28, against the Kansas City Royals; Wednesday, June 30, against Tampa Bay Rays; and Tuesday, Aug. 24, against the Seattle Mariners. For $38 per person/per game we will pick you and your crew up at Cohasset High School at 5 p.m. sharp and drive you home at the end of the game.

Eat Your Art event at the High School

The public is invited to participate in Cohasset High School's ninth annual Edible Art Exhibit at 6 p.m., on Wednesday, March 10. All artwork must be edible — safe for human consumption. The competition is open to people ages 4 through 104, and the artwork can be created by an individual, or it may be a collaborative piece. Participants are responsible for setting up their piece for viewing.

There will be two categories for judging: Delicious and Nutritious, according to ingredients. For example, a piece could be made of asparagus and noodles, or made of chocolate, marshmallows and licorice. Many prizes from local restaurants and merchants will be offered. After all prizes are awarded, all work becomes the property of the party where everyone gets to "Eat Your Art."

Registration fee for participants is free. Admission fee is $3, or $2 with a canned good to benefit the Cohasset Food Pantry.

For more information or to register, call Nina Berkowitz at Cohasset High School at 781-383-6100 or email nberkowitz@Cohassetk12.org.

Pilgrim Arena scholarship applications

Applications for ten $5,000 scholarships are available at the Pilgrim Skating Arena, 75 Recreation Park Drive, Hingham.

Allie Donoghue, grade seven, works on her "original work." The middle school students were given a beach theme, but were also encouraged to use their creativity and go wherever this led them.

Students create 'Original Works'

Let's face it, Art is a fun class during a students' school day. Kids love to create and, even more, they love to learn new techniques and experiment with new supplies and materials. Kids have crayons, colored pencils and markers at home, but in Art Class, it's a whole new ball game, and that's what makes it so much fun. Of course, beyond fun, it is important for children to learn and develop their artistic skills. These skills help to strengthen a child's confidence, not just in their artistic abilities, but confidence in themselves and their ability to learn new things, to overcome obstacles, to set goals and to experience the joy of success. Here in Cohasset, we have wonderful art teachers who have developed age appropriate curriculum that will teach children the techniques used in various art mediums, as well as all the important Principles of Art, such as balance, pattern and contrast. Betsy Ogdon, Ann Berman, Laura Swartz and Nina Berkowitz are the art teachers in Cohasset who have established classrooms, which are a warm and encouraging learning environment, and they help our children develop their artistic skills and have fun with art every day.

Now, proud parents have a way to show off the art their child has created in class. The PSO has teamed up with Cohasset Art Teachers and Original Works - the number one art based program in the country - to offer a program which allows you to have your child's own artwork reproduced onto a selection of more than 20, quality products. Students have been hard at work creating their own original work of art, which will be sent home next week with all the relevant materials. The PSO is grateful to Mrs. Ogdon, Ms. Berman and Mrs. Swartz for providing the children with the guidance and instruction necessary during the creative process.

The Osgood and Deer Hill students followed an ocean theme in creating their art, and the middle school students were given a beach theme, but were also encouraged to use their creativity and go wherever this led them. Order forms and each child's art will be brought home next week and families can have the art professionally reproduced on a wide range of products such as note cards, luggage tags, kitchen tiles, tote bags, mouse pads, towels and lots more items. A third of all sales will go to the PSO, who will use the funds for various teacher and schools grants, curriculum enrichment programming and technology purchases at each school. The art teachers participating in the program will be given special grants to assist with purchasing materials and equipment to enhance the Art Curriculum.

Look for a packet next week and keep an eye out for all the Original Works that will be adorning neat bags, on notecards and other fun items after Mother's Day.

POLICE/FIRE LOG

Take part in police survey

In an effort to identify the needs of our community, the Cohasset Police Department has linked a survey to its web page at: www.cohassetpolice.com

Please take a few minutes and complete the survey. For those who do not have computer access, copies of the survey will be placed at Cohasset Police Station and Town Hall. Additionally, each police car will have copies of the survey and officers would be glad to drop off and pick up surveys from your home.

You can call the Cohasset Police Department at 781-383-1212.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE
WEEK OF MARCH 8, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Change is still dominant for Rams and Ewes, both in the workplace and their private lives. This is also a good time to look at a possible relocation if that has been one of your goals.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Doing things for others is what you do well. But don't forget that Bovines thrive on the arts, so make some time for yourself to indulge your passion for music and artistic expressions.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) While the Romantic Twin considers where to go for his or her upcoming vacation, the Practical Twin will start making travel plans now to take advantage of some great bargains.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your sensitive nature helps you deal with a difficult emotional situation. Be patient and continue to show your sincere support wherever (and for whomever) it is needed.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You're making progress as you move through some unfamiliar territory. And while there might be a misstep or two along the way, overall you're heading in the right direction. Good luck.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Some good news arrives — and just in time to remind you that you're making progress. Perhaps things aren't moving as quickly as you'd prefer, but they're moving nevertheless.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) This is a good week to step back and assess the facts that have recently emerged to see where they can be used to your advantage. Also, don't hesitate to make changes where necessary.

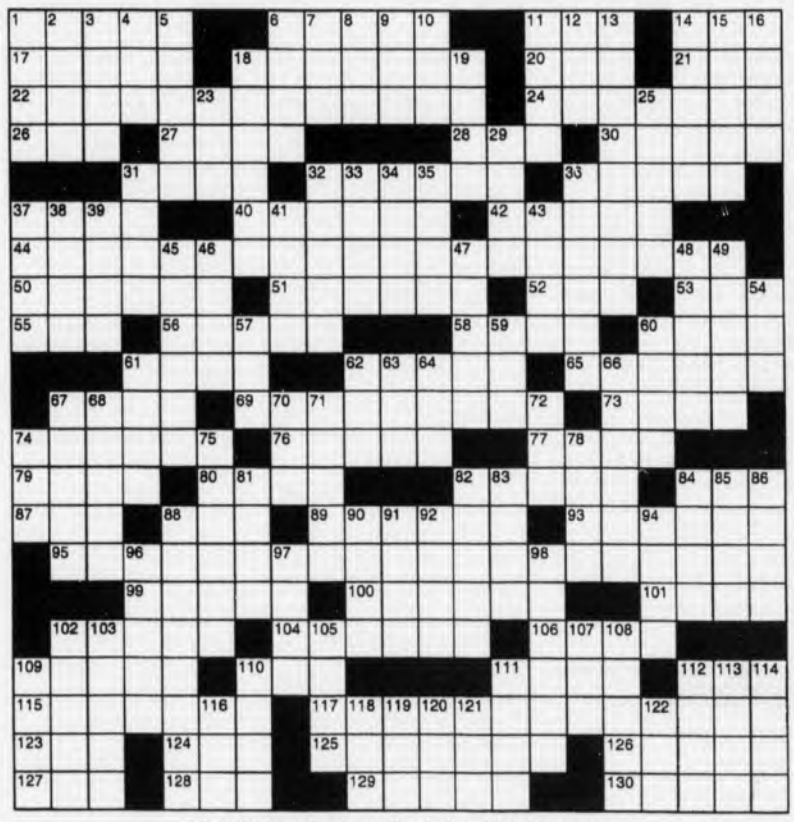
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You should begin to experience some support from those who now agree with your point of view. This should help counter the remaining objections from die-hard skeptics.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Don't let your aim be deflected by trivial matters as you try to resolve a confusing situation. Take time to find and thoroughly assess the facts before making any decision.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The possibility of moving to another location has come up. But before you dismiss it as unworkable, it's worth checking out just in case it does have some merit after all.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) New relationships — personal or work-related — show mixed signals. Best to assume nothing. Let things play themselves out until you have something substantive to work with.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your ability to make needed changes without causing too much, if any, negative ripple effect comes in handy when dealing with a sensitive matter either on the job or in the family.



(c) 2010 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: Although you like things to go smoothly, you're not shy about making waves when you believe the situation calls for it.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Second Class Petty Officer Lauren Bonanno lays down a wreath while the First Vice President Jane Hamilton of the Auxiliary and President Deirdre Wigmore of the Auxiliary stand behind her during the Healing Field dedication last May.

'Healing Field' is planned for Memorial Day

The Sons of the American Legion is planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2010 observances.

The effort should result in hundreds of American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island faces Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces. (Those who purchase flags will be able to pick them up after 10 days).

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healing-field.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

The Healing Field will be on display from May 22 to June 1. The dedication is scheduled for 1 p.m., Saturday, May 29.

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Jack Stauss

COHASSET – Jack Braithwaite Stauss, a gentle soul, passed away as he had lived, quietly at home in Cohasset surrounded by his loving family, on Feb. 17, 2010. He was 96.

Born on November 1, 1913 in Philadelphia to William and Mary (Braithwaite) Stauss, Jack spent much of his childhood in Hadden Heights, NJ. He grew up next door to his best friend, Bob Thomas, and the two young men married sisters, sealing a life long friendship.

Jack and his wife, the late Grace Massa, came to Cohasset in 1958 and spent most of their married lives in the house they built on Nichols Road. The basement of that gracious home reflected Jack's great passions, a room devoted to model trains and a meticulously organized machine shop. His skill at model building was also recognized at Massa Labs, where he was a product engineer for more than 30 years. Jack frequently reminisced about his first job, working at an airport when commercial flight was still in its infancy. He took his first glider ride at the age of 90.

Jack was predeceased by his beloved wife, Grace, his brother William and his grandson, Michael Stauss. He is survived by his children: William Stauss and wife, Marcia of Weymouth, Jackie Noonan and husband, Brian of Cohasset, and Roger Stauss and wife, Kathryn of Vermont; grandchildren Karyn Foley, Garrett Hunt, Diane Dobson, Erin Hunt, Devon Noonan, Jack Stauss and Robert Stauss; and eight great-grandchildren.

A Funeral Service was held on Saturday, Feb. 20, 2010 at 11 a.m. in McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (Across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset. Visiting hours was one prior to service beginning at 10 a.m. Interment Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Jack's memory may be made to Norwell VNA & Hospice, 91 Longwater Cir., Norwell, MA. 02061. For an online guestbook, please visit www.mcnamara-sparrell.com.

Mary E. McGurrin

COHASSET – Mary E. "Liz" (McKeen) McGurrin, age 83, of Cohasset, formerly of Scituate and Waban, a loving soul passed away as she had lived, peacefully in her home in Cohasset with family by her side, on Feb. 19, 2010.

She was born on October 9, 1926, in Boston. Best known as "Liz," she graduated from Mount St. Joseph Academy, attended Boston University, and lived for more than 40 years in Newton and Scituate. She and her husband, the late Andrew D. McGurrin, owned McGurrin's Gift Shop, in Brighton, well-known for Irish giftware and for her charismatic personality.

Throughout her 83 years, Liz brightened the lives of those around her and made friends with great ease. Her family marveled at her acts of kindness and the impact she had on everyone she met; it wasn't at all uncommon for total strangers to confide in her with their life stories. Liz was cherished by many for her generosity, compassion, and sincerity. She delighted in big family dinners and took pleasure in having a home that was a popular gathering place. Friends who stopped by her beach home for a morning cup of coffee were usually invited to stay through dinner and late into the night.

Liz loved to travel and was always ready for an adventure, whether in helicopters over Alaskan glaciers, drives through Ireland or theater weekends in New York. Her life was devoted to family, her faith, and helping others. Liz left this world knowing she was truly loved.

She was beloved by her children Dorcas McGurrin of Yarmouth Port; Andrew Jr. and his wife, Eleanor, of Hingham; Francis of Worcester; Sean and his wife, Lynn, of Waltham, Lisa Driscoll Felber of Silver Spring, MD; Garrett of Hanover; Stephanie and her husband, Bill Roy, of Scituate; Peter and his wife, Susan, of Marblehead; her son-in-law, Ken Dye of Marshfield and her daughter, the late Deidre Dye. She was cherished by her sister, Pat Connell of San Gabriel, CA; her 17 grandchildren, and several nieces and nephews. In addition to her daughter, Deidre, she was predeceased by her daughter-in-law, Sarah (Droney) and her son-in-law, Theodore Driscoll.

A Funeral Mass was celebrated on Wednesday, Feb. 24, 2010 at 11 a.m. in St. Anthony Church, Cohasset. Visiting hours was on Tuesday, Feb 23, from 4 - 8 p.m. at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St. (across from St. Anthony Church), Cohasset. Interment private for family.

In lieu of flowers, donations in Liz's memory may be made to St. Francis House, 39 Boylston St., Boston, MA. 02116.

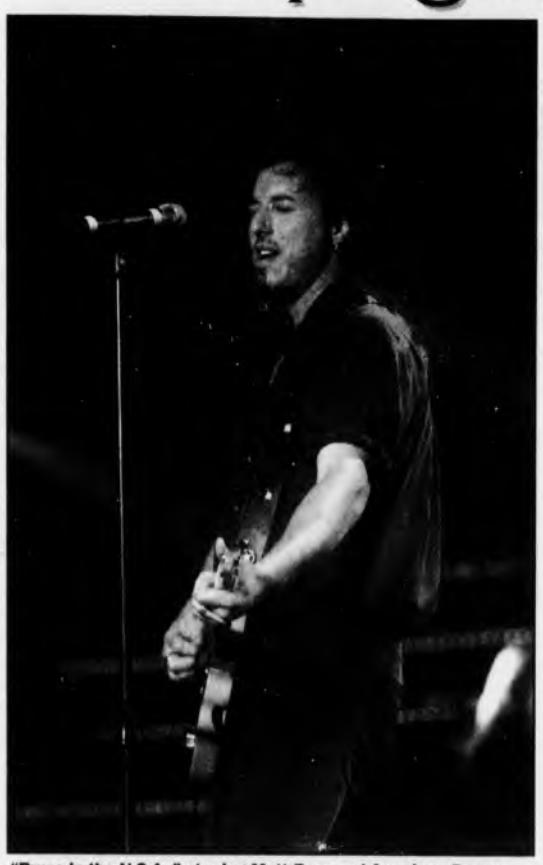
A Bruce fix for Springsteen fans

Meet the new 'Boss', similar to the old 'Boss'



By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Matt Ryan has been performing as Bruce Springsteen for a dozen years – first in "Legends in Concert" in Las Vegas and now in "Bruce in the U.S.A.," which comes to Norwell's Company Theatre for two shows on Saturday – but comparisons with the legendary singer-songwriter go back further than that for the Toronto-born musician turned celebrity impersonator.

"In high school, my nickname was 'The Boss,' because I looked so much like Springsteen. Everything I did musically seemed to sound like Springsteen, too, even though I'm pretty sure I was going for Steve Perry from Journey," recalled Ryan by telephone last week from a Pittsburgh tour stop. "I could be wearing my hair long, or short, it didn't matter. People would always tell me how much I reminded them of Bruce Springsteen."

Ryan, 42, has been doing a lot more than evoking the New Jersey native since joining the long-running Las Vegas production show "Legends in Concert" at the Imperial Palace Hotel & Casino.

"I was doing Springsteen in 'Legends in Concert' when I was approached by the Aladdin Hotel & Casino to create 'Bruce in the U.S.A.' That show meant a full-scale concert experience so we set about recreating the original E-Street Band by pulling together our own group of first-rate musicians. Our bass player, Danny Miranda, is from Queens; Matthew "Sully" Sullivan, our Little Stevie Van Zandt, was in David Cassidy's band for years, and we have a terrific Clarence Clemons in Dave McClauren. Everyone in our group loves this music."

"Bruce in the U.S.A.," starring Matt Ryan and American Dream, will be at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, for two shows on Feb. 27.

"I'm almost afraid to meet Bruce in person, but hopefully he'll catch our show sometime."
— Matt "The Boss" Ryan

Ryan, of course, is no exception.

"What has always made this music great is that it tells the stories of everybody's lives. From blue collar to white collar, there is something in this music to which everyone can relate. My favorite Springsteen song changes from month to month, but 'Rosalita' was the first one that caught my attention and I always seem to come back to it. The whole big band, with real horns and analog sound, just makes it rock music at its finest. Our job is to recreate Springsteen and the E-Street Band so people can get their Bruce fix through us. Bruce's shows are very passionate and so are ours, which has been a major factor in helping us become so successful."

That success – which includes a "Bruce in the USA" booking at Foxwoods Resort & Casino in Connecticut Aug. 7–Sept. 9 as part of "Legends in Concert" – has not gone unnoticed by the people who inspired it.

"We played back-up for Clarence Clemons at a private party at the Hard Rock in New York. Clarence was the sweetest man. He could not have been nicer to us. Nils Lofgren has also thrown us a lot of very generous plugs over the years," says Ryan, who is quick to acknowledge that has seen the real "Boss" in person only from a concert audience, so far anyway.

"I'm almost afraid to meet Bruce in person, but hopefully he'll catch our show sometime. In the meantime, he has been nothing but supportive of what we do. I've seen him in concert twice and it was just surreal both times. He is such an incredible performer. Watching him live was like going to school."

"Bruce in the U.S.A.," starring Matt Ryan & American Dream, will be at the Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, for two shows on Feb. 27. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787 or go online at companytheatre.com.

The Front Street Art Gallery hosts 'The Art of Printmaking'

The Front Street Art Gallery in Scituate, is presenting another exhibit, "The Art of Printmaking." The artists in the show are gallery members and invited printmakers who are known for their varied printmaking approaches and are members of the Monotype Guild of New England.

Featured in the show are Esther Maschio, Kathleen Mullins Mogayzel and James Baker, all from Scituate. Esther is an accomplished New England printmaker and book artist who uses her artistic images and writings from travels in her monoprints and handmade books. She teaches at the South Shore Art Center and the Scituate Art Association. The three artists have formed the Coastal Printmakers. Kathleen Mullins Mogayzel, one of Ester's protégées, has shown and won awards on the South Shore for her monoprints and collagraphs. Her subjects and rich colors are taken from her photographs of nature. James Baker, graphic designer and photographer, is also a well known New England printmaker. His monoprints are full of primal images, symbols and colors that cross time and cultures. He is an active board member of the Boston Printmakers.

Also featured are Jane Johnston of Quincy and Ann Conte of Hingham, both long time students of Esther Maschio. Jane, a former Quincy art teacher, prints from her carved woodcuts and also creates monoprints of sea life from creatures she has found or caught. Ann Conte is a ceramist, painter, assemblage artist and professional framer. Her process of monoprinting on paper clay brings a unique element to the show. Finally, Joan Appel of Marshfield is an award winning artist and musician. Her abstract monotypes are created without a press, using plate glass and artist's oil paint. Joan is also on the board of the Boston Printmakers.

Silver Night Dance monoprint by James Baker.

The terms monotype and monoprint refer to a form of printmaking whereby an original inked or painted image is transferred from a plate onto paper by means of pressure. The characteristic of this method is that no two prints are exactly alike. Unique prints are sometimes enhanced by the artist with collage materials or direct drawing or painting on the print surface. The technical possibilities are endless and when combined with the individual visions of artists, the results are amazingly diverse and interesting.

"The Art of Printmaking" show will include monotypes, monoprints, collagraphs, woodcuts, intaglio, and mixed media in two and three-dimensional pieces. The exhibit opened Feb. 24 and runs through March 14. A gallery reception will take place on Friday, March 5, from 6 to 8 p.m.

The Front Street Art Gallery is located at 124 Front St. Scituate is open Wednesday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 1 to 5 p.m. The gallery will resume opening on Wednesday March 3, but is closed on Monday and Tuesday until April. For more information call 781-545-6150.

Turning back the clock

Octogenarian writes memoirs about Germany during the war

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For most, the events of World War II are the stuff of history books — a time long ago in a much different world. But, for those who were alive to witness what history now understands as the most devastating war of all time, the events of World War II are a part of what makes them who they are.

For Cohasset resident Rosmarie Engel-Conn the memories of World War II are strong and vivid despite the many more memories created in the last 65 years.

Engel-Conn, now 83, was a teenager in Germany at the time of World War II. She lived under Adolf Hitler's rule, worked in an ammunitions factory as part of mandated service to the country, narrowly survived the bombing of Dresden, and escaped harm during the Russian invasion of her village, just outside of Wittenburg.

In the past year, she has written several personal essays describing her experiences of World War II. This year is the 65th anniversary of the Russian invasion of Germany, the bombardment of Dresden and the end of World War II.

When her husband was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease, she suddenly had the urge and desire to put pen to paper and record the significant — and historical — experiences.

"It poured all out and still is," Engel-Conn said.

Her memories of the war – the circumstances, the sights, the sounds, the smells, the fear – are strongly imprinted in her mind. When she sits down to write she said she literally travels to that place in her mind.

"I cannot write them in German, the words become stiff, not vivid. With the English language, it just flows."
— Rosmarie Engel-Conn

"I'm not interested in cooking or eating; I'm really back then, back in time," Engel-Conn said. She does not have a specific place or time to write, but tries to write without interruption.

The result is a vivid, detailed picture of what she experienced 65 years ago. Her memoir of the bombing attack on Dresden contains such details such as what she cooked for dinner the night of the bombing, the emotions she felt as she watched the city a light with flames, and the intense relief her mother felt when she found out her daughter was still alive.

Water woes are on the rise

Town Meeting will consider rate increase

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

For the third time in four years, Annual Town Meeting will consider a water rate increase.

With increasing debt obligations, which are on the rise until 2016, and coming off a year of lower-than-expected water usage, and therefore revenue, the Water Commission is poised to make their case to the voters on Saturday, March 27.

If early discussions are any indication, getting voter approval will not be a cakewalk. The Water Commission will ask for the increase in the face of a still sputtering economy, on the heels of $60 per quarter increase for 80 percent of water users in 2009 and many residents unsatisfied with the quality of water coming out of their taps.

The issue is complicated and many are asking questions as to the greater financial picture for the water commission (see related story).

Water Commission chair Glenn Pratt said there is little way around the rate increase, which will be approximately 20 percent for the majority of homes in Cohasset.

"It's going to be a big increase," Water Commission chair Glenn Pratt said in a phone interview. "It's going to increase our revenue about 30 percent."

"It's going to be a big increase. It's going to increase our revenue about 30 percent."
— Glenn Pratt, Water Commission

Revenue that's badly needed as many of the projected revenues in this year's budget – and carrying over to the next fiscal year – have not and will likely not be realized.

Pratt said the economy's effect on local development has played a role.

The 200-unit Avalon apartment complex has not broken ground. The Water Commission was expecting to receive a one-time windfall from their settlement with the company, as well as revenue once the project came on line.

The water department's one and only wholesale customer, Linden Ponds, a retirement community in South Hingham, halted construction and is only buying about one-third of the initial water sale projections.

The result, Pratt said, is roughly a $500,000 change in budget revenue projections for fiscal 2010.

Plant retrofit is off the table

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The $5-million plant retrofit, which the Water Commission has said is needed to meet more stringent federal water regulations coming in 2013, is off the table for the upcoming Town Meeting.

"There's no way that we can see how we can pay for it," Water Commission chairman Glenn Pratt told the Capital Budget Committee Tuesday night. They investigated the possibility of federal stimulus money, but to no avail.

"We're hunting for other funding sources," Pratt said.

The Water Commission has said they expected the construction of the MIEX (magnetic ionic exchange) pre-treatment system to lower the organic content going into the plant making it easier for the plant to treat. The retrofit has been in the works for years and is completely engineered.

Pilot test results performed in 2005 and 2006 showed approximately a 50 percent reduction in THMs (trihalomethanes) in treated water. This reduction of THMs is essential because the federal regulations are getting tougher in 2013.

Although the Water Commission is not pursuing the $5-million plant retrofit, Pratt told the Capital Budget Committee the department had several other pressing capital needs.

"There's no way that we can see how we can pay for it."
— Glenn Pratt, Water Commission

Details were preliminary in nature – more precise estimates are expected in the next week – but the request could be as much as $1 million.

First, funding is needed to implement a "phosphate program" that is intended to improve the issues of discolored water primarily related to manganese.

"(With the addition of phosphate) the visual water quality will be improved," Pratt said.

Second, Pratt said something needed to be done with the sludge lagoons, which hold the waste products of the treatment process. The removal of the sludge is costing the department about $150,000 annually, a cost that could decrease by two-thirds if a new system was implemented, Pratt said.

Third, the presence of "milfoil," an invasive plant species in Aaron River Reservoir affecting about three-quarters of an acre, needs to be eradicated. Pratt said the department made an attempt at eradication last year, but the process did not clean up the entire area.

STEERING INTO TROUBLE

One problem frequently noticed by drivers is an alteration in their vehicles' steering behavior. Various steering difficulties and their probable causes include: Steering that veers to one side after driving over a bump, often caused by a steering rack that is out of level or bent steering arms; excessive play in the steering wheel, which is often due to loose (or damaged) steering linkages, tie-rod ends, or damaged steering column bearings; hard steering, which may be due to a damaged steering pump or steering column bearings, or internal damage in the power rack assembly or seized steering column U-joints; or a drifting/pulling feel on the steering wheel caused by loose (or damaged) steering linkages or a damaged steering gear valve.

If your steering is so out of whack that your "ten and two" positions have drifted to "eight and twelve," then bring your car down to ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT for a steering check today. Our ASE Master-certified technicians use state-of-the-art equipment to check everything from the steering wheel to the wheel alignment to make sure that you're safe and straight on the road. And even if your car is running on the straight and narrow, call today to schedule the preventative maintenance that will prevent problems, like imperfect steering, in the first place. Our number is 781-925-3200 and you can find our shop at 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

HINT: A needed wheel alignment is also a common cause of steering problems.

Information about your drinking water

The following is a notice from the Cohasset Water Department

Cohasset Water Contains High Levels of Lead — Our water system recently violated a drinking water standard. Even though this is not an emergency, as our customers, you have a right to know what happened, what you should do, and what we are doing to correct this situation.

We routinely sample water at consumers' taps for lead. The tests show lead levels in the water above the limit, or "action level," so we are required to install corrosion control treatment. This treatment helps prevent lead in the pipes from dissolving into the water. Corrosion control is installed and is being adjusted to improve results.

What should I do?

- Listed below are some steps you can take to reduce your exposure to lead:
- Call us at the number below to find out how to get your water tested for lead.
- Find out whether your pipes contain lead or lead solder.
- Run your water for 15-30 seconds or until it becomes cold before using it for drinking or cooking. This flushes any standing lead from the pipes.
- Don't cook with or drink water from the hot water tap; lead dissolves more easily into hot water.

Do not boil your water to remove lead. Excessive boiling water makes the lead more concentrated — the lead remains when the water evaporates.

What does this mean?

Typically, lead enters water supplies by leaching from lead or brass pipes and plumbing components. New lead pipes and plumbing components containing lead are no longer allowed for this reason; however, many older homes may contain lead pipes. Your water is more likely to contain high lead levels if water pipes in or leading to your home are made of lead or contain lead solder.

Infants and children who drink water containing lead in excess of the action level could experience delays in their physical or mental development. Children could show slight deficits in attention span and learning abilities. Adults who drink this water over many years could develop kidney problems or high blood pressure.

What happened? What is being done?

In November of 2009, 5 homes in Cohasset tested above the maximum contaminant level for lead. The source of the lead is from brass or lead pipes and fixtures located in the plumbing of the home. The water that leaves the treatment plant and well station to supply the town does not contain any lead. The treatment plant has a corrosion control system in place and has made adjustments to improve results.

This is not an emergency. If it had been, you would have been notified immediately.

For more information, please contact the Cohasset Water Department at 781-383-0057 or 339 King St. Cohasset, MA 02025.

Please share this information with all the other people who drink this water, especially those who may not have received this notice directly (for example, people in apartments, nursing homes, schools, and businesses). You can do this by posting this notice in a public place or distributing copies by hand or mail.

Participate in a green transportation meeting

Do you have ideas to improve getting around Cohasset easier, safer and be healthier at the same time?

The town and Planning Board member Clark Brewer want to hear from you.

On Saturday March 13th, from 11a.m. to 12:30p.m, Brewer will host an information session at the Cohasset Public Library meeting room.

The purpose of this meeting will be to address options for grant applications under the Clean Air and Mobility Program. The intent of this program is to provide incentives, support and funding that improves air quality, including small scale infrastructure improvements that support pedestrian and bicycle facilities in Cohasset.

Public input will help in establishing priorities under this program and funding opportunities in the future.

POLICE BEAT

Police had a whale of a week

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

COURTESY PHOTO/MARTY GRASSIE

Police roped off the rotted whale carcass that washed up on Black Rock Beach during the storm surge on Friday (Feb. 26). The event has created a lot of curiosity and drew a crowd last Friday. Information about the species of whale was not immediately available from the New England Aquarium that took tissue samples.

9-1-1 calls

Police received a range of accidental or abandoned 9-1-1 calls over the past week. It is police department policy to respond to all 9-1-1 calls to confirm that they were accidental. Police encourage callers to use 9-1-1 in an emergency. The line for non-emergency calls is 781-383-1212.

Credit card fraud

A 40-year-old Cohasset woman reported to police last week that her debit card number had been compromised and was used for 10 different purchases over a week's time. Purchases totaling $902 were made at food stores; for train and bus tickets; and for parking passes, police said. The woman cancelled her card and the matter is under investigation.

Knocking

A resident who lives near Surry Drive and Forest Avenue called police on Monday (Feb. 22) at about 7 p.m. after someone knocked on her door but did not respond when asked who was there. An officer checked the outside of the home and found nothing out of place.

Ride home

Police gave a 46-year-old Cohasset man a ride to Linden Drive at about 4:50 p.m. on Tuesday (Feb. 23) after a caller reported seeing a suspicious man wearing a navy hooded sweatshirt and navy pants walking across the golf club from North Main toward Cedar Street. The caller said the man appeared to be drunk.

Ran plate

An officer ran the pate of a 2005 Toyota Scion that was parked behind a closed building on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A) last Wednesday (Feb. 24) at about 12:45 a.m. The registry check revealed the registered owner, a 40-year-old Hull man, had a suspended license. The officer contacted the man who was working overnight in the building and advised him not to drive the car because his license was suspended. The man made other transportation arrangements, police said.

Erratic driver

A cell phone caller reported a car being operated erratically "all over the road" headed south on Route 3A last Wednesday at about 8:18 p.m. The car made a left into the Dunkin Donuts at 3A and Beechwood Street where police ran a registry check on the operator, a 24-year-old Cohasset woman. The computer revealed the woman had a suspended license for a payment default. She was apparently trying to program a hand-held navigation system while driving and was not paying attention, police said. The 2003 Honda Accord she was driving was towed and she will be summonsed to court on the charge of operating after license suspension, police said.

Car break-in

A 47-year-old Cohasset woman reported that someone had broken into her 2004 Chevrolet Tahoe and took personal belongings including her wallet, cash and credit cards. She believed the crime occurred sometime between 8 p.m. and 6 a.m. (Feb. 24-Feb. 25). The vehicle was unlocked and parked in her driveway, police said.

Her wallet was later found in the area of Ash and Cushing streets and was turned into police by the person who found it.

Wallet taken

A 77-year-old Scituate woman reported to police that her wallet had been taken from her pocketbook apparently while she was loading groceries from the shopping cart into her vehicle outside Stop & Shop last Thursday (Feb. 25). The woman, who had paid for the merchandise, did not realize her wallet was missing until she got home. Then she called police. Her wallet contained about $40 in cash and credit cards.

Suspicious email

An 82-year-old Cohasset woman, who may have been new to the Internet, called police last Thursday (Feb. 25) after receiving a suspicious email from outside the country telling her she had won 25 million pounds and wanted police to look at the email. She was advised to delete the email.

Loud party

Police arrested a 17-year-old Stoughton teen, who had a backpack with beer and was seen dropping a beer on the ground when he climbed into a parked vehicle, following a report of a large, loud group of teens in the road last Friday (Feb. 26) at about 10 p.m. on Rocky Lane.

Police said about 60-70 teens scattered upon their arrival. The homeowner, who was at work, was contacted. She returned and took custody of her children. Police said the gathering got out of hand when a large group crashed the party.

The Stoughton teen was charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol.

Ride home

A 48-year-old Cohasset man who had been "shut off" by the bartender called 9-1-1 on his cell phone at 1:13 a.m. on Sunday (Feb. 28) at the Red Lion Inn telling the State Police that "everyone is drunk and beating everyone up." Police said apparently he had been giving the bartender a hard time about not being served any longer and decided to make the cell call. Cohasset police explained their options to the caller who agreed to accept a ride home in the cruiser.

Stuck in mud

A 62-year-old Braintree taxi cab driver knocked on a door on Blackhorse Lane at 9:13 p.m. on Sunday (Feb. 28) to ask for help because his cab was stuck in the mud. Police said the taxi driver was using his navigation system to find Cedar Lane but he ended up on Blackhorse Lane. A tow truck had to be called to pull the cab out of the mud.

Police said the homeowner, who is 90, did the right thing by calling them after the cab driver came to the door.

Treat's Pond issue won't dry up

Army Corps seeking answer to proposal

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A year ago January, the Board of Selectmen took several votes to determine if the Treat's Pond Army Corps project was something they could support. At the crux of the issue was how the stormwater would be routed if the project moved forward.

The Army Corps had presented preliminary plans that recommended the re-location of a drainage pipe from its current location on Sandy Cove to an outfall in the inner or outer harbor, a scenario they said would maximize the potential for the wetland's restoration.

Those votes resulted in a "deadlock" where two selectmen supported a route and two selectmen did not. For some, they believed that was the end of the project. Without a clear direction and support to move forward, the project seemed to be at a standstill.

However, just over a year later in February the town received a correspondence from the Army Corps of Engineers asking – once and for all – if the town supported the project.

The overriding issue for the Treat's Pond and surrounding Atlantic Avenue area is severe rainstorms have caused serious flooding for several residents in the past. Although the Army Corps primary goal was creating a healthier wetland, a side effect could be improvement in the flooding situation.

In addition, the Army Corps would contribute about $1 million toward the cost of the project, but the remaining funding, which was estimated to be about $600,000, would need to come from a non-federal source (likely the town or the state).

On Monday night, Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley expressed frustration that the selectmen's vote was evidently not communicated to the Army Corps.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said he wasn't sure if the vote was communicated verbally, but there is no written record of the board's vote being communicated to Congressman Bill Delahunt's office or the Army Corps.

"It was quite a long time ago," Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said.

In it most recent communication, the Army Corps asks for a final decision by April 15.

On Monday night, Carlson said Amory Houghton, an Atlantic Avenue resident and proponent of the project, for a private meeting to discuss the project. Houghton's residence at 91 Atlantic Ave. is one of the hardest hit when Treat's Pond floods. Carlson said he was giving Houghton the "courtesy" of a meeting and planned to include Town Manager Griffin as well.

At least one resident did not like that idea. Peter Whittemore of Elm Court, who has been outspoken against the project in the past, said he felt having a private meeting with a private citizen went against the board's promise to be open and transparent with the Treat's Pond issue.

"I thought (this project) was not going to be continually hashed around behind the scenes," Whittemore said. "It seems like no one is in favor of this project."

Carlson denied the intended meeting was "behind the scenes."

"There are no deals being done, period," Carlson said.

A bit of back and forth ensued between Whittemore and Carlson. Whittemore asked why the Army Corps was still being discussed when it seemed the board made a decision a year ago when the board failed to get a majority vote in support of any of the possibilities.

"Maybe the processes aren't perfect, probably not," Carlson said, adding that any decision made would have to come forward to the Board of Selectmen.

Quigley asked Carlson if it would be appropriate to have Houghton come to discuss the issue with the rest of the Selectmen. Carlson said a private meeting was asked for and he intended to extend that courtesy.

"No commitments are going to be made," Carlson said.

The town has until April 15 to respond to the Army Corps of Engineers.

The Board of Selectmen spent much of 2008 and 2009 negotiating an easement license with residents of Sandy Cove. The license gives the town a legal path to access the Treat's Pond drainage pipe. The end of the pipe regularly has to be cleared out to ensure flow and lessen the chance of severe flooding.

Treat's Pond timeline

• June: Members of the Army Corps come before the Selectmen to propose efforts to revitalize Treat's Pond (off Atlantic Avenue) as a saltwater estuary.

• March: Letters to the editor pour in and discussions at Selectmen meetings drag on as controversy heats up on the Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project is on the warrant for Annual Town Meeting. Town Meeting supports a "resolution" to continue exploring the Army Corps plan and other stormwater solutions.

• April: Board of Selectmen Chairman Ted Carr promises residents an open and transparent process when it came to the town's involvement with the Army Corps' proposed Treat's Pond saltmarsh restoration project or other alternatives for the ailing wetland.

• June: The town's easement issue first comes into focus when the Sandy Cove property owners and the town could not come to a consensus on what rights were granted in a 1964 easement given to the town by Elizabeth Bigelow. The Board of Selectmen tries to find an amicable solution with Sandy Cove residents. Also this month, a well-attended workshop is held to discuss the problems and potential solutions to the flooding near Treat's Pond and Atlantic Avenue in relation to the stormwater master plan.

• September: Treat's Pond makes another appearance on the Selectmen's agenda as the board grapples with how to best (and legally) access the drainage pipe on Sandy Cove beach.

• October: The Selectmen place three articles outlining various options for Treat's Pond on the Special Town Meeting warrant. They are later removed from the warrant so the Selectmen can gather more information.

• January: The Board of Selectmen was split — two and two — on one of the two Army Corps project options on the Treats Pond outfall and, without a preferred route, they could not get majority vote on supporting the project.

• March: Town Meeting votes to give the Board of Selectmen the authority to accept an easement agreement from the six families whose property the easement to the Treat's Pond drainage pipe would cross.

• April: The Board of Selectmen revisits the Treat's Pond drainage pipe/Sandy Cove easement issue with local residents. The issue once again goes unresolved.

• September: Selectmen inch closer to an agreement with property owners over access the Treat's Pond drainage outfall at Sandy Cove, but still no easement or license is signed.

• October: Selectmen ink a "license agreement" with a group of Sandy Cove residents so they can legally access the end of the Treat's Pond drainage pipe to clear it out to ensure flow and diminish severe flooding situations in the area.

• February: The Board of Selectmen receives a letter from the Army Corps of Engineers asking for a final answer from the town on the Treat's Pond wetland restoration project. An answer is requested by April 15.

Shingles vaccine available from heath department

The Town of Cohasset has an opportunity to obtain Zoster vaccine from the Mass. Dept of Public Health for free. It's a one-time offer, as the state has been able to purchase the vaccine with federal stimulus money from the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act. The vaccine would be for any Cohasset resident 60 years of age and older.

The Shingles vaccine was recently recommended by the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices (ACIP) to reduce the risk of shingles and its associated pain in people 60 years old or older.

Shingles is a painful skin rash caused by a virus. Pain, itching or tingling of the skin which is followed by a painful skin rash of blister-like lesions, usually localized to a small area on one side of the body, and often the face or trunk. Other symptoms can include fever, headache, chills and upset stomach.

The Shingles vaccine was recently recommended by the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices (ACIP) to reduce the risk of shingles and its associated pain in people 60 years old or older.

If any resident is interested they should call Public Health Nurse Mary Goodwin at 781-383-2210 to be placed on the vaccine list.

Celebrate the life and work of Fran Hagerty

Cohasset Maritime Institute and the Cohasset Historical Society are thrilled to announce the exhibit and event, "Fran Hagerty, The Man, His Life, His Work" scheduled for Saturday, March 13 at 7p.m.

A major feature of the exhibit is donated archival films of Hagerty built boats; 110's sailing in Boston Harbor, the Charles River off MIT and Cohasset Harbor; ice boating, Hagerty Rowing Shells being raced and more. The films had never been viewed due to their fragile condition and age.

CMI and CHS coordinated in having the films professionally transferred to a digital format. Commenting on the content, Michael Dick of CMI stated, "We've got terrific footage of a 310 Hull #1 Minot's Light, with Fran Hagerty at the helm in Marblehead, in both black and white and color, really clean and bright. Footage of 110's racing in Long Island Sound out of Larchmont YC. There is also one roll that has a Hagerty's single rowing shell, in a demo run off the Harvard Boat House on the Charles. I also found footage of ice boats, sweet looking streamlined hulls; US Navy and private sailplanes taking off, flying, and landing; various types with really interesting wings and tails and some family footage".

The films coupled with the commentary of Fran Haggerty's son Peter should make for an evening sailing, rowing and historical enthusiasts will thoroughly enjoy.

Space is limited to 100 guests at the March 13 event, which begins at 7p.m. Tickets are available through the Historical Society ($10 for historical society or CMI member, $15 for non-members). Call 781-383-1434 or send an e-mail to cohassethistory@yahoo.com to reserve a spot.

Life of Naval aviator is topic

The incredible journey from a Reservation in Oklahoma Territory to Five Star Admiral is the story of J.J. "Jocko" Clark. "The Life and Times of a Naval Aviator" will be told by Admiral Clark's daughter, Mary Louise Clark, on Wednesday evening, March 17th, at the Cohasset Historical Society, 106 South Main St.

Part of the Wednesday Night Lecture Series, this evening will be dedicated to an uncommon man who became the first person of Native American descent to graduate from the Naval Academy, who served in three wars, and who led a life as interesting as any that the silver screen could imagine. Part of the program will be a short film on the US Aircraft carrier, Yorktown, which Admiral Clark commanded during the naval battles in the Pacific Theater during WW II Other aspects of his life will be shared with us from a daughter's unique point of view.

This program will start at 7:30, all are invited to attend, there is no charge and light refreshment will be served.

Should tax base share cost of Little Harbor sewer?

Town Meeting will debate the question

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Board of Selectmen will wait to hear the wisdom of Town Meeting before moving forward to an election ballot on a debt exclusion override for the Little Harbor sewer project.

A group of citizens have proposed splitting the cost of the sewer project 50/50 between the benefiting residents and the whole town through a citizen's petition article. The other two recent sewer expansion projects for the North and Central districts are being paid for under this scenario.

This is not the first time this issue was discussed and considered. A vote taken at the 2005 Annual Town Meeting and subsequent special election meant the cost of the largest sewer expansion project, involving 487 homes in Little Harbor, is being 100 percent borne by the benefiting residents.

A majority of the Board of Selectmen recommended the article to Town Meeting, but the board will wait to see what Town Meeting thinks before placing the question on an election ballot.

Griffin said the Town Meeting vote on the article is only advisory in nature and, no matter how Town Meeting votes, the Board of Selectmen are the only authority that can place the issue on a ballot. A ballot vote is a requirement for a debt exclusion override.

However, Selectman chair Paul Carlson, although he voted to recommend the article, said he felt the board should wait until after Town Meeting.

"If (the article) goes down at Town Meeting, I don't see the point of having it on the ballot," Carlson said.

The cost of a special election is about $5000, Griffin said. Carlson said the article deals with a huge amount of money and $5000 was not a great expense in the face of a $6-million-plus debt exclusion override question.

Town Manager Bill Griffin walked the board through the entire process from the creation of the very first sewer district up to Little Harbor sewer expansion project.

Sewer expansion and how it is paid for has a long history.

At the Feb. 22 Selectmen's meeting, Selectman Ted Carr asked for the background on how the process went forward on the Little Harbor sewer project as well as the North Cohasset and Central sewer district expansion projects in the late 90s.

At Monday's meeting, Town Manager Bill Griffin walked the board through the entire process from the creation of the very first sewer district up to Little Harbor sewer expansion project.

The original sewer district along the harbor and the village was originally constructed at a time when the federal government financed 90 percent of such projects. The remaining 10 percent was paid for through a small betterment charge to the benefiting residents.

In 1996, Town Meeting approved the $6.3 million North Cohasset Sewer District project to be financed through betterment. However, Town Meeting also voted that 50 percent of the cost of the project would be paid through the tax levy if voters at an election approved a debt exclusion question for that purpose. In a May election, voters defeated the debt exclusion question.

A year later, Town Meeting approved $13.5 million for the Central sewer district to be financed through betterment charges. This time Town Meeting again sent the issue to the ballot in a special election for voters to consider financing 50 percent of the total cost of the project. In the same motion, voters requested the financing of the North Cohasset sewer district expansion be reconsidered. In May 1997, voters approved the debt exclusion for North Cohasset and Central Cohasset making the projects 50 percent financed through the tax levy and 50 percent financed through benefits.

In 2005, when Town Meeting approved the $13.2 million appropriation for the Little Harbor sewer expansion project, it voted to finance the project through user betterments. Again, the question of a 50/50 split went to an election ballot. This time voters defeated the debt exclusion question making the Little Harbor project completely financed through betterment assessments.

March came in like a lion

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

GO BLUE!

Hello Cohasset! How is everyone doing this first week of March? A huge congratulations right off the bat is being sent out to the Cohasset High School girls basketball team as they get ready to play tomorrow in the Sectional Finals at U-Mass Boston. This team is on fire and put so much heart and soul into every game they play. Whatever the outcome, they are true champions and Cohasset is so proud of all the members of the team.

This past week has been a bit up and down in terms of weather and last weekend, we had a few visitors from some very cute and resting seals in the Harbor as well as a "mysterious blob and bones" that came to rest on the shores of Rocky Beach. Mother Nature continues to show us who ultimately is in charge, hopefully she has some nice weather to come this Spring. March roared in like a lion so now, maybe out like a lamb?

COLBY COLLEGE

Sara M. Meehan, a sophomore at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, was named to the dean's list for her outstanding academic achievement during the fall semester of the 2009-2010 year.

The daughter of Leo and Sara Meehan of Cohasset, Sara majors in theater and dance. She is a graduate of Cohasset Junior-Senior High School.

Students whose grade point averages were 3.6 or higher were named to the dean's list.

Great work, Sara!

PASSION PLUNGE

Here is a feel good story that happens each year and is something that you and the family could go and cheer for or even, join in the plunge. March Madness is Saturday, March 6th this year. It's the 12th Passion Plunge for Special Olympics Massachusetts (SOMA)! If you're looking for a great event to take part in, or to go watch and cheer on the Plungers, this is it! There's a costume parade at 11:15 a.m., followed by the mad dash of the plungers into the surf at noon at the Mary Jeannette Murray Bathhouse on Nantasket Beach.

Jay Nothnagle, plunging for his 10th time, is an athlete and Captain of the South Shore Mariners Team, which includes Cohasset plungers: Connie Afshar, Barbara Canney, Jack Delorenzo, Ron Goodwin, Bill Greentree, Jeff Nothnagle (Board Chair), Graham Sida, Nick Sida, and Doug Yeager, plus six from other South Shore towns. The funds they raise come back to our local Mariners program that has 90 athletes from age 8 to 66 from seven area towns. Please support our athletes with a pledge! You can do this with a check to your favorite plunger (payable to Special Olympics), or on-line at www.PassionPlunge.org, a secure site.

SWIMMERS

Congratulations goes out to the Cohasset Girls Swim Team whose 200 freestyle Relay came in 9th place in the State Division 2 Finals held Sunday Feb. 21, 2010 at Harvard's Blodgett Pool. The team of Sarah Libby,

Mimi Mahoney, Hope Kissick and Anniko Haber had their best time of 1:49.13. Other team members that qualified and participated included

Olivia Murphy, MacKenzie Hart and Michelle Berube.

ART WORK ARRIVES

The PSO is happy to remind parents that Original Works of Art will be arriving home today for students at the Osgood and Deer Hill Schools. The students have created their own art for a new and exciting PSO Fundraiser. The PSO hopes you enjoy your child's work and will consider ordering the art on any of 20 neat, fun products like notecards, luggage tags, and pet bandanas. The profits from this important sale go directly back into our schools through the PSO. Thank you to Mrs. Ogden and Ms. Berman, our Art Teachers, who helped the children create beautiful Works of Art and thank you to all families for participating in this fundraiser. Orders are due back at school by March 15th. If you have any, questions please feel free to contact PSO member Mary Jo Blackington at 781-383-0626

That is it for this week. Make sure to send all items to me no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm for your item to appear in the upcoming Friday's copy.

COURTESY PHOTO

Ian is friendly, playful and definitely looking for a home.

Ian is looking for a home

The Gimme Shelter opportunity this week goes to Ian, a young brownish tiger male. He's friendly, playful and is definitely looking for a home. He was found wandering the streets and one of the volunteers brought him to the shelter.

He has been to the vet, been neutered and he's now waiting for his "forever home." Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is hoping to find him a home soon as the sooner the cats are adopted from the shelter, the easier it is for them to adjust to a new home. You're invited to come visit Ian and all the fabulous felines. The website is www.hsar.org and is always up to date.

Shelter hours are 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. on Mondays, and 2 to 3 p.m. on Saturdays. Visit during these hours or call Shirl at 781-925-3380 for appointments only. The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull. The telephone numbers are 781-925-3121 or 1-877-378-1195. The mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, P.O. Box 787, Hull MA 02045, E-mail address is hsar.org@hsar.org. If you're on Face book, why not become a fan of Hull Seaside Animal Rescue.

The shelter loves to have visitors and the cats can use the extra attention.

Rowing program preps for season

Youth advisory group brings energy to program

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

There may be snow on the ground, freezing temperatures and rough seas, but a group of teenagers are itching to get out on water. High school rowers at Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) are aiming to start training later this month.

To harness the power of the younger generation and grow the youth program this year, CMI formed a youth advisory board of six high school rowers to weigh in on how to improve the program. The group is getting a jump-start on planning for the season and intends to plan to compete in more races throughout the season.

The combination of being out on the water, the opportunity for teamwork and camaraderie, as well as the chance for individual growth has kept the teenagers involved in the sport since middle school.

"What's good about rowing is it combines individual technique and teamwork. You have to be perfectly in sync for the boat to row well," said high school junior Emily Toomey.

For the young rowers, the sport is an alternative to the traditional high school sports and does not involve the level of commitment demanded of a varsity athlete. Typically, during the fall and spring rowing season the high school rowers get out on the water a couple times a week.

The CMI youth program is not affiliated with the high school, and is considered a community sport. About 35 students are active participants in the program. CMI also has an active adult program.

"It's different from everything the school has to offer," said Tara Goodwin, a high school junior, who is a part of a crew that will race in Hull's Snow Row this weekend.

The high school rowers have had many exhilarating, terrifying, and memorable experiences out on the water. In last fall's Head of the Weir race in Hull, rough seas made for a very tough and very wet race.

— Emily Toomey, CHS junior

"Waves were crashing over the boat, we were all soaking wet, it was terrifying," high school junior Ashley Howard recalls. Although many crews turned around because of the bad weather, they persevered and finished the race.

The program is still a ways away from putting the boats in the water, but they are planning on starting "land training" later this month. Land training means getting in shape for when it is actually time to get out on the water. The teens say it involves running, yoga, strength training and 'erging' – an exercise machine that mimics the motion of rowing.

"It really is a total body workout," Tara said. And, they say, it also is a mental sport where full concentration is necessary.

Although, Ashley admits, the beautiful scenery of the Cohasset shoreline can sometimes be a distraction to the perfection of rowing form.

"It's good to be out on the water," said Greta Shwachman, a high school junior who has been rowing since eighth grade. Cohasset's proximity and access to the ocean offers the opportunity to get involved in a sport other communities don't have, they said.

CMI has several four-man sliding seat ocean gigs. Although not widely raced competitively, the youth rowers attest the boats are sturdy, and therefore well-suited for the open ocean outside of Cohasset Harbor.

Susan Wilcox, a member of the CMI Board of Directors, said the youth advisory group has been a valuable resource.

"They have really taken charge in getting youth rowers interested in the program. Their energy is the biggest boon to the program and will continue to be," Wilcox said.

The group has gotten the word out at the Middle-High School through announcements, flyers and word of mouth. They've also been sending out e-mails and managing a facebook page. The youth program advisory board is doing its part to encourage all skill levels to participate and learn the sport of rowing.

"The more seasoned rowers can help out the newer rowers and give them tips," Ashley said.

The small community formed at the youth program, where many have graduated from and gone on to collegiate rowing programs, is a tight-knit group. For example, there is a standing tradition of baking cakes on people's birthdays,

"It's a small program and you're able to know everyone," Emily said.

High school seniors Cameron Lucitt and James Earle are also members of the youth program advisory board.

CMI is holding a high school spring rowing sign-up meeting next door to the boathouse at the Center for Student Coastal Research at the end of Parker Ave. on Tuesday, March 9. The spring season officially begins the week of March 30th. Students in grades 9 to 12 and all skill levels are welcome.

More information is available at the CMI website, www.rowcmi.com.

Hockey, football stars at SCORE Gala!

South Shore Art Center presents SCORE! an exhibition of sports-related original paintings, photographs and sculpture selected by a jury of experts through March 14.

On Saturday evening, March 6th, a SCORE! Gala fundraiser will feature three very special guests: Cohasset resident Mike O'Connell — a former Bruins player and General Manager who is now with the LA Kings; two-time Superbowl champion Patriots wide-receiver David Givens: and WBZ sportscaster Alice Cook. Givens is an artist with an inspirational story of how art has helped him through his early retirement due to a career-ending injury. He will be showing two pieces of his artwork in the Art Center's Dillon Gallery. The event will feature an impressive auction of sport tickets, including Red Sox tickets, a signed Dustin Pedroia game jersey, and autograph balls from John Lester, Tim Wakefield, and others; food and beverage, a sports-fashion runway, coordinated by Lisa Lynch of Ports, in Cohasset; DJ Rich DiMare; and a performance portrait painting of a Red Sox hero by artist Judy St. Peter.

The Gala benefits the art education and exhibition programs of South Shore Art Center. Tickets are $75 for Art Center members; $85 for non-members. For reservations or more information, visit www.ssac.org.

Town Meeting will consider water rate increase

At the same time, the department's debt service, where roughly $36 million is still owed, is rising each year until 2017, Pratt said. And, due to lots of rain this past summer, water consumption is at a five-year low, therefore revenue projections are not being realized on that end either.

If the water rate increase passes muster at town meeting a "typical" quarterly water bill for the use of 1800 cubic feet of water for a one-inch meter size will be $249.29, up from $204.94 under the current rate structure, an increase of about $45, or approximately 21 percent.

The special legislation that established the Water Department included a stipulation where all rate increases need Town Meeting approval. A majority vote is required to authorize the increase.

The Water Commission is continuing to work on the proposed rates as they finalize its budget, but have provided an outline of the proposed rate increase to be printed in the town meeting warrant.

Water bills are the sum of three separate and distinct rates — two are fixed and one is based on the amount of water consumed in a given quarter. Last year, both fixed costs were increased and restructured. Consumption-based rates were last increased at Annual Town Meeting in 2007.

This year the increases proposed are across the board.

First, the fixed rate, the portion of the bill that must be paid no matter how much water is consumed and is based on the size of the customer's water meter, is jumping from $94.06 to $112.87 (an increase $18.81) for the vast majority, roughly 80 percent, of water users in Cohasset.

Second, the rates tied to water consumption are also proposed to be increased and re-structured. Traditionally, the water department billed based on a two-tier system, with the second tier beginning when quarterly consumption was greater than 2,000 cubic feet. The new rate proposal includes the creation of third tier for water users consuming more than 4,001 cubic feet per quarter. In that tier each 100 cubic foot of water will cost $20.

Pratt said year-round there are about 80 customers who will typically fall into tier 3. That number rises to about 300 customers in the summer due to lawn sprinkling. The Middle-High School and the wastewater treatment plant, town-owned buildings that pay water bills, fall into the tier 3 category year-round.

The lower tiers are facing an increase as well. Tier 1's (usage up to 2,000 cubic feet) rate will be $6.19 (up from $5.19). Tier 2, which begins at usage of 2,001 cubic feet is proposed to increase from $10.32 to $14.45.

The rate increase also includes an increase on "private fire protection charges per hydrant," which impacts larger commercial developments, like Shaw's, Cohasset Plaza, Hingham Lumber, who have fire hydrants on their property.

The Water Department is an "enterprise fund," which means that it is self-sustaining through user fees and does not use money from the town's general fund. However, if there is a shortfall the town's general fund has to make up the difference before the next year's property tax rate is set.

A Water Commission public hearing on the rate increase is planned for sometime before Town Meeting, but has not yet been scheduled.

Water deficit this fiscal year likely

During the Selectmen comment period at Monday night's meeting, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer voiced his concern over the lack of information being dispersed about the Water Commission intended rate increase article at Annual Town Meeting.

"What needs to happen is (the townspeople need to get) a thorough understanding of the whole issue – and it may include an audit," Dormitzer said. He also asked what would happen if town meeting did not approve the rate increase – is the town liable to cover the shortfall?

"This is a hot issue given the fact we've had several rate increases in the past three years," Dormitzer said.

Town Manager Bill Griffin said if the water department, which is an enterprise fund, runs a deficit the town must set the tax rate so the general fund can cover the loss. Much like more typical snow and ice deficits, a water department deficit would have to be "righted" before next year's property tax rate is set, which typically occurs in November.

Reserves and/or budget cuts would have to be implemented to cover the shortfall, Griffin said at the Capital Budget Committee meeting Tuesday night.

Griffin said in all probability the water department is facing a deficit in the current fiscal year. The deficit could be anywhere between $500,000 to $1 million, Griffin said in a later interview. The fourth quarter water bill is a wild card and the third quarter's bill just went out.

"(Water) consumption is so far down and projects have not come down (as expected)," Griffin said. A wet summer and the delay of construction of the Avalon apartment complex are two of the main causes for the loss of revenue. In addition, the water department's one wholesale customer Linden Ponds retirement community in South Hingham stopped building in 2009.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said she found it "disturbing" that the Water Commission had been unable to get its figures together in a timely fashion. The Annual Town Meeting warrant headed to the press late this week and as of Monday Griffin did not have a revised budget from the commission.

"I have to say I find that unacceptable," Quigley said.

The Water Commission is scheduled to be before the Board of Selectmen this coming Monday night (March 8).

How to figure out what your increase could be

Look at a previous water bill to find out your typical water usage in a given quarter. Look at the column "cubic feet." Divide that number by 100. Plug that number in (USAGE) for the equation below.

For a typical four-person home on Tier 1 with a one-inch (or less) water meter:
(Fixed rate) $112.87 + (Charge per 100 cubic feet) $6.19 x (USAGE) + (hydrant fee) $25 = proposed new water quarterly bill.

"It needs to be dealt with because it's getting worse," Pratt said.

Lastly, there are items left over from the water department portion of the Little Harbor project that need to be paid for in the coming year. Pratt named street paving and unexpected pipe replacements as two of the outstanding items. There is no funding left from the previous water department appropriation for the project, which included the replacement of three miles of water main in the Little Harbor district while the streets were dug up for the sewer expansion project.

With Town Meeting looming just over three weeks away, the Capital Budget Committee had plenty of questions, but definitive answers on where the department – and the town – goes from here were few and far between.

Were there other water sources in town? No, likely not, Pratt said. Does Aquarion, which provides water to Hull, Hingham and North Cohasset, want to buy Cohasset water? In spite of discussion, not so far, Pratt said. Can the contract with American Water, the contracted company that operates the water department, be re-negotiated? We're trying, Pratt said.

Were there other options besides the water rate increase?

"Our only source of additional revenue is a rate increase," Pratt said. If approved by Town Meeting, the rate increase is expected to balance the proposed fiscal 2011 water department budget. But, a shortfall of anywhere between $500,000 and $1 million is expected for the current fiscal year.

Although as an enterprise fund the water department is supposed to be self-supporting, if there is deficit the town has to step in to rectify it (see related sidebar).

"It makes you ask the question, should we be in the water business?" said John Keniley, member of the Capital Budget Committee.

"The enterprise fund is broke…(it's) not solvent," Capital Budget Committee chair Steve Gaumer said. "It's a monopoly, but a monopoly with capped growth."

Although the town's residents and businesses who receive Cohasset water still need the service, many are calling for better quality water, but with a small customer base – about 2400 customers – to call on for financial support, the cost is rising too quickly for many.

Spring Street resident Jody Butman said she was concerned the water department was taking "band-aid approaches" and not addressing the big issues facing the water system. She named the proposed phosphate program as an example.

"To improve water quality, we need to do something drastic," Butman said. "We'll never be in compliance (when the new federal regulations are enforced) if we don't do something."

At the same time, she said if the Water Commission's proposed rate increase passes at Town Meeting Cohasset Water customers will be paying the highest rates in the state and still not receiving a quality product in return.

The $36.8 million debt: How did we get here?

In the wake of the water crisis of 1994, when the then-antiquated water distribution system essentially shut down leaving many homes without water, the town and Water Commission invested millions of dollars in improvements to both the plant and the distribution system.

Those improvements have left the water department with a huge debt service load – roughly 8 times its annual budget. According to town finance director Michael Buckley the water department has $36,860,000 in outstanding debt principal.

Some of the debt dates back to the construction of the water treatment plant and Aaron River Reservoir in 1978, but the vast majority of that debt sum has been approved by Town Meeting over the past 15 years. In 2004, Town Meeting approved a $21 million non-excluded debt for the water department to finish up revamping of the distribution system and take advantage of low interest rate offered by the state.

At that time, Water Commission chair Glenn Pratt said many warned against it arguing the town would spend the money too fast, and then be paying a high debt service bill each year.

"Whatever happened, we spent it, and maybe it was too fast…we're stuck in a bad place (now)," Pratt said.

Steve Gaumer, chair of the Capital Budget Committee, agreed the current situation happened with the approval of Town Meeting and voters.

"If a contract is bad, we signed it. If debt service is high, we approved it. If our leverage is extreme, we allowed it. It all happened in front of our eyes," Gaumer said "This storm has been brewing for quite awhile."

New cruiser not supported

A majority of the Capital Budget Committee was so concerned about the situation with the water department that they did not feel they should move forward to Town Meeting the only any capital request before them.

The only request they had was from the police department for a marked police cruiser and unmarked vehicle for detective use.

A majority of the board supported the purchase of at least one of the needed vehicles, just not at this Town Meeting. The request could be reconsidered for fall's special Town Meeting.

"We're frozen in place in light of what appears to be a gaping home for the water department budget," Capital Budget Committee chair Steve Gaumer said.

'Footloose' opens at Cohasset Dramatic Club March 12

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present the smash Broadway hit "Footloose," from March 12 to 28 at the historic Town Hall Theater on the Cohasset Common. A large and talented cast will present this high-energy musical featuring many memorable hit songs from the 1984 hit film starring Kevin Bacon. In a nod to the Six Degrees of Kevin Bacon game, the cast – comprised of many veteran Boston area performers - has charted their own degrees of separation through their acting experiences. In addition, a portion of the proceeds from the 'Messages to the Stars' fundraiser held at each "Footloose" performance will go to help relief efforts in Haiti through Kevin Bacon's SixDegrees.org.

Both the film and stage versions of "Footloose" feature an unmatched number of top 40 hits by the likes of Kenny Loggins, Eric Carmen and Sammy Hagar. The story presents a timeless tale of youthful rebellion and romance coming up against the establishment of one small town – as told through a powerhouse combination of exuberant dance, comedy and songs that will raise the roof off the old Town Hall.

The show is directed by Lisa Pratt, music directed by Mark Bono, choreographed by Caroline Maus and produced by Cecelia Chapman. "Footloose" performances are Fridays and Saturdays, March 12 to 27 at 7:30 p.m. and matinees on Sundays, March 14 to 28, at 2 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall Theater, 41 Highland Avenue. Tickets are $18 for general admission and $14 for seniors, students and groups and can be purchased at Paperscapes, Cohasset Village, Buttonwood Books CJC Hwy, Cohasset or via reservation at 617-697-2115. Tickets may also be purchased the day of the show, one hour prior to the show at the box office. For more information, go to www.cohassetdramaticclub.org.

HOME HEALTHCARE AIDES

Home healthcare aides assist seniors who live in their own homes. They are trained to provide routine personal care services and can perform basic housekeeping tasks. Home healthcare aides are a great help to seniors who require more extensive care than family and friends can provide. They can help the senior get in and out of bed, bathe, dress and groom. They also provide valuable companionship. Under the direction of nursing or medical staff, home health aides may assist with medical equipment and change nonsterile dressings. Depending upon the needs of the senior at home, a home healthcare service can help you choose the appropriate home healthcare aide to assist your loved one.

If you think that a home health care aide might be right for you or for a loved one, call 781-878-2994 to schedule an initial consultation today. Our compassionate companions are screened and bonded, so you know you're getting a kind and caring aide. We can provide a wide variety of services, from full-time live-in companions for long-term situations, to the occasional respite visit, so that you can have a day off. If you have any questions, we're always available at any time, because we know that a crisis can strike anytime. Call today to find out more. We are located at 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

P.S. Home healthcare aides make it possible for seniors to continue living where they are most comfortable - in their homes.

School certifies budget

Budget request has $100K gap from town estimates

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"We've really had to pare down, we've found efficiencies in everything, everything has really been looked at."
— Adrienne MacCarthy, School Committee

The School Committee is going to Town Meeting to request a budget of $15,138,688, an increase of 2.9 percent, or $425,668, over the current fiscal year.

However, the certified budget number, which was approved in a unanimous vote, is approximately $100,000 above what Town Manager Bill Griffin has said the town can afford.

What that means is on the town meeting floor a $100,000 will need to come from somewhere – perhaps through cuts on the town side of budget, fees or create an override scenario. The fiscal 2011 operating budget is slated for discussion at Town Meeting on Saturday, March 27.

One of the major features of the proposed budget is it does not include increased athletic or bus fees.

The fiscal 2011 budget has come a long way from its initial proposal back in January. At that time, the school department presented a budget with a 4.6 percent increase, or $671,761, over fiscal 2010.

Looking at the revenue projections for the next year, Town Manager Griffin said a 2.1 percent increase to the school budget was all that was possible, without an override. The two numbers were about $350,000 apart.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said her administration team and the committee have looked for savings, efficiencies and firmed up numbers over the past two months.

"We wanted to bring the budget in line (with the town) as best we could," Walsh said.

School Committee chair Adrienne MacCarthy said it was time for the town to really understand the fiscal challenges facing the school district.

"We've really had to pare down, we've found efficiencies in everything, everything has really been looked at," MacCarthy said.

"At the end of the day, from my perspective, the $15.138 million is as scrubbed down as it can be without increasing fees…this is a small number (the $100,000) to go to Town Meeting for. We have met the town for the last four years, it might be time for people to hear (what the school is facing)," MacCarthy said.

"If it goes down, it goes down. We'll come back and find ways to handle it."

The school department presented several adjustments, both increases and decreases, from its original proposal back in January on Wednesday night.

A new collaborative contract for gas heat is expected to reap an $87,000 savings in that line item. Reserves from the transportation revolving fund will be used to offset bus driver salaries about $30,000 next year. School psychologist services were reduced by 20 days, yielding a $13,000 savings.

At the same time, firmer numbers came in higher than initial estimates. A new out of district special education placement increased that line item by $48,000. The legal budget was increased by $55,000 to more closely cover those costs.

And then there are some question marks, or unconfirmed adjustments. The school department is expecting a federal stimulus grant of $164,000 to continue into a second year, but nothing definitive had been heard yet. Options are being explored to better control the bus maintenance budget, and estimated savings are $52,000. And if special education out-of-district tuitions are frozen at fiscal 2010 costs, it could yield a $28,000 savings.

In total, the school department found a possible $245,000 to close the gap – and not increase fees – between its own numbers and the town's numbers.

"To be realistic, we are cutting services," Walsh said, citing the 20-day reduction of school psychologist services.

Walsh also voiced concerns about the continual reliance on fees, gifts, booster clubs, grants and tuition, which have made up about 11 or 12 percent of the total cost to run the district.

"The need for long range planning is critical," Walsh said.

School Committee members discussed their disagreement with the unemployment cost being included in the school operating budget because of its variable nature. The schools are expecting to pay about $240,000 in unemployment costs this year. This is the first fiscal year where unemployment costs have been included in the school budget.

CIVIL WAR CAMP MEETS MARCH 10

Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War Satuit Camp 3188 will meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday, March 10, at Grand Army Hall, 353 Country Way in Scituate.

The Sons of Unions Veterans of the Civil War (SUVCW) is a patriotic and educational organization.

Membership is open to males, ages 14 and older, who are direct descendants of a solider, sailor, or Marine who served during the Civil War. Junior and associate memberships are also available.

The camp will help prospective members with the paperwork to determine eligibility. Members do not have to be Scituate residents.

A women's auxiliary is also forming. For information contact Conley Ford at cfordcon@comcast.net or call 781-545-0054.

Democratic Town Committee movie night and talk

Cohasset Democratic Town Committee is continuing its efforts to inform citizens on issues of local, national and international interest with two back-to-back events back March 5 and 6.

The committee will present the movie "Kite Runner," which is based on a best-selling book of the same name by Khaled Hosseini, at 7 p.m., on Friday, March 5.

After the regular monthly meeting, at 10 a.m., on Saturday, March 6, the committee will hear from two local citizens, Nader and Connie Afshar, who have spent many years living, traveling and working in Afghanistan.

Both events will take place in the Meeting Room of Paul Pratt Library.

Thirty Eight Year Old Loses 30 Pounds In Three Months!

BEFORE

I have been overweight for as long as I can remember. I have see-sawed for years: losing weight for special occasions only to gain it right back. After witnessing my mother's transformation at Get In Shape I knew I had to do something to change my own life.

After a sobering conversation with my new trainer about the status of my health, we both knew I could not do this alone. I made a promise that I would do whatever it took. In three months I have lost weight, body fat and quit smoking. I have made a complete lifestyle change!

Question of the Week

The School Committee races promise to perk up what could otherwise be a sleepy April 10 Town Election.

Linda Snowdale, Paul Ognibene, Jeanne Astino and incumbent Adrienne MacCarthy are in a four-way race for two seats on the School Committee.

As in keeping with our tradition, we will pose a Question of the Week to local candidates in contested races.

All candidates opposed or unopposed, who have not already done so, are invited to submit photographs and formal statements announcing their candidacies.

Starting next week, we will feature candidates' answers to the Question of the Week. Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by noon, Wednesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

The following is the first Question of the Week for both the School Committee candidates:

For the school committee candidates: Town boards have a lot of business to attend to. However, it is the public's business. Even as reporters we face challenges grasping all the issue and at times, boards do not relate well to audience members whether present at the meeting or on TV. What can you do to ensure the School Committee's business is more "user friendly" to the citizenry?

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the noon Wednesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words) per week, from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers or short statements on issues.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Steeple will look the same

TO THE EDITOR:

I guess it is a lesson in "Be careful what you wish for." Namely, the Historic District.

Imagine in this day and age to be hung up over the issue of wood or wood "look-a-like".

Should we do away with cell service and go back to land line? After all we have all those interesting poles and lines threaded thru the historic district!

I hope common sense prevails in the issue of wood verses "look-a-like wood" on the church steeple. Even close up I challenge any one to see the difference close up between the two of good quality synthetic, let alone 40 feet away.

Just on the issue of maintenance cost alone I believe the church would have much to gain and perhaps we will have cell service in the many areas of town that does not now have it.

I do believe we have entered the technology age and we all should have the benefit of it.

Up to the challenge

TO THE EDITOR:

I have been challenged by Jay, Taffy and Jeff Nothnagle, and accepted along with my five children, to take part in the Passion Plunge this Saturday March 6 on Nantasket Beach. Anywhere from 300 to 500 people gather at Nantasket Beach to plunge into the ocean. The swimmers are sponsored through donations on line at www.PassionPlunge.org. The Passion Plunge helps fund the Massachusetts Special Olympics consisting of about 11,639 athletes. I know times are difficult but every little bit helps.

Thank you.

HEALTH NOTES

Flu season timing off this year

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

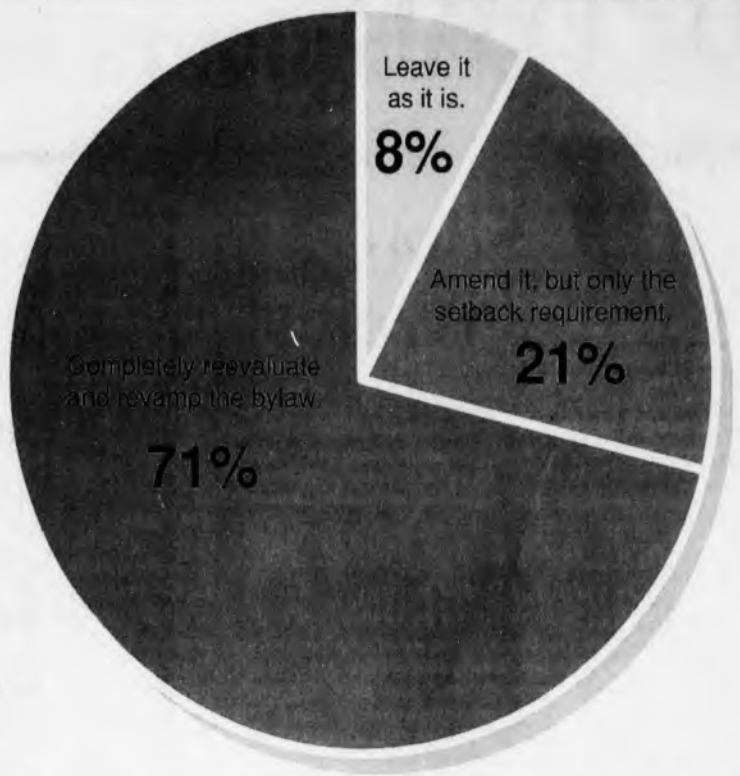
... last year nationally, about 55 million people were infected with 2009 H1N1.

Seemingly, we are leaving the flu season: Keeping healthy this winter has mainly been about keeping warm. For Cohasset, cases of flu last October, however, were the highest number reported since 1993, when records began to be maintained. Timing of this year's flu cycle of activity has been displaced by four months. The highest level occurred at the beginning of October last year. Reported illnesses are falling below 1 percent nationally at the end of January, usually the peak of flu season — unheard of at this time of year.

As of early October the recommendation was to treat people as if they had the flu and not to swab for disease confirmation. Thus, there were no actual numbers and no idea how much actual seasonal flu is circulating. The numbers, however are low, the usual case when a new, novel virus like H1N1 appears. If the shape of the curve (incidence with time) is like other years, we will have a low flu incidence in March.

Generally such a phenomenon is an indicator of a pandemic and indeed, one recent Health Notes explained in lurid detail the story of a pandemic (1918). Perhaps we were overenthusiastic. Nevertheless, changing the annual timing of an illness cycle by a few months is generally recognized as a pandemic indicator. Fortunately the cycle for flu-type pandemics in this era is about 40 years. In 2050, you are welcome to contact Health Notes with stories about flu illnesses. We will listen eagerly.

The CDC estimates, however, that last year nationally, about 55 million people were infected with 2009 H1N1. About 246,000 2009 H1N1-related hospitalizations occurred between April and Dec. 12, 2009. Between about 11,000 2009 H1N1-related deaths occurred. Flu activity, according to the CDC, caused by either 2009 H1N1 or seasonal flu viruses, may rise and fall, but is expected to continue for weeks. It's possible that the United States could experience another large wave of flu activity caused by either 2009 H1N1 or seasonal influenza.



Vaccination: CDC recommends influenza vaccination as the first and most important step in protecting against the flu. CDC is encouraging anyone who wants to protect themselves against 2009 H1N1 to get vaccinated, including people 65 years and older. While less likely to get sick with 2009 H1N1 than younger people, people 65 and older are at high risk of serious complications if they do become ill. Vaccination of people with certain health conditions also is important because they are at higher risk of serious flu-related complications. Health conditions that increase the risk of being hospitalized from 2009 H1N1 include lung disease like asthma or chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD), diabetes, heart, or neurologic disease. Presumably you've received a flu shot, the principal defense against chills, runny nose, etc., but if not, see the health nurse at Town hall and she can either give you a shot or can find a source.

On a lighter note, the weather will change and snow will be replaced by rain and flooding. It's nearly time to begin to worry about runny noses and wet feet, Daylight Savings time, St. Patrick's Day, the beginning of Spring and how to prepare for Easter Sunday.

POLL

Everyone has an opinion on wind turbine bylaw

The results from our on-line poll about Cohasset's Wind Turbine Bylaw are in!

As you can see from the pie chart – 71 percent of the votes said the town needs to completely reevaluate and revamp the bylaw. As of Thursday morning, there were a total of 104 votes in the poll.

Here is the question posed to our Web visitors:

Everyone loves wind power but not in their backyard. What, if anything, would you like to see happen with Cohasset's wind turbine bylaw?

- Leave it as it is (9 votes).
- Amend it, but only the setback requirement. (21 votes).
- Completely reevaluate and revamp the bylaw. (74 votes).
- No opinion (0 votes).

Total votes: 104 (as of Thursday morning).

One online bloggers wrote in part:

- I believe the turbines should be allowed, but only if they are reasonable. By reasonable I mean at least 1/3 smaller and have the town directly benefit from the power.
- After more than a year of hearing about the CCI project we have learned a lot and now have the chance to reevaluate and refine the bylaw to make sure it is objective, reasonable and in standing with industry standards to ensure we have the 'right' windpower for our town.
- The bylaw needs to be revamped and alternative ideas put forward.
- We do not need a bylaw for the purpose of allowing commercial energy production in town, at the expense of all and for the benefit of one. We should be looking at how to take advantage of these technologies for mutual benefit. The first windmill in town (the first 20 in fact) should go on the roof of the high school.
- Two points 1) the original purpose of this enterprise was to help offset the town's electical bill. This bylaw does not accomplish this 2) Perversely, selling wind power to the grid is actually more expensive to the utility thus increasing all our electricity bills, including the town. Lets focus on getting some net benefit for the town.
- Before making up your mind and supporting reducing setbacks, please read the article from Portland Press Herald about the experience of residents in Maine with their turbines similar to those proposed here. Even those pro-wind power are now very unhappy with the noise, not as anticipated.

While our polls are not scientific, we think the polls can be a good vehicle to provide a quick snapshot of public opinion.

We have the ability to conduct polls as often as we want. Be sure to visit: www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset to vote in our weekly polls. We hope to more of you will participate in our polls. Voting only takes a minute.

We welcome ideas for new polls. Please email your thoughts to editor Mary Ford at mford@cnc.com

In the meantime, please vote in our weekly poll and check out our newly designed Web site.

Let us know your thoughts!

Tons of good programs at center

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE MULLEN

Then we were served lunch, which ended with a birthday cake, complete with candles, in honor of January and February birthdays.

Spring, according to the calendar, is just around the corner. However, having lived through a great many months of March, I know the weather can be pretty mean, with much wind and possibly a good amount of snow. But it is also the month when new growth begins to peek above the earth's surface. That is a pleasant thought.

We've had some good programs at the Center. Connie Reed from the Gold Living Center spoke about slips and falls and what precautions to take to avoid them. The Center on Chief Justice Cushing Highway has an equipped gym. It is open at no cost to the seniors in town, so if you want to strengthen those muscles, just give them a call.

Rosmarie Engel-Conn of Cohasset was invited to continue the narrative of her memories of World War II. This time she spoke of the Russian invasion of Germany at the close of the war. Terror, destruction and death were expected at the hands of the Russian soldiers. Rosmarie tells how her brave mother took the children and what they needed for survival to hide deep in the woods until the Russians had passed through their hometown of Wittenburg.

On another Wednesday Kathy Dunn of Hull spoke to us about chair yoga, citing the benefits to balance, breathing and more. She went through some of the routine moves. She will be our instructor for the class in chair yoga, which begins on March 9 at the Center at 1 p.m. If you would like to gently exercise, be sure to drop in.

Last week Michelle Ellicks from the Boston office of the Registry of Motor Vehicles spoke to us about safe driving for seniors. She stressed the fact that notices of license renewal are no longer mailed out. It is important to know the expiration date on your license and have it renewed on time. We were all surprised to hear that a license may be renewed a year in advance. After speaking, Michelle answered many questions from her audience. Then we were served lunch, which ended with a birthday cake, complete with candles, in honor of January and February birthdays.

The annual Valentine's Day tea was enjoyed by a large group. Although it snowed on the date set and had to be cancelled, we were able to have it two days later. As usual delicious high tea was served by Anna and her helpers. This year we were delighted to be entertained by John Monte. He is an impressionist and impersonated many well-know singers and comedians. It was a most enjoyable afternoon.

Would you like to play a friendly game of bridge now and then? There is a small group of players who meet at the Center on Wednesdays, at 1 p.m. They would like to increase their number and would give you a warm welcome. It would not matter if you were a little rusty or a beginner. All comers are welcome. This is a drop-in, no reservations needed. Come and bring a friend.

Louise Smullen's column runs monthly in the Cohasset Mariner.

Ordering flags for Healing Field

The Sons of the American Legion is planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2010 observances.

The effort should result in hundreds of American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island faces Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces. (Those who purchase flags will be able to pick them up after 10 days).

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

The Healing Field will be on display from May 22 to June 1. The dedication is scheduled for 1 p.m., Saturday, May 29.

Many possible sites for wind turbines

COMMENTARY

CONRAD LANGENHAGEN

In fact, there are over 20 locations in town where industrial turbines would fit based on the current setback provision.

There has been some confusion and misstatements made about Cohasset's wind turbine bylaw and the implication of the planning board's multiple rejections of CCI Energy's application for two 460-foot turbines on the Graham Waste site.

The most common misperception is that because CCI's application violated the setback provision of the bylaw, no turbines can be built in Town without changing the by-law. This is simply an incorrect assumption and conclusion.

At last Tuesday's Alternative Energy Committee (AEC) meeting, the committee explored this issue in detail, pouring over plot plans of Cohasset. In fact, there are over 20 locations in town where industrial turbines would fit based on the current setback provision. This includes properly-sited 460-foot turbines on the Graham Waste site, Turkey Hill, the Avalon property, the Cohasset Golf Club, and the Transfer Station (if Cohasset-owned properties are combined). It also allows for smaller turbines to be placed at the High School, on the Wakeman estate along the water, the Transfer Station, and at over a dozen other sites around town.

Consistent with Massachusetts' guidelines for siting turbines and "in order to ensure public safety and to protect the interest of neighboring property owners," the bylaw was originally written with the intention that the setback requirement would prevent a turbine from falling on abutting properties should the worst-case event happen. It also served the purpose of scaling projects appropriately, and providing a minimal de facto safety buffer that is otherwise absent from the bylaw.

Two years after the by-law's initial passage and after its first major tests, the AEC has agreed to review the bylaw and the Committee began to lay out a process to do so with public input. Undoubtedly the setback issue will be reviewed as well as other measurable provisions that caused much discussion including allowable height, the criteria for sound measurement, and the level of acceptable shadow flicker. Also, as the Town looks forward to a potential town-sponsored project, other aspects of the review may include economic considerations for Cohasset and the feasibility for public/private partnerships.

Conrad Langenhagen is an expert in the wind power industry, and is a member of the Alternative Energy Committee. He lives at 24 Sanctuary Pond Road.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Ognibene to host campaign kickoff

Paul M. Ognibene and his wife, Jennifer, will be hosting a campaign kick-off event at their home, which is located at 44 Beach St., on Sunday, March 14. The meet-and-greet is scheduled from 5 to 7 p.m.; kids are welcome. Ognibene says, "I look forward to meeting with my fellow Cohasset residents and to discussing people's concerns and priorities for the schools."

He adds, "The event will be a good opportunity to spread the message that I'm running for School Committee to provide leadership and to help ensure that we capitalize on Cohasset's unique opportunity to be one of the finest public school systems in Massachusetts and in the country."

Ognibene (pronounced own-ya-bay-knee) is the father of two young children and intends to bring his entrepreneurial spirit, business mind, and passion for creative problem solving to the School Committee.

REFLECTIONS

"For me, looking back, this night as like an inferno of biblical dimension," Engel-Conn writes of the harrowing experience.

"It still stirs me up today whenever I read it," she said after reading aloud her personal account of the bombing of Dresden.

She feels it has been an important process for her personally and as a historical record to write down her World War II experiences that shaped her life at age 17.

"There are not so many living and able to give their feelings," Engel-Conn said.

Engel-Conn said she has always been a creative person, and is on a constant search for fresh creative outlets. For example, she makes note cards from dried flowers, has paintings of vegetables and florals hung in her home and has an interest in fashion.

She said she is not one to sit idly.

"I like to do something, make something out of nothing. I always say 'when you have an idea, you shouldn't hesitate. Always be ready for a task. Don't wait for something to happen, you have to do it,'" Engel-Conn said.

A former art teacher and school principal, Engel-Conn moved to the US 10 years ago, and has called Cohasset home for the past four years.

A lifelong learner she has taken advantage of Italian and French classes at the South Shore Community Center as well as the library's Brain Fitness computer program.

Although she misses her native Germany, she loves Cohasset and everything it has going on.

She has written all her memoirs in English, interestingly, not in her native tongue.

"I cannot write them in German, the words become stiff, not vivid. With the English language, it just flows," Engel-Conn said.

So far, she has written six separate, but inter-related and chronological stories about her experiences toward the end of World War II. Over the next few weeks the Mariner will be publishing several of Engel-Conn's memoirs in their entirety recounting her experience of living in Germany at the end of World War II.

She has been surprised at the interest locals have shown in "such far back times." She was floored when a crowd of about 60 people came out to hear from her and from her memoirs at a Historical Society sponsored event in the late fall.

Rosmarie Engel-Conn reads the story of her encounter with Joseph Stalin.

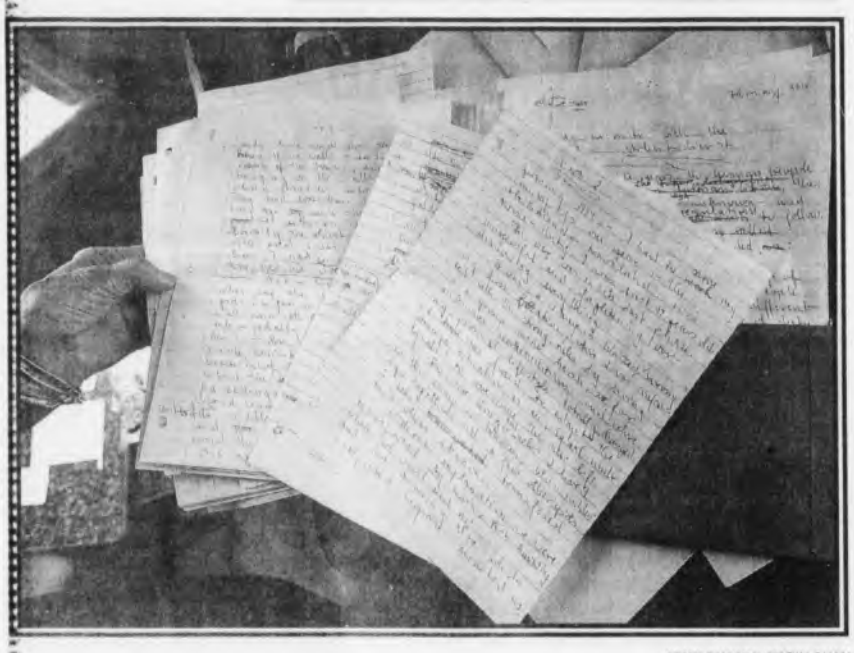
Lifelong pen pals

Her memoirs, and in particular an unlikely lifelong friendship, has sparked the interest of the BBC (British Broadcasting Corporation).

Following the war, Engel-Conn, then 18, became an avid listener to the radio and one of the stations she was able to pick up was the BBC. One night she heard about an offer encouraging young people in Germany to write a letter to the station about their current situation and daily life. The letter would then be given to an English person of the same age.

"Obviously with the purpose to connect the youth of both war struck countries and to build a bridge to the future, after the hard wartime," Engel-Conn writes in her memoirs.

Using her limited English she wrote the letter and – to her delight – received one back from a young girl in London. The two became pen pals. Later, her British friend introduced her to a Swiss girl and the three began a written conversation through letters.



Sixty-five years later the three women still write to each other.

In her essay on this experience, Engel-Conn writes, "Borders seemed to vanish, 'a smell of freedom,' opening up for more! Not really knowing what to expect, but all accepting like a beam of light in this dark after-war-time."

The story of Engel-Conn and her pen pals has garnered interest from the BBC and she could appear in a documentary on the 65-year friendship that was initiated by the BBC.

Continuing series

Over the next few weeks the Mariner will be publishing several of Rosmarie Engel-Conn's memoirs in their entirety. The personal essays re-count her experiences of living in Germany during and after World War II.

'We stood breathless and speechless'

Dresden, Germany in 1945

By Rosmarie Engel-Conn
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Germany – February 1945 – the last months before the end of the war.

After finishing school, I had to work for some time in an ammunitions factory, serving my country in Dresden, Saxony. With 25 girls I lived at the edge of this beautiful city in a camp located amidst flat meadows. Two big rural, wooden barracks gave us shelter. Our narrow beds were stacked above each other. We slept on rough burlap sacks, filled with straw and covered by blue and white checkered cotton. The strong smelling straw had to be lifted and stirred up each morning by moving one hand in an opening of the burlap sack. Dust, bad smells and the breaking sound of straw accompanied this unloved procedure. But not done properly, this very natural mattress would have been hard and flat like a wooden board.

Being just 17, this strange life of working and living poorly, as a member of a group, seemed like an adventure to me, not knowing how sudden this adventure should come to a tragic end.

One evening, I was in charge for preparations in the primitive, rural kitchen. I remember the meal, which was prepared this night so well as if I would have prepared it today. In big round pots the steaming potatoes, accompanied by roasted dark brown blood sausages in big flat pans. The steam, smoke and smell of food and our laughter, a kind of pleasant feeling, in expectation of our supper together!

Included in the kitchen service, a much-hated job was the cleaning afterwards and this evening it would have been not even necessary as it turned out later.

At around 12 a.m., the loud shrill sound of sirens tore us out of deep sleep. As always in expectation of bombing attacks on Dresden by the British Royal Air. Force, we slipped as fast as we could in some clothes and ran trembling in a small, dark underground tunnel a type of bunker in the earth similar to a moles home. Flat, very low ceiling, no standing possible. We sat together on the bare, cold ground with the rounded shoulders pressed against each other, with tired, but wide opened anxious eyes. Moisture and cold came off the bare earth, which surrounded us.

We sat together on the bare, cold ground with the rounded shoulders pressed against each other, with tired, but wide opened anxious eyes. Moisture and cold came off the bare earth, which surrounded us.

And there it was! The dangerous, trumping, deadly, continuously, swinging sound of airplanes crossing above us. The strong sound didn't seem to pass by. British bombers-so many of them!

Scared, trembling, full of fear, holding hands of each other some girls started to cry. Some courageous ones spied out of the open entrance. In rather near distance one could see the silhouette of Dresden, this beautiful town on the Elbe River with its wonderful buildings, erected over the centuries by the Kings of Saxony. Dresden, also known as "Florence on the Elbe" a treasure in the chain of remarkable historic cities in Germany. Could it survive such a massive attack? What would happen next?

Our teeth were chattering against one another, anxiety was rising! This was not one of the former experienced attacks by the British, this was terrible danger of survival for everyone and everything.

Still in the air the loud horrifying sound of airplane motors now arriving in a new wave without interruption! Hundreds of falling bombs exploded in loud detonations and again detonations, explosions a terrible deadly noise not ending. All was aimed on the city!

We, trembling full of fear crying, shaky crawled out of our hiding tunnel.

Speechless, holding each other with eyes wide open; we stared at the developing disaster and the stronger emerging fire. Everyone knew in this moment we witnessed a deadly inferno-the death of a beautiful, beloved city! And nobody could stop it!

Involved in this tragic dying were hundreds of people, who had sought shelter during the last weeks on the meadows near the river, in the large railway station and in churches; people who fled the approaching Russian Army and sought refuge in Dresden. What desperation!

A scenario started to evolve I never can forget! The towers of old historic churches and buildings in flame, their skeletons all lit up in bright, yellow and red wild burning fire before one after the other one burst together in themselves and went down to nothing. The smell, which reached us now, smell of fire, smoke and dust! Dirty particles started to fill the air and breathing them in filled our tongues and throats with the dry bitter taste of burning fire, disaster, of death! The silhouette of Dresden in a picturesque lit up appearance.

We stood breathless and speechless. But then very fast we had to crawl back in our hiding tunnel under the earth surface, another wave of planes with humming motors was flying over us. With shaky fingers we received now, in good old German order, the release certificate of our ending duty. No time for good-byes! Everyone grabbed some belongings, not knowing what to take. Out, off, anywhere away from this disaster which seemed to come closer.

It was dawning in the meantime and one could hear the loud crushing and falling of the burning buildings, but scary there was not one human sound, even we didn't talk. The only thought was how to find a way out of this deadly happening. Together with another girl, we ran to the next road, we hoped to find help and rescue, whatsoever. It was deadly silence in the smoke filled. Some trucks slowly passed by. We waved heavily, no one spoke, they didn't stop. All were loaded with standing people. Trembling and crying we ran and ran, desperate! Running to escape death.

Now above us the not ending steady humming, trumping motors of waves of new bombers. And then, suddenly detonations close to us. What to do? We ran in one of the single standing houses aside of the road. Hiding there? Was it right or was it wrong? We didn't know. There was no thinking only instinctive acting to be invisible for this huge deadly, mighty power above us. The door was wide open. In the small entrance hall of the family size house we pressed ourselves against the wall in a fetal position. No body seemed to be inside. No voices, no movements. This raised our anxiety – and really – they burst down close to us – fire bombs crashing in an explosion of noise and fire. Suddenly a loud bursting on the roof above us and explosions in front of the house door.

I remember, we didn't cry or shout for help. Nobody was around anyway. As fast as we could we ran out – off – away, running for our lives. Through all the danger, running in desperation on the empty road. We were breathing in an air filled thick with smoke and dust, coughing, we ran through heaps of emerging fire around us.

Some trucks passed by again all over-loaded. People even hanging on both sides of the cars.

Finally, a fully loaded truck stopped beside us, helping hands reached down and drew us two girls up. There were no questions – no answers – nothing – we didn't know where we were going.

Slowly, so slowly the heavy-loaded truck moved forward. Speechless standing, everybody stared back on the burning inferno in the distance, witnessing the deadly end of Dresden. We learned, the driver tried to reach Leipzig, a 70-mile distance. When we finally arrived there, the truck unloaded its strange load at the large railway station and the people ran away in an aimless hurry in all directions. There were long, long lines in front of the few telephone booths.

After endless waiting, I finally was able to call home. But when I contacted my mother by phone, she couldn't speak one word! I only heard crying, which didn't seem to stop. Later she told me, listening to the radio which informed continuously about the massive airplane attacks on Dresden in so many waves, that she was on her knees all night praying, hoping for the survival of her daughter.

For me, looking back, this night was like an inferno of biblical dimension.

David Cutler, founder of the Mariner Newspapers, established the Cohasset Mariner in 1978.

'He was the ultimate community journalist'

David Cutler dies at 66

By Micah Flores
MFLORES@CNC.COM

David Cutler made up his mind more than a decade ago that he didn't want anyone to be sad at his funeral.

Josh Cutler, David's son, recalled that the topic came up when David's father John, his grandfather, died in 1998. The two were walking out of the funeral home when David turned to tell Josh that he wanted the stories told at his funeral to be funny.

"That's what I intend to do," said Josh, who for the last 12 years worked alongside his father at the Duxbury Clipper, the community newspaper started by his grandparents in 1950.

One of those funny stories Josh remembers is the time a cleaning woman threw out the company checkbooks because David carried them around in a green garbage bag.

"From the outside, he was a very successful businessman, but he was very disorganized," Josh said.

Josh, having recently left the newspaper to run for state representative, remembered the legacy of his father on Monday, the day after David Cutler, publisher of the Duxbury Clipper and founder of Mariner Newspapers, including the Marshfield Mariner, died at age 66 after battling cancer the past several months. (See obituary on page 25.)

"We were like best friends. We'd talk about baseball, the Red Sox, politics. He was so knowledgeable about everything," Josh said, recalling that when he was child, he used to come to the old Mariner office, known as "the barn," to play.

David's lifelong friend David Mittell Jr. said it was well known that David's lifelong work was his children.

"But he was so beloved by the people who worked for him," said Mittell, who wrote columns through the years for the Mariner and then the Patriot Ledger. "He had a great intellect. He was a great reader and loved to talk about history and politics."

Mittell, 66, said he first met David during a tennis match when he was 13.

"It was a challenge match to see who would make the team," he said, adding that David eventually won the battle. "But by the end of the set he and I were friends throughout our lives."

Also memorable was David's sense of humor, Mittell said.

"He would get himself into hysterics off his own jokes," Mittell said.

Former Cohasset Mariner editor and executive editor Jane Lane said she will never forget David and the legacy he left behind.

"He really took on the role of mentor for really a generation of reporters," said Lane, who is the press secretary for the Boston-based communications consulting firm Johnston Associates.

> "He was just a great boss, he was very understanding and he knew what he was talking about when it came to journalism."
> — Judy Enright, former editor

Never quite the corporate executive type, she said, David was still a successful businessman and was "hands-on" in just about everything he did.

"He was a newspaperman's newspaperman," Lane said.

Lane, who spent the better part of a decade working under David, said that it was a privilege to work alongside a mentor who fostered such a caring environment. Lane said she continued to stay in touch with David and that she was having a hard time coming to terms with the loss of her friend.

"He was just a life force for hundreds and hundreds of people," she said.

Looking back, David seemed to thoroughly love and enjoy every minute of what he was doing, Lane said, adding, "Life just won't be the same without him in it."

Mary Ford, editor of the Hingham Journal and Cohasset Mariner, recalled how she fell into the newspaper role in 1989 at David's encouragement.

"I had been working as a freelancer for then-Norwell Mariner editor Judy Enright since February 1988," she said. "David thought I had potential and hired me as a staff reporter. Two-and-a-half years later he promoted me to editor of Hingham and Cohasset."

Ford, a former teacher, said she was truly appreciative of the fact that David gave her a chance in what was a new career at the time.

"David's office door was always open, and he enjoyed hearing about what stories we were working on," she said. "After David left the Mariners, I ran into him from time to time and he always continued to give me encouragement."

What it all boiled down to was that David understood community journalism and what it took to enable a local paper to connect with its readers, Ford said.

"I have continued to incorporate his 'local' philosophy over the years," Ford added.

Former Norwell Mariner editor and Patriot Ledger reporter Judy Enright recalled how she met David when they worked together as reporters for the Patriot Ledger in the late 1960s.

"He was the ultimate community journalist," said Enright, who was editor of the Hanover Mariner and Norwell Mariner before leaving for a freelance career in 1997. "One of his big things was that the paper had to be, quote, relentlessly local, end quote, which I think the Mariners always have been."

David, she said, believed in countless reporters and editors along the way and gave them the chance to succeed.

"He was just a great boss, he was very understanding and he knew what he was talking about when it came to journalism," she said.

WATD owner Ed Perry made the point that David was known for much more than launching the Mariner newspapers.

"We had a lot of fun with the Southbridge radio station," he said, explaining that he worked with David as a technical consultant at the time. "He just liked to do stuff. He would try anything but he loved the print stuff. He loved the concept of the regional newspapers. I never could quite keep track of them all."

Perry cited the Duxbury Clipper as David's strongest paper and likened it to an "impenetrable" institution in the community. He said that when David took over the newspaper from his parents, who had passed away, he "shook the place up in terms of getting new technology and having new ideas."

"I got to give the Cutler family credit, they passed the torch well in Duxbury. We're going to miss him; he was a hell of a guy," Perry said.

Land-use consultant Robert Flavell recalled the early days when he worked with David as a reporter at the Patriot Ledger. He said that David had returned to the Patriot Ledger in 1970 after a tour of duty in Vietnam, but left two years later to start the Marshfield Mariner.

"It expanded from there," he said.

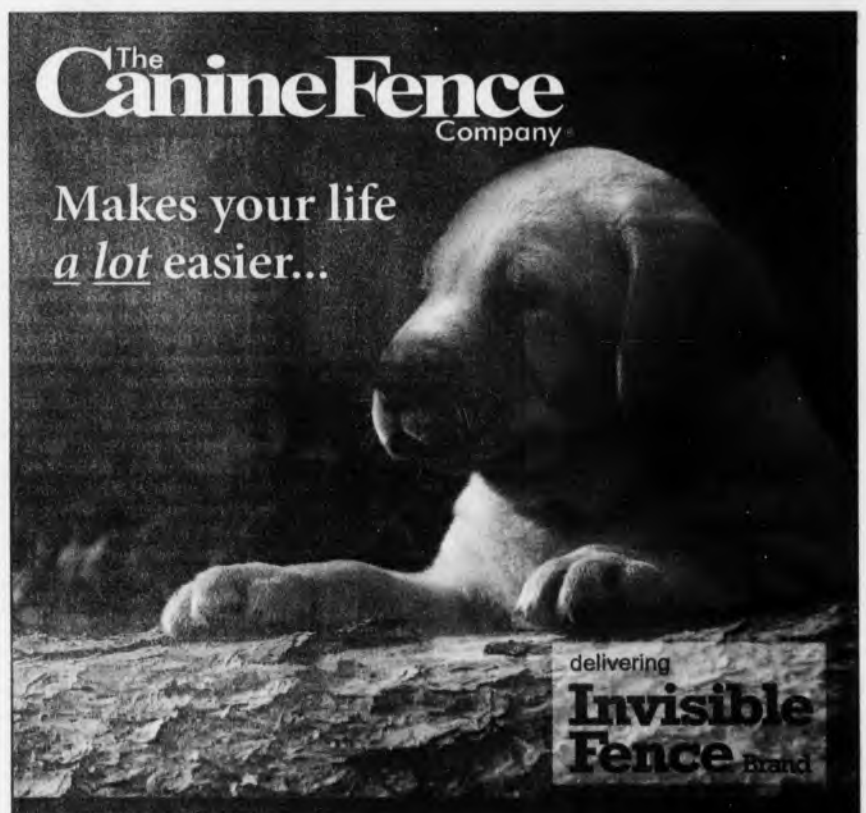
Flavell went on to law school and ended up working as David's lawyer prior to briefly taking on the role of executive editor for the newspaper.

"He bought several other papers and finally had to buy a press," he said.

David moved his operation to its current Enterprise Drive location before selling it to Capital Cities/ABC for $8 million in 1989. As a part of that contract, he stayed on for five years to run the company before moving on.

"He was a builder. There was absolutely no stopping David Cutler," Flavell said.

Flavell remembered David's old office at "the barn" and how his friend used to have a sign posted outside the office door that simply stated: "Thinking."



"If he had that sign up, everyone knew not to bother him. He would be thinking alongside a big mound of papers. He would come out and say, 'We're gong to buy a newspaper,'" Flavell said.

David built his community newspaper business despite the fact that he didn't have an "MBA or any of that fancy stuff they have now. He did it with a piece of paper and a pen," Flavell said.

Publishing newspapers isn't exactly a profitable endeavor, Flavell added, but David still managed to make it just that.

"David's the only one I ever knew that made money in the community newspaper business," he said. "He was the best newspaperman and the best newspaper businessman I ever met."

Lady Skippers oust Millis in semis

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

All season long, the Cohasset girls basketball team has taken things one game at a time.

All season, that focus has served them well, but deep down, there was a little extra motivation stemming from last year's buzzer-beating loss to the eventual state champion, Millis in the Div. 4 South Sectional Finals.

Girls' Basketball

While there was no guarantee of a rematch this season, Cohasset had that game as a motivator, and when Millis beat Hull to advance to the South Sectional Semifinal, the Lady Skippers were more than ready for the challenge.

They didn't disappoint.

Cohasset used a 14-1 run spanning the end of the third quarter and into the fourth to pull away for good in a 54-40 win, Monday night at Bridgewater-Raynham High School.

After Millis cut a 26-18 Cohasset deficit to 28-25 with 4:13 left in the third quarter, the Lady Skippers rallied.

Four Cohasset players scored during the outburst.

Tori Lehr scored four, Samantha Crough added five, Meredith Kelly had two, and Anna Seraikas had what may have been the killer with a three-pointer right before the buzzer to end the third quarter with a 40-26 lead.

Through it all, the game was very physical, with both teams looking to disrupt any offensive rhythm on the other side.

Swimmer shines at States

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

By all accounts, Cohasset's Hope Kissick could be among the elite in the world of competitive swimming.

The Cohasset freshman proved as much in late February when she swam her way to a third place finish in the 100 breaststroke at the MIAA Div. 2 Swim and Dive Championships at Harvard University.

Kissick has been swimming at a competitive level since she was five, but just recently, she made a decision that swimming wasn't going to be the defining factor of her life.

Swimming

Instead, Kissick decided to scale back the sport and focus on being a kid.

Or more accurately, the high school experience.

"Last year I went to a meet in Texas," Kissick said. "It was one of the biggest in my life. It was amazing. There were Olympians there. Michael Phelps was supposed to be there, but that was when he was in trouble. While I was there I had a realization that you could put your entire life into this."

Kissick said a chat with one of the swimmers changed her perspective.

"One girl told me she swims three times a day and works out," she said. "I trained really hard for Texas and didn't place that well there. I had been doing two-a-days, swimming before school and after school on Tuesdays and Thursdays and Fridays and

Grapplers compete at All-State

Murphy, Littauer both nab wins

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The All-State Wrestling Championships marked the end of the season for Cohasset wrestlers Jack Murphy and Andrew Littauer.

Both wrestlers qualified for last Friday's All-State Wrestling Championships with top-six finishes at the Div. 3 State Meet two weeks ago.

Jack Murphy (145) and Andrew Littauer (152) both won one and lost two at the All-State meet.

"Jack had a stomach bug," Cohasset coach Torin Sweeney said. "He was able to beat a Xaverian kid (Anthony Agnitti) in overtime, 5-3, but his endurance wasn't there. He never gets tired in a match. He did heck of job winning in OT."

In his next round, Murphy lost to Springfield's Manny Ocasio, who went on to finish fourth.

In Murphy's third bout on Friday, he lost a 2-1 decision to Brockton's Matt Bergeron, who also placed.

"The Brockton kid, he had beaten at Marshfield 7-0," Sweeney said. "He just had nothing left. It was his third match on Friday night. If he was healthy I have no doubt he would have won both of those close matches. In my opinion Jack's the fourth best wrestler in the state. He was disappointed because he got sick the morning of tournament. There's not much you can do."

Littauer lost his first match at 152 to Longmeadow's Dmitriy Donskoy, 14-2, then came back with a 1-0 win in his next match over Hudson's Jared Ware.

"That was a big win," Sweeney said. "It was the kid who beat him the week before. Then he lost to Freilich of St. Johns Shrewsbury. Both kids Andrew lost to placed. He was just little overmatched in that weight class."

Sweeney said his wrestlers, both seniors, went out in style.

"To finish your career at All-States is the pinnacle," he said. "By winning a match it put them in top-12 in the state."

Two other seniors finished their wrestling careers this season.

Cam Washak finished his season at the Div. 3 State Championships with an eighth-place finish at the meet and Matt Dooley also will graduate.

"Matt Dooley was senior captain, but he was fighting injuries all season long," Sweeney said. "He never got on the mat for extended time. We'll miss those guys for leadership and ability."

'It's nothing short of a miracle'

Bill Wilhelm could return to WATD airwaves within weeks

By Ryan Wood
RWOOD@CNC.COM

WATD Sports Director Bill Wilhelm is not only out of intensive care after being hospitalized last Tuesday nigh, he's out of the hospital and recovering at a rehabilitation center in Brockton. He phoned into The Sports Exchange Sunday night, the radio show he started 32 years ago at WATD, to say he was doing OK.

Wilhelm, who has broadcast more than 2,000 sporting events in more than three decades on the air, was in a coma in intensive care Tuesday night and Wednesday morning after his wife, Marcia, found him unresponsive last Tuesday evening at home.

According to Arthur Boyle Friday, Wilhelm's co-host of WATD's hugely popular weekly radio show, The Sports Exchange, Wilhelm was out of intensive care less than two days after he was admitted to Jordan Hospital in Plymouth. WATD reported this weekend that Wilhelm was moved out of Jordan Hospital and into a rehabilitation center, and WATD owner Ed Perry confirmed that Monday morning.

"The good news is, he seems to be pretty much recovered," Perry said. "He left a message telling us what games we should be covering. It's quite a difference from what it was like Tuesday night and Wednesday morning. We're just amazed and gratified. His brain had been without oxygen for a period of time. The EMTs came (to his house) and gave him CPR, and the consensus at Jordan when he arrived was that he was without oxygen for too long."

Wilhelm was in an induced coma for a day and a half, Boyle said.

"He's doing remarkably well," Boyle said last Friday. "It's nothing short of a miracle."

Hundreds of calls poured into the Marshfield-based radio station since late Tuesday night. On its Web site, WATD set up a page where visitors can post messages to Wilhelm and his family. The first comment was posted last Thursday at 12:52 p.m., and up through Monday afternoon, nearly 150 comments have been posted.

WATD Sports Director Bill Wilhelm, right, is recovering at a rehabilitation center in Brockton less than a week after coming out of a coma.

Boyle said he's received calls from all over the country from coaches, Wilhelm's friends, and past players that Wilhelm coached in his three decades of coaching Duxbury High School junior varsity soccer. The staff at Jordan Hospital has had to turn away visitors, Boyle said.

"The doctor said, 'Who is this guy? We're having to turn people away,'" Boyle said. "The number of people (showing support) is incredible. I've received about 200 phone calls since Tuesday. The station has had probably five times that amount."

Perry said he received an email from a gentleman Thailand inquiring about Wilhelm's status.

"I guess he was one of the athletes of the week years ago, and now he listens to the show on the internet," Perry said. It's really quite amazing. He (Wilhelm) has done so much for kids at all schools. He's just a legend in high school sports."

Wilhelm's Sunday night show on WATD, The Sports Exchange, is one of the most listened to shows on the station. Each week, Wilhelm's in-studio guests include anywhere from two to 10 high school and/or college athletes from the South Shore area. It's estimated that he's interviewed more than 6,000 individuals on his show.

"He's an extraordinary personality," Boyle said. "Thank God for small miracles because he's got a lot more he still has to do. He is South Shore sports on the radio."

Lady Skippers oust Millis is semis

"They're a great team," Lehr said. "We're close if not equal in defense. It might have intimidated us a little."

Lehr finished with 13 points, five in the fourth quarter.

Kelly led Cohasset scorers with 16 points and Crough knocked in 12.

Kelly said her team was not going to give this one away.

"It was kind of nerve wracking," she said. "It's come down to us and Millis the past three years. It's become a bit of a rivalry. They're one of our toughest competitors. We've scouted them. We know their personnel and plays. It came down to who could play the toughest."

Kelly admitted there was a little more going on.

"We were using last year as motivation," she said. "We never want to feel like that again."

Lehr felt the same way.

"This meant more than any game this season," Lehr said. "When we beat them two years ago it was just another win. Last year we might have taken them a little lighter. This time it felt like the state championship of the season. There was no way we were going to let it slip by."

Lehr said the coaching staff had the team ready.

"Coach (John LeVangie) told us we could do it," she said. "The coaches had us ready."

In the early going, it looked like it might be a very low scoring game.

Cohasset, slowing the pace at the beginning didn't score until more than three minutes had passed.

On the other hand, that tied the game 2-2.

"We knew we had to take our time and break down the defense," Lehr said of the methodical start. "The coaches beat that into us."

Millis actually went ahead 7-4 with 3:01 left in the first quarter before Cohasset regained the lead 8-7 on a steal and layup by Kelly.

Millis' Molly Breen, who led the Mohawks scoring, drove the middle for a 9-8 lead before a Kelly jumper gave Cohasset the lead for good.

Cohasset will face Nantucket on 2 p.m. Saturday at UMass. Boston.

The game is part of a day's worth of basketball at UMass.

Tickets are $10 for adults, $7 for students and Sr. Citizens.

Parking is in designated areas only and cost $6.

The school will have a SUPERFAN spectator bus from CHS leaving the back circle at 12:30 pm. Students and fans can sign up by emailing Athletic Director Ron Ford at rford@cohassetk12.org by Friday March 5.

Middle and high school students may also sign up at lunch on Thursday, March 4 and Friday March 5. A Cohasset Public School parental permission form which needs to be signed in order for a CMHS student to attend the game on the spectator bus.

Cohasset is now 23-0, while Nantucket checks in at 21-2 and a No. 3 seed.

Cohasset beat Nantucket in a tournament during the season.

Cohasset's Cambi named Pilgrim League All-Star

The Pilgrim League has announced its year-end awards, including its First, Second and Honorable Mention All-Stars and the League's Scholar Athlete All-Star Team. Five Hawks earned spots on the All-Star teams while five were named Scholar Athletes.

Making First-Team All-League at the 197 weight class was junior Nick Cambi.

The Cohasset native was ranked second in New England throughout the season, trailing two-time All-American and No. 2 Nationally, Ryan Malo of Williams.

Cambi posted an undefeated record in the Pilgrim League and finished the season 33-6 overall. In dual meets, Cambi scored 74 points for the Hawks while surrendering just six.

Three Hawks were named to the All-Star Second Team, including two seniors and one freshman. Senior Kyle Rodgers (Danbury, Conn.) earned the third Pilgrim League year-end honor of his career, having

Fresh Start with Lucie Rice

Part 6 • Nutrition, Health, Exercise, and Weight Management

I eat lots of junk food and I don't exercise, but I am not overweight. Can I eat the same, exercise a little and still be pretty healthy? By the way, I just turned 30.

That old adage "you are what you eat" is true. By adding exercise you will improve your health and fitness and reduce some of the negative consequences of eating poorly. But think of it this way. Your cardiovascular system is made up of a series of arteries and veins that circulate your blood (your blood is the delivery source for countless things including food and oxygen and the removal system for toxins and waste products). Your heart does the heavy lifting of moving this stuff all around. If you eat junk, you clog and inflame the delivery/removal/pumping system and provide inadequate nutrition to keep it all fueled and maintained.

Do you mean, ultimately if I am going to be healthy, I have to eat more healthfully?

Yes. No matter how much we exercise (much to my personal chagrin) optimal health can only be achieved with good nutrition. Also, for most adults, eating poorly will inevitably lead to weight gain. Few people can stay at a healthy weight unless they are making thoughtful food choices.

What is more important to change first – to reduce the amount I eat or to improve the quality?

It depends what your goals are and what you wish to address first. Whenever I am working with someone who wants to lose weight, I try to help them reduce the overall quantity of food first which will lead to weight loss. For those with longstanding significant weight problems (30-200lbs.) - such as I experience personally - reducing calories can be extremely difficult. For us, the shift from unhealthy to healthy eating may take years and require many stages of change. I have been focused on this goal for 9 years and am still working on it. That is also the point - in order to lose weight and then maintain that weight loss, regardless of amount - you must work on it daily. Optimal is an appropriate amount of calories, a healthy variety of foods, and water.

Well, if I eat really well, is exercise really necessary?

A healthy diet is critical, but alone it is not enough. I sometimes see people in their 50s and 60s who have not exercised much in their life but because they have eaten carefully, they are close to ideal weight. They often come to see me because they feel weak, inflexible, fatigued doing simple things, some have osteoporosis or high blood pressure. These individuals with the addition of exercise can make quick progress. The healthiest diet will not make up for inadequate exercise. Your heart, muscles, bones and brain left unchallenged and underutilized will weaken and wither.

So how can I really figure out what I am supposed to be eating?

Go to www.myprymid.gov which gives specific info on what each person should be eating for health and/or weight loss/maintenance. You put in your weight, sex, height and age and it gives you an estimate of the number of calories your body needs and a breakdown of a healthy food mix. For more individualized information consider contacting a nutritionist. In some cases your doctor may refer you to a nutritionist.

If I need to lose a lot of weight (80 lbs.), how should I go about this? Exercise, nutrition or both?

As you know, I don't buy the "perfect view" of life. I believe in achieving the doable today and building on it. Eventually to be healthy you have to do both, but at first the goal can be to take little steps in each area daily. Almost all of us who have lost a lot of weight and kept it off (according to statistics compiled by the National Weight Control Registry) change our diet (98%) and exercise on average 1 hour per day (90%).

I am well over 300lbs. I have health problems and can hardly walk / mile. It seems ludicrous to think I can change my habits enough to make any really difference. I have tried to dozens of times without success. I have heard of gastric by-pass? Should I consider it?

Part of the goal of this series is to help everyone, regardless of circumstances to take a step toward greater health mainly through diet and exercise. For some people, diet and exercise alone has not worked, and the best way to take a next step for some may be to seriously evaluate all options including various types of gastric by-pass/banding, etc. This is a complex medical decision with life long implications that for some may be a lifesaving intervention.

It all feels so hopeless sometimes, why bother?

I would ask you, what is your alternative? Sometimes I become frustrated because I am still overweight. Then I wonder what the alternative might have been if I hadn't been making all this effort for the last decade. I laugh to myself as I acknowledge reality – without all this effort I would obviously be where I was – morbidly obese and very unhappy about it.

Okay, I get it. I know I need to improve my eating habits, where do I begin again?

Go to www.mypyramid,gov and print out its estimate of what you should eat daily. Take one thing and make a change towards that one healthier choice today. Do that every day from here on in. It may be small. Whatever you do, DON'T STOP.

Saturdays. Sundays and Wednesdays were the only days I had time off. At one point my grades were flipping out. I'd practice, get to school at 7:20 and then come back for practice after school. I was only in eighth grade. That was too much for eighth grade."

Kissick's mom, Elizabeth was supportive of her daughter's decision.

"In Texas she was on track for some amazing times," Elizabeth said. "But she decided that she wanted to be a kid. She wanted to enjoy school, go to dances, play other sports, be a normal high school kid without all the other pressure. We support her decision. She evaluated everything in Texas and learned from it. She's happy and having fun now. That's what's most important. She really is a great kid."

Giving up the ultra-competitive side of the sport doesn't mean Kissick is done.

She still swims recreationally and also swims for the Cohasset High School team, which had one of its best seasons ever this season, finishing 14th as a team at the State Championships.

"I like swimming for the high school," she said. "I've made a lot of friends. The season was awesome. We're all supportive of each other. The day before Sectionals we all went to Bertuccis together. The seniors are so nice to the freshmen. We had a really good time."

Along with her individual events, Kissick swam the 200 freestyle relay with Sarah Libby, Mimi Mahoney and Anniko Haber.

"Anniko did really well at States," Kissick said. "And my relay team did really well. Mimi Mahoney is a captain. She was great. Sarah is a captain too. She's a lot of fun. She's fun and loud and a little crazy."

It didn't take Kissick long to get back in a groove in the pool.

"Coming back was awesome," she said. "I went to one meet early and got beat. That just inspired me. I trained real hard and did a lot of work. I'm real competitive. I love racing. I love a race when you're so close to someone that they could touch before you do and you have that last big kick to beat them. I love it."

With the winter swim season over, Kissick will focus on lacrosse, which she has been playing since fifth grade.

Older brother Jake plays for the boys team.

"I wanted to see where I could go with that," Kissick said of the lacrosse. "I joined Team Revolution. I really like it. I like playing."

Kissick is hoping to make either varsity or JV this year. To help get ready, she plays catch with younger brother Cole, who's 13.

While she has the big-time experience swimming, States was a special time for Kissick.

"It was really exciting," she said. "I was thinking I'm a freshman. I'll try my hardest and see where it gets me. I was pumped. I worked really hard during the season. My goal was to drop two or three seconds from the sectionals. I really didn't think I'd place. There were so many juniors and seniors there and I'm just a little freshman. I ended up dropping six seconds in my 200 IM. I placed seventh in that. I dropped two seconds in the 100 breaststroke and finished third in the state. My goal was to get under 1:10. I did it. It was awesome."

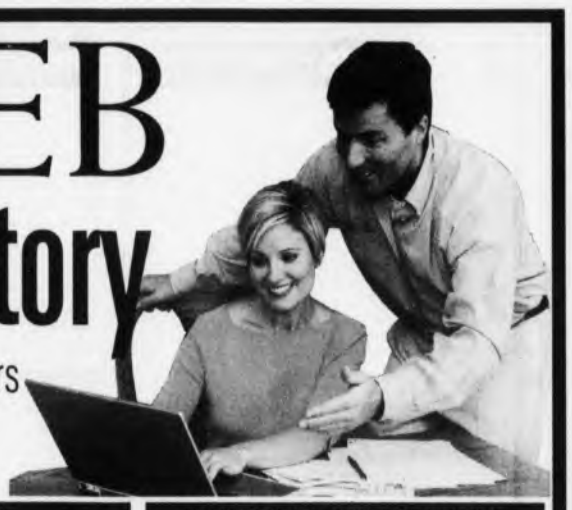
earned a spot on the first team in both his sophomore and junior years.

Jeremiah Mahoney (Madison, Conn.) earned his second Pilgrim League Second Team All-Star Award, notching 15 wins on the season and a team third-best 42 escapes.

Wrestling at 133, he ranked fourth on the team with 13 reversals and tied for fifth with seven near-fall 2-points.



Freshman Philip Ernst (Succasunna, N.J.) also earned second team honors after his strong college debut. In the 184 weight class Ernst ranked third on the team in wins, recording a season record of 27-13. He led the team with 23 reversals, while allowing eight, and totaled the team's third-most dual points with 50.

Cambi also earned a spot on the prestigious Scholar All-Star Team by posting a .500 record and a 3.2 GPA overall or over the last two semesters.

Bonjour la France! Exchange program in the works

The CHS French department is kicking off plans for next year's French Exchange and held an informational meeting for interested high school students and their parents last night (Thursday, March 4) in the high school cafeteria. This continues the high school's long-standing tradition of participating every other year in an exchange with a French high school.

Interested students who missed the meeting are encourage to get in touch with Monsieur Kotter or Madame Marat as soon as possible. (jkotter@cohassetk12.org or bmarat@cohassetk12.org).

In 2010-2011, French teachers from Cohasset and Scituate will organize their third exchange with the Lycée Christophe Colomb in Sucy-en-Brie, about 10 miles outside of Paris. Any CHS student who will have completed or be enrolled in French 4 by Spring 2011 is eligible to participate including current freshmen who plan to take both French 3 and 4 next year. Applications will be available at the informational meeting and from CHS French teachers Madame Marat and Monsieur Kotter.

The exchange entails hosting a French student in Cohasset in October and being hosted by that same student in France in February. For further details e-mail Madame Marat at: bmarat@cohassetk12.org .

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

Welllllllllcome back to the ever so extravagant "Life at CHS." I missed you all 2 weeks ago because of February vacation, which was awesome by the way. And I missed you all last week because I made a very large mistake…I forgot about the "Life at CHS"…I know, I know. At this point you are asking yourself, "How do you forget your own article." Well I would go into an elaborate timeline of events that made me forget the "Life at CHS" article, but I forgot the timeline too. Please forgive me.

Instead of starting on Monday, as I usually do, I am gonna buck the trend and start on Saturday (shocking new twist). "Saturday is a part of the weekend which has nothing to do with Cohasset High School." WRONG! Saturday was a very important day for Cohasset High School because the one-act play, Check, Please, advanced to the semi finals of the Massachusetts High School Drama Guild (MHSDG). We, the actors (and actresses if you wanna be all technical about it) were very shocked when we heard the news. It is quite the victory though as we have been putting this play together for the past 2 months. Congrats to the cast and crew!

So when you start on Saturday and use the leapfrog bonus, you land on Monday. With that being said, on Monday we were surprised with a discussion session with our teachers. This week's topic was about time management and controlling the workload and flow of work that one receives. I still say procrastination is the best method. I have to present a PowerPoint to my English class in 8 hours and I have yet to start it. I will let you all in on how I did next week to prove my methods as successful.

Tuesday…well nothing happened on Tuesday that I remember. Sure, my memory is questionable (just read the first paragraph), but I really don't think anything remotely important happened on Tuesday…o wait…I just remembered something…on Tuesday, I found out that the Girls Basketball team beat Millis to advance in the playoffs, bringing them one step closer to playing in the Garden…again. Granted the game happened on Monday, let's just say we all celebrated the win on Tuesday so it fits in Tuesday's news.

At lunch on Wednesday, another Student Council meeting was held. First, we discussed that Student Council sounds a bit nerdy and takes to long to say. Thus, it will now be referred to as STUCO (pronounced stoo-koh). Ok, maybe not everyone agreed on the new way of saying it and maybe not everyone will say it, but let me assure you this, all of the cool kids will be saying it. That's all that matters, right? Oh, and we talked about a spring sport pep rally and another blood sucking contest (a.k.a blood drive).

March 4, 2010. It was a Thursday. While also being the 4th day of just regular March, it was also the 4th day of Moustache March. For those of you unfamiliar with the ritual, men each put $2 into a pot and sign a contract saying that they will NOT shave their moustache, and only their moustache. In simpler terms, it means you only have a moustache with no other facial hair. Whoever keeps their moustache the longest wins the prize. The 4th day is significant because that is when people become really self-conscious about walking around school with just a moustache.

Friday was important for one reason only. Friday is exactly one week away from the Mr. Skipper Pageant. The glorified male beauty pageant takes place on March 12. It is a "can't miss event." Get your kids to buy you tickets A.S.A.P because they sell very quick. It is important that you buy the tickets because Mr. Skipper is one of the major fundraisers for the Senior Class. Please support us!

Speaking of support, next Tuesday, the award winning one act play, Check, Please, will be performed for the town in the CHS auditorium. I challenge you, my loyal peeps, to fill the auditorium. C'mon, do it! You know what, on second thought; you don't even have a chance of filling the place up. Don't even bother coming (reverse psychology…please come).

Sorry about my forgetfulness. It won't happen again…I think…

Sean MacCarthy is rockin' a blowout for the next 2 weeks. Jealous?

Eat Your Art event at the High School

The public is invited to participate in Cohasset High School's ninth annual Edible Art Exhibit at 6 p.m., on Wednesday, March 10. All artwork must be edible - safe for human consumption. The competition is open to people ages 4 through 104, and the artwork can be created by an individual, or it may be a collaborative piece. Participants are responsible for setting up their piece for viewing.

There will be two categories for judging: Delicious and Nutritious, according to ingredients. For example, a piece could be made of asparagus and noodles, or made of chocolate, marshmallows and licorice. Many prizes from local restaurants and merchants will be offered. After all prizes are awarded, all work becomes the property of the party where everyone gets to "Eat Your Art."

Registration fee for participants is free. Admission fee is $3, or $2 with a canned good to benefit the Cohasset Food Pantry.

For more information or to register, call Nina Berkowitz at Cohasset High School at 781-383-6100 or email nberkowitz@Cohassetk12.org.

Spelling Bee fundraiser is March 14

The Cohasset Education Foundation is very excited to be offering its third Annual Children's Spelling Bee fundraiser on Sunday, March 14. (B-E-E-WARE it's daylight savings!) Children in Grades 2 to 5 are welcome to participate in this fun, community event. Each team is made up of 3 children in the same grade.

Team members could be from class, a sports team, or a Cohasset resident in another school.

Registration, including a tee shirt, is $25 per speller. Forms can be downloaded at:

www.cohasseteducation.org.

Enrichment program offered to students

COMPASS is a before and after school enrichment program. The goal of COMPASS is to help children develop a positive sense of self worth, by providing a safe and secure atmosphere rich with opportunities for social, emotional, physical, and cognitive growth. We are committed to working with the school system and parents. Our goal is to help steer students toward excellence in enrichment, academics, and citizenship.

The program is open to any Cohasset Public Schools children in grades kindergarten through six and registration will be accepted throughout the year on a first come basis.

Call Mr. Erick Amero at 781-383-8223 for more information.

March Madness at CHMS

The Girls and Boys basketball All Star "Dream Team" challenges the Faculty "Pipe Dream Team" to a Basketball game on: Friday March 19th at 6:30pm at the Cohasset HS Gym.

Admission $5, $20 cap for families. Face Painting and Free Throw contest with prizes!!

All proceeds to benefit the Music Department trip to Philadelphia.

Pilgrim Arena scholarship applications

Applications for ten $5,000 scholarships are available at the Pilgrim Skating Arena, 75 Recreation Park Drive, Hingham.

Interested seniors must pick up and sign for the application in person at the arena pro shop. Completed applications must be returned by Thursday, April 15.

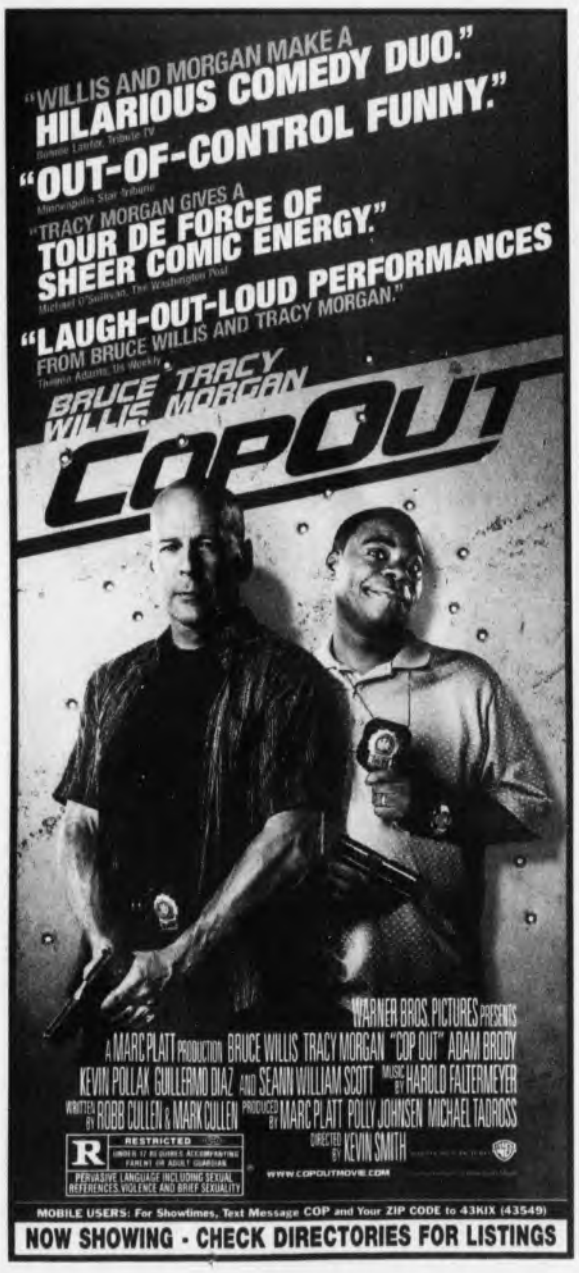
Applicants will be judged by members of the Scholarship Committee of the Board of Directors at Pilgrim Arena.

For more information, please call Hoby Taylor, 781-749-6660.

Rockland Trust to award scholarships

Rockland Trust will award five $2,500 scholarships to high school seniors graduating in 2010. Students who are residents of Plymouth County, Barnstable County, Bristol County or the towns of Cohasset, Stoughton, Randolph, Braintree, Weymouth, Quincy, Wellesley or Watertown are eligible to apply. Applicants must be in the top 50 percent of their graduating class and will be scored based on academic achievement, community involvement and an essay question.

Applications will be accepted until March 19. Applications and complete guidelines are available in all branch locations. For more information, call 800-222-2299 or visit www.RocklandTrust.com.



It's Hats On or the CMHS Students

Middle school students at CMHS are celebrating Foreign Language Week by raising money for the Cohasset Education Foundation (CEF) to fund a new foreign language lab.

On Wednesday, students paid one dollar to wear their favorite hat, beret, or sombrero to school.

So, Hat's Off to our students who chose to highlight the value of learning world languages and for making a difference in our schools.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

SLEEPAWAY/OVERNIGHT/RESIDENT CAMP READINESS: HOW TO KNOW WHEN A CHILD'S READY TO GO!

By Bette Bussel – Executive Director American Camp Association, New England

They show interest. Not surprisingly, this will differ from child to child, as they each have their own unique way of showing interest. Some may be more subtle about wanting to go to overnight camp. They might ask simple, general or hypothetical questions about it. Other children may ask directly if they can start going to an overnight camp or may bring home brochures to show their parents. It is not uncommon for children to be ready to attend overnight camp before their parents or guardians feel ready to let them go.

Successful sleepovers with friends and/or family. Progressing from one night away with friends or relatives to two or more nights is a good confidence builder for future campers. This way, they know they can be successful sleeping away from home before they leave for camp.

Enjoying group events like sleepovers and school trips is a positive sign of overnight camp readiness. Is it increasingly difficult to get your child to stay home? Does your child find it appealing to spend overnights in groups of peers—either at sleepovers or on school or club trips? It's often great fun to bunk with a group of children and spend "fun" time together. This is a major reason why summer camps exist!

Shows signs of having outgrown past summer pursuits. Children will sometimes let you know that they don't want to do what they did last summer. If they act uninterested with the idea of returning, it may be time for something new. Resident camp presents a whole new world for a child to discover. There is no "magical" age when resident camp is the right fit for a child's needs and interests. Children as young as six can be ready for overnight camp, especially if the child has seen how important summer camp experiences were with other family members. Other children wait until age 13 to attend camp for the first time. But, typically most first time campers are between the ages of 7 and 12. Attending residential summer camp is one of the most independence-boosting and empowering experiences a child can have. Parents are wise to pay attention to signs of camp readiness and act accordingly!

Celebrating Karen Petrillo's life

Event proceeds to help local cancer organization

This event is free. Donations are graciously accepted at the door. Everyone is invited!

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

For nearly a decade Adrian Morris and his friends, colleagues and salon guests have been gathering together to celebrate their good friend, Karen Petrillo. This year's celebration is on Saturday, March 13th from 7 to 11 p.m. at the River Club in Scituate. As was the case last year, there no tickets required and no fee to attend. All who walk through the door are encouraged to give what they can, and to participate in the live and silent auctions that take place throughout the night.

Karen Petrillo is not a familiar name to most people, but to those who knew her she was a hero of monumental proportions. She passed away six years ago from breast cancer. It was a struggle, which she endured quietly, with both dignity and courage. She did not consider herself a victim of cancer, she was just someone who happened to have it.

"She was an extraordinary human being who never felt sorry for herself," recalls close friend Adrian Morris, owner of LemonLime Aveda Lifestyle Salon in Cohasset. "She was so proud and never wanted to burden anyone with her diagnosis. She had two weeks to live when she told me about the cancer, and she wanted to live them as if she would live forever."

Petrillo will live forever in the hearts of all who knew her. This event, held in her memory, grows bigger in dollars and in spirit every year. This year Morris is proud to announce that comedian Patty Ross will be the highlight of the evening. Patty is one of the most sought after personalities on the national comedy scene. She has a unique persona and bigger than life stage presence and has attracted audiences, corporations and entertainment industry people across the country. She has a charming, sarcastic wit and no–holds-barred prospective on life's every day problems. She has opened for Andrew Dice Clay and received standing ovations, and recently shot a TV pilot for Bev for 20th Century Fox. A quote from Ross' website says, "Humor is among the greatest virtues in life. It makes us laugh at ourselves. Patty Ross is one of the finest practitioners of this virtue."

Proceeds from the event benefit Learn Live Love Cancer Outreach Organization, a charity founded by Rosie Lonborg (wife of former Red Sox player, Jim Lonborg) and two other local women, Pam Ahl and Amy Webber. Their mission is to provide confidential financial assistance to women and families in New England communities who are affected by a diagnosis of cancer. Learn Live Love doesn't have any "red tape." It's a grass roots organization that provides help, almost immediately, to those in need. It's an organization that personifies who Karen Petrillo was as a person. According to Morris, Karen would be proud that funds raised in her name go to his local group. Karen died just five days after the first event; she was 47 years old.

Morris is continually amazed at the outpouring of generosity and support for something so local, especially in this economic downturn. Last year, when fiscal times seemed even more uncertain than now, the proceeds of the event continued to grow. In addition, the generosity of local sponsors continues to be overwhelming — from the smallest of local businesses to the biggest — contributions are too numerous to mention and all make this event possible.

The goal of this event is to have fun. Please join the eighth Annual Karen Petrillo Breast Cancer Celebration to benefit Learn Live Love Cancer Outreach Organization celebration on Saturday, March 13th at 7 p.m. at the River Club on Border Street in Scituate. Call LemonLime Aveda Lifestyle Salon for more info. at 781-383-6663.

Haiti relief subject of library talk

Cohasset Reads Together

Join Ali Lutz, Haiti Coordinator for Partners in Health, as she presents a slide show and lecture of the work being done in Haiti on Sunday, March 7 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. at the library.

When the Project Committee of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library chose Tracy Kidder's Mountains Beyond Mountains last summer as the selection for the 2010 Cohasset Reads Together town-wide reading program it was because they believed Kidder's incredible biography of Dr. Paul Farmer, and his work in Haiti were worthy of a community conversation and could possibly raise awareness of an old crisis. Now, in a tragic irony, the library's scheduled programs that focus on Haiti, and Dr. Farmer's organization, Partners in Health, have taken on a profoundly new significance, as our town, and indeed the world, has a renewed focus on what we can all do to help this small country.

Join Ali Lutz, Haiti Coordinator for Partners in Health, as she presents a slide show and lecture of the work being done in Haiti on Sunday, March 7 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. in the Meeting Room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

Dr. Paul Farmer founded Partners In Health in 1987 by along with Thomas J. White, and Todd McCormack, joined soon thereafter by Ophelia Dahl and Jim Yong Kim. The history of Partners In Health is recounted in Kidder's Pulitzer Prize winning book.

"Partners in Health as an organization that provides comprehensive healthcare to some of the poorest communities in the world. We don't just treat disease we tackle the root causes of disease, which is poverty," says Lutz in a recent interview. "Even when Haiti is no longer on the front page there will still be millions of people who need to rebuild their lives."

It was Mountains Beyond Mountains that inspired Lutz to work at Partners in Health. Her work in Haiti, and that of her colleagues is truly an inspiration. Lutz spent two weeks there coordinating medical care after the earthquake. Her talk will include her first hand account on the earthquake's short and long term affects on the people of Haiti.

Ali Lutz is a speaker who is not to be missed. The talk is part of Cohasset Reads Together, sponsored by the Friends of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Visit www.cohassetlibrary.org for more information. The event is free and open to the public. Light refreshments will be served.

Holly Hill Farm offers basket-making workshop

Holly Hill Farm in Cohasset will hold its first Basket Making Workshop from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday March 6.

Join basket-making artist Sharon Owens for this unique daylong workshop at the farm. Learn the art of creating your own one-of-a-kind basket using natural materials.

Sharon is a resident artist at the Narrows Center for the Arts in Fall River. She brings the craft of basket weaving to a fine art. For almost 20 years she has shared her love of basket making with others. Sharon creates traditional, antler, fine needle, gourd coiling, and Nantucket baskets. Sharon has taken classes throughout the country, Ireland and Canada and passes on all the techniques and tips she has learned. Participants will take home their own basket. To see samples of Sharon's work, click on http://www.narrowscenter-artists.com.

Bring a bag lunch and plan for an exciting and creative day. Cost is $75, including all materials. Space is limited to 10 participants therefore reserve your spot by calling 781-383-6565.

La Leche League to meet

Many breastfeeding problems – low milk supply, soreness, baby fussiness – can be avoided if a mother is well informed about breastfeeding. La Leche League provides information, encouragement and support.

Mothers and mothers-to-be who would like to learn more about the normal course of breastfeeding are invited to attend this month's meeting at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, March 9, at Paul Pratt Library in Cohasset, corner of Ripley Road and Sohier Street, off Route 3A. Babies are welcome.

Other LLL services include a lending library and 24-hour telephone help. For more information, call Christie at 781-740-7808, Kathleen at 781-749-2404, Heather at 781-544-9230 or Laura at 781-544-4077.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF MARCH 15, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Disappointed about something that didn't go your way? Cheer up. Look at the reasons it happened, and you could find a valuable lesson about what to do (or not do!) the next time.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good time to do some reassessing of plans and goals — even how you considered redoing your bathroom. The point is to be open to change if change can improve things.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Take some time to learn who is the right person (or persons) to approach and discuss your ideas with for your new project. Also, reserve time to prepare for an upcoming family event.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Dealing with a demanding situation, as you recently did, could drain much of your own emotional reserves. Take time to relax and indulge yourself in some well-earned pampering.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The regal Lion might feel that she or he is above emotional displays. But showing your feelings can be liberating for you, and reassuring for someone who has been waiting for you to do so.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) An emotionally needy person might make more demands than you can cope with. Best to ask for some breathing space NOW, before resentment sets in and makes communication difficult.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) An unexpected spate of mixed signals could cause serious schedule setbacks. Best to focus on straightening everything out as soon as possible and get everyone back on track.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Be aware that someone in the workplace could try to use a disagreement with a colleague against you. If so, be prepared to offer your side of the story with the facts to back you up.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) An unexpected challenge to a previous decision can be unsettling. But your reservoir of self-confidence — plus your loyal supporters — should help carry the day for you. Good luck.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) While the idea of making some sort of major move in the near future continues to interest you, don't overlook a new possibility that could be emerging closer to home.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Be careful not to base an upcoming decision on gossip or anything you might hear if it can't meet provable standards. That's true regardless of whom the source might be.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might still need to do some solid reassessing early in the week before you can close that sensitive situation. A new job-related opportunity could present itself later in the week.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are extraordinarily sensitive to people's feelings, and you're always ready to offer comfort if necessary.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

OBITUARIES

Obituaries appearing in this section are paid for and written by families, often through the services of a funeral director.

Benedict J. Barrett

COHASSET–BenedictJames Barrett passed away February 26, 2010, at the age of 91, surrounded by his loving family at his home in Cohasset.

He is survived by his wife of 60 years, Mary Frances, and his six children: Stephen Barrett; Robert Barrett; Joanne Barrett; Nancy Barrett; Paul Barrett; and Jeffrey Barrett; and his 11 grandchildren.

Ben was born in 1918 in Berlin, NH. After High School, he worked in the White Mountains Civilian Conservation Corps. He enlisted in the US Army in 1939 and served as Staff Sergeant at Coastal Artillery base in Portsmouth, NH. During WWII, he volunteered as a paratrooper and joined the renowned 517th Parachute Regimental Combat Team, one of the country's first elite combat units. Ben fought in Italy, France and during the Battle of the Bulge in Belgium, where he earned a Bronze Star and Purple Heart.

He attended Boston University. He married Mary Frances Lawlor, and raised six children in Saugus, MA. For 30 years, Ben managed his own laundry business in Cambridge, MA. After he retired, he continued to work in Saugus, and was a popular figure around Saugus Center, until he moved to Cohasset in 2004.

Benedict J. Barrett

More recently, Ben became an active member of the 517th PRCT veterans group. In 1999, he started a web site (517prct.org) to collect and maintain the history of the 517th, and also sent out a daily "Mail Call" newsletter for the 517th veterans and friends around the world. In 2009, Ben traveled back to Europe with the 517th PRCT to visit battle sites and to celebrate the WWII liberation of France and Belgium. Ben and the other veterans were awarded the distinction of Chevalier (Knight) in the National Order of the Legion of Honour by the French Government.

A celebration of Ben's life will occur in Arlington, Virginia, and interment at Arlington National Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in Ben's memory to the 517th PRCT Association, c/o Leo Dean at 14 Stonehenge Lane, Albany 12203.

John F. Roy

COHASSET – John Francis Roy, retired attorney, age 79, of Cohasset, MA, died in a tragic tour bus accident in Florida on Feb. 22, 2010. He is survived by his wife, Dolores (Searles), who was by his side at the time, doing what they loved - traveling, learning and meeting new friends.

John was the youngest of four children of Dr. Charles A. Roy and Mary Catherine (Denny).

He was a graduate of Mamaronack High School, NY and Middlebury College, VT in 1952, where he played football. After college, John served in the Korean War as a Sergeant in the Army. Upon returning home, he obtained his law degree from Georgetown University, Class of 1956.

In 1959, he married Dolores and began working for Curtis-Wright in New Jersey. They moved to Cohasset in 1966 when John went to work for General Dynamics at the Quincy Shipyard as contracts manager. In 1972, he obtained an MBA from Babson College. He left General Dynamics after 7 years to pursue business interests, including helping to form New England Group Trust, a Hingham-based insurance company, before focusing on his private legal practice.

John loved Cohasset and the South Shore area. He was an avid sailor and kept a boat in Cohasset Harbor for many years. He loved being near the sea, often swimming at Sandy Beach, and in retirement, he and Dolores would often start their day by walking along Nantasket Beach. He was also an avid sportsman and encouraged and coached his children and grandchildren in a variety of sports and was an enthusiastic supporter of Cohasset High School sports teams. He enjoyed playing tennis and later developed a passion for golf and loved to play with his children or friend.

John was an active member of St. Anthony's Parish in Cohasset, where he served on the original parish council and later, as eucharistic minister. In town, he served on the Zoning Board of Appeals, the Board of the Cohasset Community Center and as a community advisor to the police department. He also helped to organize fundraising and development for the town swim center. In retirement, he actively volunteered for Cohasset Elder Affairs, Meals on Wheels and FISH, a local outreach program.

John enjoyed traveling with Dolores. Each year, he looked forward to planning new adventures and traveling to meet friends and family. Over the years, they enjoyed several Elderhostel trips, visited many national parks, cruised in Alaska and visited Paris and Normandy for their 50th anniversary. Most of all, John loved his family and he especially enjoyed holidays and celebrations that brought his family all together.

He will be missed by all his friends and family, especially his wife, Dolores; his children, John and his wife, Susan and their son, Jared, of London, UK; Bill and his wife, Stephanie, and their daughters Elizabeth and Hannah, of Scituate, MA; Madeline of Beverly, MA; James and his wife, Pamela and their children, Brendan and Payton, of Pembroke, MA. He was the uncle of Nancy French of Boca Raton, FL; Linda Halacki of Redlands, CA; Richard Haas of Tampa, FL and Denny Roy of Honolulu, HI. Mr. Roy is predeceased by his brothers, Charles and Robert, and his sister, Madlyn.

A Funeral Mass will be celebrated on Monday, March 8, 2010 at 11 a.m. in St. Anthony Church, Cohasset, MA. Visiting hours Sunday, March 7, 3-8p.m. at McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St (across from St Anthony's Church), Cohasset, MA. Interment private for family.

David S. Cutler

DUXBURY – David S. Cutler, 66, founder of Mariner Newspapers and publisher of the Duxbury Clipper, died Sunday, Feb. 28 after a seven-month fight against cancer. He died surrounded by his family in his favorite spot — a fire-placed living room framed by hand-hewn 18th century Duxbury timbers.

Mr. Cutler was the son of John Henry Cutler and Roberta Sumner Cutler. He and his twin sister were born on the Fourth of July, 1943 in Olathe, Kansas, where his father was stationed with the Navy. In 1945, the Cutlers settled in Duxbury year-round. An important turning point in David Cutler's life came at not yet seven, when over a bridge game at a neighbor's home, his parents let themselves be publicly goaded into promising to start a respectable newspaper in Duxbury. Nineteen days later, on May 11, 1950, the inaugural edition of the Duxbury Clipper appeared. In the first, sometimes tenuous, years of the Clipper's existence, the observant young Mr. Cutler was absorbing every aspect of the newspaper business in the most intimate and practical way.

In September, 1957, Mr. Cutler entered the class of 1961 at Holderness, a boarding school in Plymouth, New Hampshire, where he was captain of both football and baseball. He went on to Colby College in Maine, where he was again captain of the football team. Upon graduating in 1965, Mr. Cutler went to work at The Patriot Ledger as a beat reporter covering the towns of Abington, Whitman and Rockland. Fifteen months later, Mr. Cutler requested and was granted a three-year leave-of-absence to join the U.S. Marines.

In January, 1967, he went on active duty and entered Officer Candidate School in Quantico, Virginia. After six more months of advanced training, Lieutenant Cutler was sent to Vietnam, where he became commander of a company stationed near the Demilitarized Zone. On a night in March, 1968, Mr. Cutler was pinned down while trying to rescue one of his men. A North Vietnamese sniper bullet went through both legs. There was every chance that he would bleed to death before daylight. But one of the men pinned down with him applied a tourniquet. He survived the night and was rescued by helicopter after sunrise. For his valor he received a Purple Heart and was later promoted to captain.

Mr. Cutler's beat reporting had impressed his editors, and when he returned to The Patriot Ledger in 1970 he was appointed the paper's State House reporter. For the next two years he plied the halls, covering the administration of Gov. Francis Sargent.

In 1972, Mr. Cutler left the security of his position at The Ledger to found The Marshfield Mariner with $1,000 in vacation pay and a small investment by his partner, Michael Stearns. The Mariner was inaugurated on April 13, 1972 and immediately became Marshfield's paper of record, richly chronicling the town's births, deaths and much of what happened in between.

Two years later The Norwell Mariner appeared, and over the next dozen years papers sprouted in Scituate, Cohasset and Pembroke, eventually spreading as far north to Braintree and south to Plymouth. While the growing company eventually prospered, there were days when David's primary meals were snacks he pilfered from his own vending machines. Along the way he learned a few lessons about the business side of the newspaper business —among them to avoid carrying company checkbooks around in a green garbage bag as they were once tossed in the dumpster by a diligent cleaning woman.

When Mr. Cutler sold the company to Capital Cities/ABC for $8 million in 1989, Mariner Newspapers boasted 17 community weeklies and 95 full-time employees. The sale came with a five-year contract to continue to run Mariner Newspapers. He would now learn something about the corporate world -- which in the end reminded him too much of military service in a stateside post to be to his long-term taste. As was said in Roman times, better to command a village than be number two in Rome.

A fruit of the Capital Cities/ABC period was the respect Mr. Cutler had for his immediate corporate boss, John Coots, who, by and by, had had enough of "Rome," and the two decided to become partners and purchased a group of six struggling newspapers in Worcester County. With his partner focused on the business side, Mr. Cutler found himself in the familiar role of community publisher, but this time the challenge was one of turn-around artist. And turn-around they did. After steering the flagship daily, The Southbridge Evening News, back to health, Mr. Cutler and Mr. Coots grew the company through expansion while maintaining the "relentlessly local" credo Mr. Cutler learned in the early days folding Clippers in his parent's living room. Today, Stonebridge Press and its sister company, Salmon Press, now publish one daily and 23 weekly newspapers across three states with nearly 100 full-time employees.

Mr. Cutler had no formal training in business, accounting or "human resources" and often boasted that he'd never taken a journalism course, yet he grew into all these roles, never forgetting the business was, and is, always about people. In the end he was beloved by those people who had worked so closely with him over five decades and three states.

Mr. Cutler was a voracious reader, especially of history, biography and politics. He was a brilliant conversationalist, who could hold his own with the assorted presidential candidates who came calling in New Hampshire every four years. He was passionate about fishing, tennis and a good game of chess.

For all the native competitiveness that fired the newspaperman, Mr. Cutler's greatest passion was his family. The love and support of his wife and children during his final illness enhanced his natural inclination to look at death with equanimity. Early in his illness he said to an old friend, "My life's work was my family, and I've succeeded."

David Sumner Cutler leaves his wife, the Reverend Catherine Cullen, of Duxbury; sisters Margaret Chandler of Maryland and Gail Cutler of Pembroke; sons Josh S. Cutler of Duxbury, Benjamin D. Cutler of New York and Jonathan M. Cullen of West Roxbury; daughters Carolyn M. Cutler of Georgia, Rebecca W. Cutler of Duxbury and Amanda C. Benard of Hingham; as well as seven grandchildren.

Visiting hours were Wednesday, Mar. 3 from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. at Shepherd Funeral Home in Kingston. A graveside service at Mayflower Cemetery was held Thursday, Mar. 4 at 10 a.m. A Memorial Service in celebration of Mr. Cutler's life will be held Saturday, Mar. 13 at 5 p.m. at First Parish Church in Duxbury.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the Cutler Family Memorial Scholarship Fund in care of the Trustees of Partridge Academy, P.O. Box 2552, Duxbury, MA 02331.

Quilt show, luncheon benefits high risk children

The calendar may say spring begins on March 20, but it comes three weeks earlier at Second Congregational Church in Cohasset with the 16th benefit Quilt Show and Luncheon from 10:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. March 6.

The sanctuary comes alive with more than 60 quilts gently draped over the pews. Each has a story to tell with names like Grandma's Stripping in the Garden, Third Time's the Charm!, Iris Fantasy, Sailor Boy or The Amusing Adult Alphabet. Waiters in a white table clothed dining room appointed with flowers serve the luncheon.

Tickets are available for $15 by calling the Second Congregational Church at 781-383-9474 or by sending a self addressed stamped envelope to the church at 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 with your check. Reservations for groups of four or more are accepted for specific luncheon seatings, each half hour, by contacting the church.

All proceeds benefit The Spark Center in Mattapan serving some of Boston's most high risk children: those living with complicated medical conditions as well as those with significant family or social concerns. The entire event is handicap accessible.

Tickets are available for $15 by calling the Second Congregational Church at 781-383-9474 or by sending a self addressed stamped envelope to the church at 43 Highland Ave., Cohasset, MA 02025 with your check.

Mary Hagerty

COHASSET – Mary Frances (Connolly) Hagerty passed away peacefully on February 26, 2010 surrounded by her family.

Mary came to Cohasset in her early 20s, where she met and married Francis Hagerty. They lived on Atlantic Avenue next to Sandy Beach where they raised two children, John and Peter. Mary's great love other than her family was her beautiful garden and she was an active member of the Cohasset Garden Club. For many years she helped her husband run Cohasset Colonials, a museum reproduction furniture manufacturer, and she was especially interested in the company's line of accessories, fabrics and drapes. Mary was a gracious hostess to countless members of the extended Connolly/Hagerty clan as they attended school or passed through this area, and she will be remembered by them as an excellent cook. She was happiest when her dining room was filled with family and friends.

Mary Hagerty

Mary is survived by John Hagerty of Duxbury and Peter Hagerty of Kezar Falls, Maine. She was a loving grandmother of five grandchildren: Erin Stevens, Elise Siebert, Blair Hagerty, Josephine Hagerty and Silas Hagerty. Also survived by her sister Catherine Beatty of Boston, and her brothers Peter Connolly of West Falmouth and Fred Connolly of Wellesley.

Donations in honor of Mary Frances Hagerty may be made to Cohasset Central Cemetery, 44 Ripley Road, Cohasset, MA 02025 Attn: Joy Place Special Projects Fund. A memorial Mass will be celebrated on Saturday, April 17, 2010 at 10 a.m. at the Church of Saint Anthony, 129 South Main Street, Cohasset, MA 02025, www.saintanthonycohasset.org. Friends and relatives are welcome.

Auditions

BAY PLAYERS will offer open auditions for "Our Town" from 1 to 3 p.m., on Sunday, March 21, and 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., on Monday, March 22. Auditions will take place at The Zone ,822 Webster St., Marshfield. "Our Town" is a three-act play by American playwright Thornton Wilder. It is a character story about an average town and its citizens, as depicted through their ordinary, everyday lives. The story also depicts a young couple as they discover love, move to marriage and deal with death. Local director Michael Pevzner of Kingston will direct this show, which will include a cast of about 15. "Our Town" will be performed June 18, 19, 25 and 26. All interested actors are encouraged to audition. Bay Players is also asking volunteers to come and spend some time. There are many things to do in a play that don't require people to memorize lines or be onstage. Behind-the-scenes work can be a lot of fun. For more information, call 339-793-1027 or go to the website at www.bayplayers.org.

Irish songs will leave you smiling

Sheila Fahey lends talent to St. Patrick's Day show

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

Standing, from left, Kathy Teevens Fitzpatrick, Jennifer Fahey, Sheila Fahey, Patricia Lee, and Maryellen Anson. Seated is Mark Donahue who will accompany the ladies in a "A Lilt of Irish Laughter," a new musical revue coming to The Tirrell Room in Quincy next week.

Entertainer Sheila Fahey has been a favorite of South Shore theatergoers for over two decades thanks to starring roles in book shows including "Hello, Dolly!" and "Mame," and more recently in musical revues like "What Christmas Means to Me," "Connie, Brenda, Patsy & Me," and "Guys by Dolls." Quincy-based producer John F. McDonald Jr., will once again put Fahey front and center in "A Lilt of Irish Laughter" next Thursday and Friday at The Tirrell Room in Quincy.

The pre-St. Patrick's Day booking makes perfect sense for the singer – born Sheila Mary O'Connell in South Boston – who grew up in the Dorchester home of her maternal grandparents from Galway and spent every March 17th with her grandmother on her father's side. Fahey promises to share childhood memories, as well as some beloved old Irish songs, when she joins her daughter Jennifer Fahey of Dorchester, Patty Lee and Maryellen Anson of Braintree, Kathy Teevens Fitzpatrick of Quincy, and accompanist Mark Donahue of Milton for their latest production. At home in Neponset last week, Fahey took time out for an Irish-themed chat with Town O'Commons.

Town O'Commons: What are some of your favorite Irish songs?

Sheila Fahey: I like them all, especially "If You're Irish Come into the Parlor," "Dear Old Donegal," "Galway Bay," and "Molly Malone," all of which we will be doing in our show. The one I love most, however, has to be "Tura Lura Lural." It is such a sweet and beautiful lullaby and the words are just so pretty.

Town O'Commons: When it comes to boiled dinner, are you a shoulder or corned beef person?

Sheila Fahey: Growing up, my favorite was always corned beef, but it was more expensive so we usually had shoulder. I made a corned beef dinner for 17 on Valentine's Day this year, because I will be in Florida on March 17, but everyone loved it just the same even though the decorations were red hearts instead of green shamrocks.

Town O'Commons: When it comes to big Irish production shows, which do you like more, "Riverdance" or "Lord of the Dance"?

Sheila Fahey: I saw "Riverdance" and I absolutely loved it. I haven't seen "Lord of the Dance" yet, but I hear it is great. We have our fingers crossed that we'll be joined next week by a troupe of Irish step dance champions from Dorchester who are just wonderful.

Town O' Commons: Favorite Irish tenor: Ronan Tynan or John McDermott?

Sheila Fahey: Everybody loves Ronan, but I'm going to have to go with John McDermott. I love the songs he chooses and I just really enjoy listening to him.

Town O'Commons: Are all the songs in the new show from the Emerald Isle?

Sheila Fahey: We'll do a lot of Irish music, of course, but we're also planning to take some songs off the shelf that people have been asking us to do for a long time, including "Somewhere Beyond the Sea," "Stupid Cupid," and "I Fall to Pieces." The first one is a great old Bobby Darin song and the other two were big hits for Connie Francis and Patsy Cline, respectively, but we've never performed them before.

JM Productions will present "A Lilt of Irish Laughter," with dinner and show and show only packages available, at The Tirrell Room, 254 Quarry St. Quincy, on March 11 and 12. For tickets and information, call 1-800-595-4849 or go online at jmproductionspresents.com.

Film Review
AL ALEXANDER

Leonardo DiCaprio brings Dennis Lehane's thriller to the big screen.

Insanity reigns, or should I say rains, in "Shutter Island," Martin Scorsese's waterlogged ode to the cinematic joys of mental illness.

Clearly, he's crazy about this stuff. And you feel that love in every beautifully rendered shot of his admirably understated tale of bedlam inside an isolated Massachusetts state hospital for the criminally deranged.

From the costumes to the sets to the acting, everything is sick, as in mad good. Well, everything but the preposterous story supporting it all.

To call Laeta Kalogridis' adaptation of Dennis Lehane's novel loony only begins to describe how way, way out there "Shutter Island" gets with its dabblings into 1950s paranoia.

It's certainly ambitious, though, tossing in allusions to the Holocaust, Red Scare and unethical medical experiments, as it attempts to solve the mysterious disappearance of a patient committed after killing her three young children.

Sent to find her are two federal marshals played superbly by Mark Ruffalo and Scorsese's muse, Leonardo DiCaprio. Together, they provide an appealing conduit into a clandestine world of shadowy figures and nefarious agendas. And those are just the people running the place.

You're intrigued from the moment Ruffalo's Chuck Aule and DiCaprio's Teddy Daniels step onto a ferry and journey out to the far reaches of Boston Harbor to a tiny ominous land mass called Shutter Island.

It is a world in and of itself with its own set of rules and a governing body led by Ben Kingsley's Dr. Cawley and Max Von Sydow's ex-Nazi, Dr. Naehring, two guys who would probably feel right at home in the waterboarding room at Gitmo.

Excising pain is their aim, as they empty a bag of archaic psychiatric tricks on a motley crew of patients, including a marvelous Jackie Earle Haley. Unfortunately, for him and his fellow inmates, it's 1954, a time when shackles, lobotomies and rudimentary cages are all the rage when it comes to "curing" the criminally insane.

No wonder Rachel Solando has gone missing. But where could she possibly run to while trapped on a desolate island that could pass for Alcatraz if not for the more image friendly name of Ashecliffe State Hospital.

More to the point, is she even real? The fact that Rachel is played by both Emily Mortimer and Patricia Clarkson, suggests she's either a figment of someone's imagination or an escapee from a Charlie Kaufman movie.

But then, that gray area between reality and delusion is precisely the point of both Lehane's novel and Scorsese's less satisfying movie. And it's interesting up to a point, especially the way Scorsese and cinematographer Robert Richardson ("The Departed") bathe the entire production in an intoxicating dream-like haze.

As the story slogs along well past the two-hour mark, however, you begin to lose patience with all the mind trips Scorsese insists on playing. Instead of creating thrills and suspense, as intended, these tricks start leading you to believe that they are just that, tricks, all carefully assembled to mask a story that doesn't begin to hold up to scrutiny.

It comes back to bite him in the end, when "the big reveal" stirs feelings of indifference more than genuine shock. It also feels like a cheap copout in much the same way Lehane's "Gone Baby Gone" did when it unveiled its underlying secret.

Fault for that, however, falls more on the screenwriter than Scorsese, who once again proves what a master director can accomplish even if saddled with an inferior script.

He pulls out all the stops, too, paying homage to just about all of his favorite pulpy B movies from the 1950s. And the more you know about those mini-masterpieces like "Cat People," "Laura" and "Crossfire," the more you're likely to dig what Scorsese is doing.

And what you'll dig most is the level of performance he summons from DiCaprio, who has never been better at playing the brooding, emotionally scarred hero.

As a veteran of World War II and one of the liberators of the Dachau death camp, DiCaprio's Teddy is toting some mighty heavy baggage rooted in what he saw and did during wartime. Add to that the horrific death of his wife (a radiant Michelle Williams spied in flashbacks) and it becomes a wonder he's not a patient himself.

Not that his sanity won't be tested, as a hurricane sets its path directly toward Shutter Island and indirectly triggers a roiling tempest inside Teddy's soul.

This, naturally, means lots of shots of water, but it's not necessarily a cleansing rain. But it does begin to wash away Teddy's well-maintained facade. It's an interesting transformation, but it also should have been a more compelling one.

The reason it isn't can only be blamed on a script that fails to adequately define and develop its characters, a problem exacerbated by the film's refusal to draw clear lines between what is and isn't real. And in the end, that costs Scorsese dearly, as he and "Shutter Island" leave you feeling stranded.

Water articles tabled for now

Special Town Meeting to be scheduled for June

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

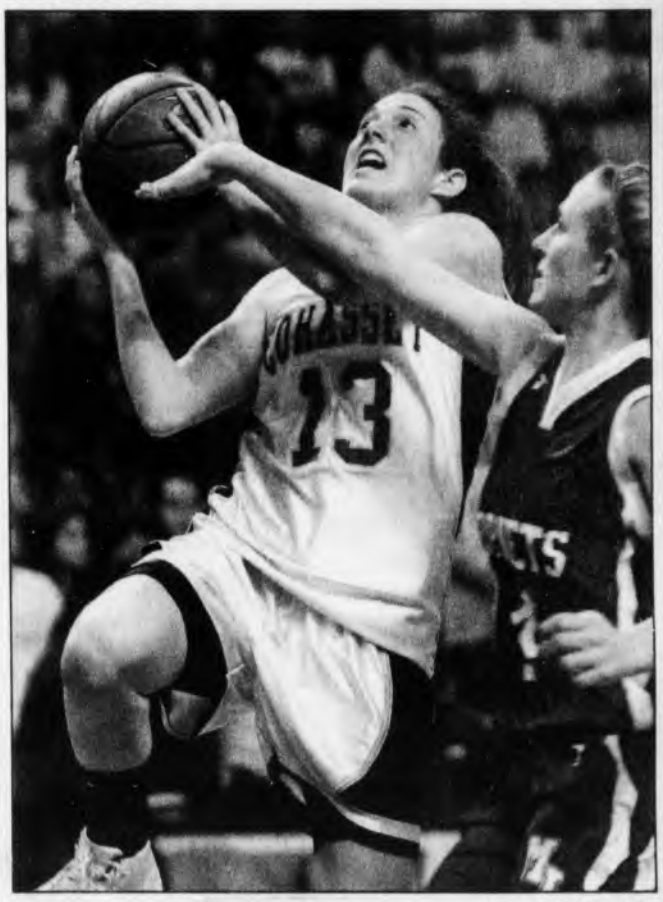
The financial problem is no longer just a Water Commission problem or just water department problem it is a town problem. And to come up with a solution that addresses the issues facing the water department it was determined at Monday night's Selectmen's meeting that more time is needed.

Although the articles will still be on the warrant, it is likely anything water-related will be tabled until a Special Town Meeting to be called sometime in June.

There were big questions for voters and water users slated for Town Meeting including the water department budget, a proposal for a water rate increase and requests for capital improvements.

The next three months will be used to take a close look at the water department, including its budget, its management, its debt service, and its rate structure. A committee has been formed to look at these issues and make recommendations (see related sidebar).

The most pressing concern is an expected shortfall of approximately $700,000 in this year's budget, Water Commission chairman Glenn Pratt. The fiscal year ends on June 30, 2010.



The Water Department operates with an enterprise fund, which means it is designed to be a self-sufficient operation relying on revenue from water users and other sources to meet its expenses. The issue is important for both water users and taxpayers because with the projected shortfall, water users could face a significant jump in water rates to cover it (it would be the third rate increase in four years) and/or the town operating budget would need to use its reserves and budget cuts to cover the shortfall.

"We have a very difficult problem ahead of us. It's a community problem now. There's no way we can see how to make our debt go away."
— Glenn Pratt, Water Commission

A perfect storm of unrealized revenue sources has put the water department in this financial predicament. The current year's fiscal budget relied on more revenue coming from its sole wholesale customer, Linden Ponds, which stopped construction last year (loss of $165,000); it assumed receipt of the first of two parts in a legal settlement with Avalon Bay development company expected to come in when the project breaks ground

New Senior Center start of good things to come

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

If you've driven on Sohier Street in the past few weeks, you may have noticed a new sign in front of the Cohasset Swim Center driveway. The sign is announcing the future site of the town's new Senior Center.

While still just a picture on a sign, there is a lot of energy behind the concept of a new Senior Center to meet the needs of the community. The site, a parcel of land adjacent to the Swim Center, has been finalized and private donations are set to do more complete site engineering of the land.

A group of about 40 gathered last Thursday (March 4) at the South Shore Community Center to get the official update on the where the project stands.

While there is still a long path ahead before seniors and their families can walk in the front doors of a new building, the meeting attendees – seniors, volunteers, and community leaders – brought positive thinking, excitement and anticipation for the project.

For the past several months a Council on Elder Affairs appointed ad-hoc committee has been doing the groundwork

Blind date drama

CHS actors move to second round of Festival

Terry MacCormack plays the waiter serving Mark Seraikas and Emily Baumgarten, who are on a blind date, in "Check, Please," a 30-minute, one-act play.

Ever been on a date with a guy wearing a burlap sack? Or a woman who thinks she is a monkey?

Or a man who is afraid of everything?

The answer is probably no, but wouldn't you like to be a fly on wall for those encounters?

In Cohasset High's entry into the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival you can do just that.

"It's a series of blind dates that go really badly," Emily Baumgarten said of the high school's production on "Check, Please," a 30-minute, one-act play. Emily plays the lead female role and is subjected to six separate blind dates with increasingly off-the-wall characters.

The comedy was a standout at the Feb. 27 preliminary round and judges sent the play on to the semi-final round to be held this Saturday at Weston High School.

As a comedic piece, co-director Barbara Baumgarten and the cast said their one-act stood out among more dramatic entries. Baumgarten is co-directing the Festival production with middle-school teacher Stephanie Noble.

"It was really a breath of fresh air at Festival," said Bobby Nahill, who plays

Passion Plunge for Special Olympics

COURTESY PHOTO

The Mariner caught up with Police Chief Mark DeLuca this week. The chief took the plunge on Saturday at Nantasket Beach with the Cohasset Team to raise money for the Massachusetts Special Olympics. For photos of the Passion Plunge, see page 22.

Name: Mark M. DeLuca.

Occupation: Chief of Police.

Best day of your life: I have had five best days with the birth of each of my five kids.

Worst vacation: My family and I went to New Hampshire and it rained for the entire week, my windshield wipers broke and one of the kids put the car in neutral hitting a tree which, about 12 years later, I am still investigating and have no leads!

Favorite season: Summer.

Favorite holiday: Thanksgiving.

Favorite food: Pasta.

Best book: I read, "Men are from Mars, Women are from Venus," by John Gray, to help me better understand my teenage daughters. It just confused me more.

Best actor: Robert De Niro.

Best TV show: "NCIS."

Best music: Country.

Pet peeve: Bullies.

Dumbest thing you've ever done: While watching my daughter's basketball game, I was walking back to the stands with a few soft drinks and hot dogs, and I stumbled dumping it all on some guy watching the game. Fortunately he was with the other team.

Goal: Help my children succeed.

Person you'd most like to meet: I'd like to bring my parents back.

Biggest worry: My children.

Best part of Cohasset: The people are fantastic!

Cohasset Mariner 'drop box'

The Cohasset Mariner has a "drop box" and pickup location at Tedeschi's in the village. The drop box is on the counter in the front window around the corner to the left after you enter the front door.

The Mariner picks up at 8 a.m. on Mondays and Tuesdays. The drop box can be used to drop off glossy photographs, letters, flyers or other editorial copy.

Ordering flags for Healing Field

The Sons of the American Legion is planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2010 observances. The flags sell for $25. Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. Crash results in OUI, other charges

A Cohasset Police Officer on patrol Thursday, March 11, at about 1:30am, discovered a single car-motor vehicle crash on South Main Street near the intersection of Castle Road. The driver of the vehicle, Christina R. Porter, 24, from Norwell, said she was driving home from her bartending job at a Cohasset establishment and drifted off of the road, police said. She sideswiped and cracked a telephone pole in the 1994 Ford pickup truck that she was driving. The pickup truck appeared to be totaled, and the pole will have to be replaced by National Grid.

Porter was examined by the Cohasset Fire Department Paramedics and declined treatment. Porter, who was displaying the signs and symptoms of heavy intoxication, failed several field sobriety tests and was placed under arrest for operating under the influence of liquor, operating a motor vehicle without a driver's license, negligent operation of a motor vehicle, failure to drive in marked lanes, and operating a vehicle with a failed inspection sticker. She was booked at the Cohasset Police Station and later released into the custody of a friend.

Lt. William Quigley said, "Based upon what she hit, this young lady was very lucky that she did not injure or kill herself or someone else."

Porter was scheduled to be arraigned in Quincy District Court yesterday (Thursday) on the above charges.

Information about your drinking water

The following is a notice from the Cohasset Water Department

Cohasset Water Contains High Levels of Lead — Our water system recently violated a drinking water standard. Even though this is not an emergency, as our customers, you have a right to know what happened, what you should do, and what we are doing to correct this situation.

We routinely sample water at consumers' taps for lead. The tests show lead levels in the water above the limit, or "action level," so we are required to install corrosion control treatment. This treatment helps prevent lead in the pipes from dissolving into the water. Corrosion control is installed and is being adjusted to improve results.

What should I do?

- Listed below are some steps you can take to reduce your exposure to lead:
- Call us at the number below to find out how to get your water tested for lead.
- Find out whether your pipes contain lead or lead solder.
- Run your water for 15-30 seconds or until it becomes cold before using it for drinking or cooking. This flushes any standing lead from the pipes.
- Don't cook with or drink water from the hot water tap; lead dissolves more easily into hot water.

Do not boil your water to remove lead. Excessive boiling water makes the lead more concentrated — the lead remains when the water evaporates.

What does this mean?

Typically, lead enters water supplies by leaching from lead or brass pipes and plumbing components. New lead pipes and plumbing components containing lead are no longer allowed for this reason; however, many older homes may contain lead pipes. Your water is more likely to contain high lead levels if water pipes in or leading to your home are made of lead or contain lead solder.

Infants and children who drink water containing lead in excess of the action level could experience delays in their physical or mental development. Children could show slight deficits in attention span and learning abilities. Adults who drink this water over many years could develop kidney problems or high blood pressure.

What happened? What is being done?

In November of 2009, 5 homes in Cohasset tested above the maximum contaminant level for lead. The source of the lead is from brass or lead pipes and fixtures located in the plumbing of the home. The water that leaves the treatment plant and well station to supply the town does not contain any lead. The treatment plant has a corrosion control system in place and has made adjustments to improve results.

This is not an emergency. If it had been, you would have been notified immediately.

For more information, please contact the Cohasset Water Department at 781-383-0057 or 339 King St. Cohasset, MA 02025.

Please share this information with all the other people who drink this water, especially those who may not have received this notice directly (for example, people in apartments, nursing homes, schools, and businesses). You can do this by posting this notice in a public place or distributing copies by hand or mail.

Police Beat

Septuagenarian rescued from submerged car

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 76-year-old Cohasset woman had to be carried out of her partially submerged car at Jerusalem Road and Bow Street last Monday (March 1) at about noon, police said.

The woman, who was driving a 2006 Saab, had tried to make it through the washed out section of the roadway when her car stalled. The fire department was able to get her out and the car had to be towed. The high water was due to an astronomically high tide.

Police urge motorists not to attempt to drive through high water but to turn around and take an alternate route. There is also the danger of the car being swept into Little Harbor. Salt water can also badly damage the car, police said.

Wallet turned in

A 46-year-old Hull man found a wallet in front of the UPS store at Shaw's Plaza and turned it into police last Tuesday (March 2). The wallet belonged to a 35-year-old Duxbury woman and contained $500 in cash, credit cards and her driver's license. Thanks to the Hull man, police were able to return the wallet to its owner with all the contents. It appears that she may have inadvertently dropped the wallet outside the store.

MV crash

A 77-year-old East Falmouth man driving a 2003 Buick Century was momentarily distracted as he was headed south on Route 3A last Tuesday at about 3 p.m. and he drifted toward oncoming traffic, police said. He almost hit a vehicle head-on and overcorrected hitting a tree on the southbound shoulder of the highway.

He refused transport to the hospital but his car was towed. He was cited for failure to stay in marked lanes. Police said the accident was not age-related and that he had not been paying attention.

Tools gone

A 52-year-old Cohasset woman reported several tools were missing from her garage last Tuesday at about 12:30 p.m. including a table saw, electric drill and drill bits, and saber saw. After investigation by detectives, some of the stolen items were located at a pawnshop in Brockton. As it turned out the woman's 21-year-old son had pawned the items. The woman declined to press charges.

Locked in

A 61-year-old woman called police after she dropped off a DVD at Blockbuster to report the child in her 2006 Jeep Liberty SUV was locked in but the vehicle was not running. She was able to get the SUV open through a window that was partially open and the fire department was cancelled.

Disturbance

Police are investigating whether a 20-year-old woman was served at the bar at a local establishment in the village. If it turns out that she was then the matter will be brought before the selectmen, who are the liquor licensing authority, police said.

Officers responded to a call from the Red Lion Inn at about 12:30 a.m. last Wednesday (March 3) about a dispute between a mother and daughter. From police observations and interviews at the scene, they believe the 20-year-old had been drinking. During the dispute between the 20-year-old and her mother in the hallway outside the bar, the mother allegedly pushed the bartender, police said. The bartender does not want to press charges, police said.

ATM activity

A 57-year-old Scituate man was at the ATM at Rockland Trust off Route 3A in Cohasset when he became suspicious that the man behind him was looking over his shoulder and trying to obtain his banking information.

He provided a general description to Scituate police who relayed the information to Cohasset including the fact the man was driving a black SUV.

Road rage

A 44-year-old Cohasset woman was the apparent victim of a road rage incident last Wednesday (March 3) at about 10:55 p.m. The woman called police after the alleged assailant in a silver SUV (possibly a Toyota) followed her home. Police said the incident began at routes 3A and 228 when the SUV started tailgating the woman and the operator then pulled in front of her and slammed on his brakes as well as other menacing actions along North Main Street. He then followed her to her house.

She was concerned that the man now knows where she lives. Police advise motorists not to drive right home in these situations but drive to the police station if possible.

Harassing

Hull police have warned two young women, ages 18 and 24, to stop harassing a 26-year-old Cohasset woman over a missing cell phone last Thursday (March 4). The Cohasset woman reported the matter to police. Hull police told the two women that they could be facing criminal harassment charges if they kept it up.

Signs stolen

One of the former business partners in a local business that is being dissolved reported his signs with the name of this business have been stolen from locations around town. Police are investigating.

Avalon could become a LIP

'Friendly 40-B' plan floated

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

With preliminary support from the Board of Selectmen, the developers of the Avalon Bay apartment complex are moving forward to develop an application to become a "friendly-40-B."

The Avalon developers are seeking to convert their traditional comprehensive permit to a local initiative program project, in short an affordable housing project supported by the town. They are also seeking support for a small expansion of the long-approved project.

The 200-apartment complex to be site on over 60 acres off Route 3A received a comprehensive permit from the Zoning Board of Appeals over six years ago. Issues over wastewater treatment held up the project for several years.

The primary driver for the request is the need for financing. Scott Dale, Avalon vice president and project manager for the Avalon Cohasset, said the company could finance the project on their own. Under the comprehensive permit scenario, funding sources from that state, which have dried up due to the economy, are needed.

In a letter, Town Counsel Rick Hucksam said other projects in the state have gone through the same type of conversions. The primary benefit, he said, would be the conversion would assure that the affordable housing project is constructed and the 200 units would count toward the town's 10 percent affordable housing stock required under state law.

However, before signing over their approval Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson said they board would need a copy of the application and understand what modifications would be made to the existing permit.

"There is nothing that argues against reviewing the proposal," Carlson said.

Both Selectmen Karen Quigley and Ralph Dormitzer asked how the LIP arrangement, if approved, could benefit the town.

Dale said it would expedite the project, which would be in everybody's best interest. Quigley asked specifically about the possibility of a fire station on Route 3A near the Avalon site.

"We could not incur a huge financial burden," Dale said, but would be willing to work with the town if they had an idea. There is a parcel fronting on Route 3A that is owned by another party, but Dale said it would be in the development's best interest to see that site developed.

The process to convert the project to a LIP is multi-step. First, Avalon developers will create an application and present it to the Board of Selectmen for approval. If the town signs off, the application will go to the state Department of Housing and Community Development. The state agency would then issue a new project eligibility determination under the LIP program.

Then the project would need to go back before the Zoning Board of Appeals for a minor modification of its existing permit.

Additional units

For 40 years, the town of Cohasset has had the Chapter 40-B mandate of 10 percent affordable housing stock breathing down its neck. With just the 76 units of senior housing at 60 Elm St. out of its 2800 residential units deemed affordable by state standards, Cohasset is way below the state's threshold (about 2.7 percent).

Under Chapter 40B, a town's zoning board can approve affordable housing developments under flexible rules if at least 20-25 percent of the units have long-term affordability restrictions. Towns that are under the 10 percent threshold of their housing stock deemed as affordable by state standards are vulnerable to 40-B projects. Because Avalon is all rental units, all the units will "count" toward Cohasset's 10 percent.

With the Avalon project and its 200 rental units, Cohasset will likely meet the 10 percent threshold according to the 2000 census numbers. Avalon proposed expanding their project to as many as 50 units to get and keep the town of Cohasset in compliance with the state's affordable housing law, Chapter 40-B, for the next 10 years.

(Under 40-B rules, all units count toward the affordability threshold in a rental complex even though just 25 percent are rented at below market rates. That is because the state wants to encourage more rental housing.)

However, according to Building Inspector Bob Egan said about 101 new housing units have been created in the last 10 years. This creates the need for 15 to 20 additional affordable housing units, over and above the 200 apartments.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he wanted to cover the obligation of the 10 percent affordable housing, but didn't see a reason for exceeding that number.

"Doing more than that is not necessarily something I'd be in favor of," Dormitzer said.

Selectman Fred Koed said he wanted to see "the real math" behind the needed amount of units for affordable housing before approving anything.

"Let's put it to bed for the next 10 years," Koed said.

Dale said with the addition of 15 or 20 apartment units the changes to the approved design would be "relatively minimal."

Dormitzer asked that if the Avalon developers made changes to the plan to accommodate additional units to ensure there was a high percentage of green space.

Avalon will also have to take into account the additional units effect on the approved leeching field.

Historical maintenance?

Selectmen grapple with preservation fund intent

"The town's willingness to support a 1.5 percent tax is threatened if we don't use the monies appropriately."
— Selectman Ralph Dormitzer

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

What is maintenance and what is preservation?

That question became central in the discussion of two possible Community Preservation projects at the Board of Selectmen's meeting last week.

The Historical Society has requested $50,000 for the replacement of their boiler and an upgrade to their heating system at their headquarters on South Main Street. The Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) is looking for just under $25,000 to make various upgrades to the town-owned building's façade.

Community Preservation money can only be spent for very specific purposes: open space, recreation, affordable housing, and historic preservation. The Community Preservation Committee (CPC) is recommending both projects to Town Meeting. The Selectmen did not make their recommendation on the two projects yet. Voters at Town Meeting (Sat., March 27) will have the ultimate say on how the CPC money will be spent.

Some of the Selectmen felt both projects fell "on the edge" of qualification for community preservation funding. Both projects applied under the purpose of historical preservation.

The CSCR project generated the most discussion. As described by Steve Daly, a member of the CSCR Board of Directors, the funds would go toward shoring up the building's systems, largely to prevent the infiltration of water, which continually is a problem for the harbor-front property.

In the application, CSCR requests nearly $25,000 to do roofing, gutter, downspouts and seal and de-water the basement.

"The building has complicated issues that we need help to finance," Daly said.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer said he was unsure all the items qualified under the CPA, "there's a range of things here, that's the issue."

Dormitzer said the window replacements might be preservation, but he wasn't sure about a sump pump for the basement

The conversation covered much ground – from the building's historical significance to the lease agreement – as the board tried to sort through the issues.

The CSCR building, sometimes called the Hagerty Building and historically known as the Captain Aubrey Crocker House is a town-owned building. The space is leased yearly to the non-profit group CSCR for its mission of providing students with hands-on experiences in coastal research.

Russ Bonetti of 20 Parker Avenue raised issues of past allocations given to CSCR by the CPC and was concerned this application was largely maintenance items. He also questioned the historic value of the former Cohasset Colonial's showroom, where some of the work is planned.

"In this Town Meeting article I think we're paying for maintenance on a structure of dubious history," Bonetti said.

The Board of Selectmen requested Town Manager Bill Griffin to seek an opinion from Town Counsel to ensure all aspects of the project qualifies under the CPA.

Dormitzer said the town needs to be careful how they spend CPA funding because with the recent decrease in the state matching fund, the vast majority is coming directly from taxpayers.

The Community Preservation Act's funds are generated from two sources, a town real estate tax surcharge (in Cohasset 1.5 percent) and some level of state match, determined year-to-year. The state funds are derived from a $20 surcharge on all documents filed in the Recorder of Deeds office statewide (e.g. mortgages, deeds, homesteads, etc.).

"The town's willingness to support a 1.5 percent tax is threatened if we don't use the monies appropriately," Dormitzer said.

Historical Society's boiler

Kathy O'Malley, president of the Historical Society, said similar projects have been done with CPC money in Duxbury, Plymouth, Marshfield, "it is not unusual." The Paul Pratt Memorial Building is on the National Register of Historic Places.

Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson said he believed the proposal to be "classic capital expenditure" that would last for decades, and not a maintenance expense.

Selectman Karen Quigley and Selectman Ralph Dormitzer wanted to be sure the expenditure fell in the CPC guidelines.

The issue came up of whether a state agency would later review the expenditures to ensure it complied with the CPA. CPC Chairman Stuart Ivimey said there was not.

"Just because the CPA police isn't out there doesn't mean we should be cavalier on how we spend the money," Ivimey said, adding he felt the project was a "judgment call" for the town, but he was comfortable recommending it.

How did Selectmen recommend the CPC projects?*

Project	Cost	Recommended?
Historical Society boiler	$50,000	No vote
60 Elm St. electrical updates	$12,300	Yes
60 Elm St. exterior lights	$15,375	Yes
60 Elm St. motion sensitive lights	$12,325	Yes
Great Neck Ledge land purchase	$250,000	Yes
Restoration of Meetinghouse Pond	$250,000	Yes
Hagerty House (CSCR) restoration	$24,805	No vote

*All the above projects have been recommended to Town Meeting by a majority vote of the Community Preservation Committee.

Clocks spring ahead Sunday

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

GO BLUE

Hello Cohasset. Well, a bit of wet weather is here but after the great stretch that we just had it is ok. Spring is almost here! Congratulations to our Cohasset High School Girls Basketball champions! A fantastic effort from a team that worked hard, pulled together every step of the way and finished a season that was unbelievable! Cohasset could not be prouder girls, great job. A reminder to us all to make sure to set your clocks ahead by one hour this Sunday (well, easier to do it when you go to bed Saturday night) for Daylight Savings! Spring ahead Cohasset and a Happy St. Patrick's Day to all on Wed, March 17th!

NIFTY AT FIFTY

Happy Birthday wishes are being sent out to Jerry Laugelle as he celebrated the big "50" yesterday. Hope the day and this weekend treats you well and that you get spoiled by all with love!

PLUNGERS

The 12th Annual Passion Plunge for Special Olympics Massachusetts took place at Nantasket Beach last Saturday, and what a great time was had by a record of over 500 plungers and great crowd of enthusiastic spectators! The warm weather really helped get everyone out, but the Plungers found the water wasn't warm — only 38 degrees, with some surf! Most importantly, together with the simultaneous Plunge at Revere Beach, some $400,000 was raised to support year-round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for our 12,000 athletes. As the Special Olympics doesn't charge its athletes or their families to participate, these funds are vitally important. Even with the help of 13,000 volunteers, it costs almost $500 per year for each athlete. Two teams, including our South Shore Mariners, set new records by raising over $30,000. Cohasset team members include: Jay Nothnagle-Captain, Connie Afshar, Joel Buford, Barbara Canney, Jack Delorenzo, Cohasset Police Chief Mark Deluca (and his daughters!), Brad Goodwin, Ron Goodwin, Greg Geddes, Bill Greentree, Brook Miele, Steve Myers, Jeff Nothnagle (Board Chair), Graham Sida, Nick Sida, Bill Tierney, and Doug Yeager, plus 11 more brave plungers from other South Shore towns. The funds they raise come back to our local Mariners program, which has 90 athletes, ages 8 to 66, from seven South Shore towns. A sincere "thank you" to all who pledged and supported this wonderful organization that builds self-confidence, pride, and healthy athletes. If you have not pledged you can send a check to your favorite plunger, payable to Special Olympics, or go on-line at "www.PassionPlunge.org".

TOP AWARD

Rachel Longley Arnold, a 2003 graduate of Cohasset High School, and a PhD candidate studying mathematics was recently awarded Virginia Tech's Graduate Student Teaching Excellence Award. She currently teaches an honors multivariable calculus class at the university. Rachel has always been interested in teaching and considers herself very fortunate to have had many very good teachers throughout her life and that includes some great ones here in Cohasset! She and her husband, Jon, are expecting their first child this August! Congratulations to you Rachel on your recognition and award as well on the very exciting addition that will be joining your family soon.

That is all the news for this week. Please send in your news, photos and event information to us no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm and REMEMBER that every celebration is one that we love to share!

Chartis and Ned Tebbetts have given a gift to the Cohasset Library Trust.

Cohasset Library Trust receives gift

Cohasset Library Trust has announced the receipt of a gift of $5,000 from Chartis and Ned Tebbetts. The gift will be added to the endowment, the proceeds from which are used to supplement the library budget.

In a recent interview the couple were asked why they chose to make a gift to the Library Trust. Ned Tebbetts explained that he uses the library on a daily basis. "Especially since the library moved to Ripley Road, the environment for reading periodicals and newspapers has been excellent. I often spread out papers that I have brought from home and get so much accomplished. No phone calls, no distractions. Our library has wonderful resources and staff. Being such an extensive user of our library, I feel I have an obligation to support it financially, and I am happy to be able to do so."

"Making sure our library is maintained into the future is important to me."

— Chartis Tebbetts

His wife Chartis said, "Making sure our library is maintained into the future is important to me. The joy of spotting a new book to read, of browsing through magazines and newspapers that we don't have at home, and of having programs to stimulate children and adults all compel me to give financial support to our library."

Jane Goedecke, president of the Trust, praised the Tebbetts for their commitment to the library and its future. "Library budgets are under increasing pressure. We see libraries in neighboring town struggling and closing. It is essential to the quality of life in Cohasset that we keep our library financially strong. We are very grateful to Chartis and Ned for this generous gift."

The Tebbetts' names will be added to the Donor Wall in the vestibule in the library. More information on the Trust is available on the library website.

CHS advances in state Drama Festival

"Manny," a man with extreme and numerous phobias.

"Many of the other plays were very dramatic, so in the mix of we presented a straight comedy for the audience and it paid off," said Ian Porter, who plays the lead male role who goes on six blind dates.

Zoë Whilton plays Ian's last horrible date of the play, "I don't speak – just imagine how bad that can be."

The preliminary round for the Drama Festival competition was held on Feb. 27 at Bourne High School. Cohasset High and two other schools out of eight competitors were chosen to move on to the semi-final round.

"There was tough competition. None of us though we'd move on — we were shocked when we heard our name called," said junior Greta Shwachman. Greta's character "Linda" has multiple personalities to "entertain" her date with, including thinking she is a monkey.

Greta, and seniors Mark Seraikas and Sean MacCarthy were all recognized in the preliminary round for individual acting excellence.

The cast has been rehearsing since the middle of January at least twice a week, sometimes three. The week before the preliminary round lighting, sound, set, costumes, crew were added and rehearsals were held every night. The week culminated in a presentation of the production for the student body, which Baumgarten said was extremely helpful in polishing the performances.

"I think the actors forgot what was funny, where the laughs would be and where and how long they needed to hold for the laugh. It took them a little by surprise and it helped them greatly the next day at competition," Baumgarten said.

Although none of the actors have been on a horrible blind date, they said the situations – and characters – are exaggerated for comedic effect, not necessarily based in reality.

"Some of the situations are so ridiculous; the characters are irrational," senior Ian Porter said. "It is about the scary idea of being on a blind date."

"Sophie" is played by Natalie Dignan.

Ian Porter and Logan Pratt in a scene from "Check, Please."

In 2008, Cohasset High moved on to the Festival semi-final round with the dark comedy "Whole New You."

Unlike most of the other competing schools, Cohasset High does not have a drama courses in the curriculum.

"The fact we are able to muster a product that's moved on in the competition is phenomenal," Baumgarten said. "We're definitely the exception in that way, especially as we move to the next level."

The cast recognizes that they will face some stiff competition in the semi-final round.

"Everyone will have their game faces on," Greta said. They go up against five other high schools in their pursuit to move on to the state final round, which takes place in Boston later this month. Two schools from the semi-final round will move on to states.

However, the competition pans out the young actors have one goal they are sure they will accomplish.

"We definitely going to make the audience laugh," Bobby said.

"The Mime" is played by Zoë Whilton.

"Brandon" is portrayed by Mark Seraikas. Greta Shwachman and seniors, Seraikas and Sean MacCarthy were all recognized in the preliminary round for individual acting excellence.

GIMME SHELTER

Tigress needs someone special

This week, Hull Seaside Animal Rescue would like to feature Tigress. Tigress is a 5-year-old female Tiger cat. She's quite the beauty and adores being brushed. She doesn't require a lot of attention but will accept it graciously. She's been at the shelter for several years and has had quite a few chances to be adopted. She refused to leave. We don't know for sure but think she may have been abused in her last home. She feels safe at the shelter as everyone is so good to her.

If you'd like to meet her and consider sharing your home with her, please call Shirl at 781-925-3380.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

Feeling Blue!

Who would have thought that it could feel so good to be Blue!

Our hats go off to the perfect 25-0, CHS Lady Skippers basketball team, of which the entire community is so very proud.

There is nothing like the "lead up" to a State Championship that can pull a community together.

Cohasset turned out in superior fashion with upwards of 1,000 fans at the game – many of whom traveled to the Garden in 10 super-fan buses. Athletic Director Ron Ford points out that translates into a turnout of about one of seven Cohasset residents.

Clearly, this team will go down in the Cohasset High history books as one of the greatest and will be talked about for many years to come.

Clearly, this team will go down in the Cohasset High history books as one of the greatest and will be talked about for many years to come.

"It has been an amazing three years," Mr. Ford said. "A record of 68-5, three South Shore League titles, two South Sectional Title, two State Championships and finishing off with a perfect 25-0 season."

In other great news – CHS actors are moving on to the state Drama Festival on Saturday at Weston High School with their one-act play, "Check, Please," about a series of blind dates that go really badly.

What is really amazing is that Cohasset High does not have a drama courses in the curriculum yet continues to shine on stage. This is largely due to dedication and hard work but also the culmination of a positive "can-do" attitude of all involved.

Well done to our athletes and actors.

Water, water

Many of our readers are no doubt trying to wade through the water issues that are coming to the surface. Here at the Mariner we are following the issues closely as evidenced by two, front-page stories last week and another story this week.

We are relieved that the "powers that be" have decided to postpone the "water articles" slated for the annual Town Meeting to a Special Town Meeting, date to be announced.

If there was ever a subject that needed its own Special Town Meeting, it is this one.

Over the years, we have found that town meetings are a good way to fully air and debate an issue. However, complex problems dealt with at an annual Town Meeting might not get the full airing they need due to the time and attendance factors.

In the meantime, Selectmen are going to appoint a committee to help figure out how to look at the financial problems facing the water department enterprise fund and help develop workable solutions for the short- and long-term.

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Advisory Committee, March 16 & 23, at 7 p.m., at Town Hall; March 27 at 8 a.m. at the annual Town Meeting at the high school.

Alternative Energy Committee, March 16, 7 p.m.

Conservation Commission, March 18, 7 p.m.

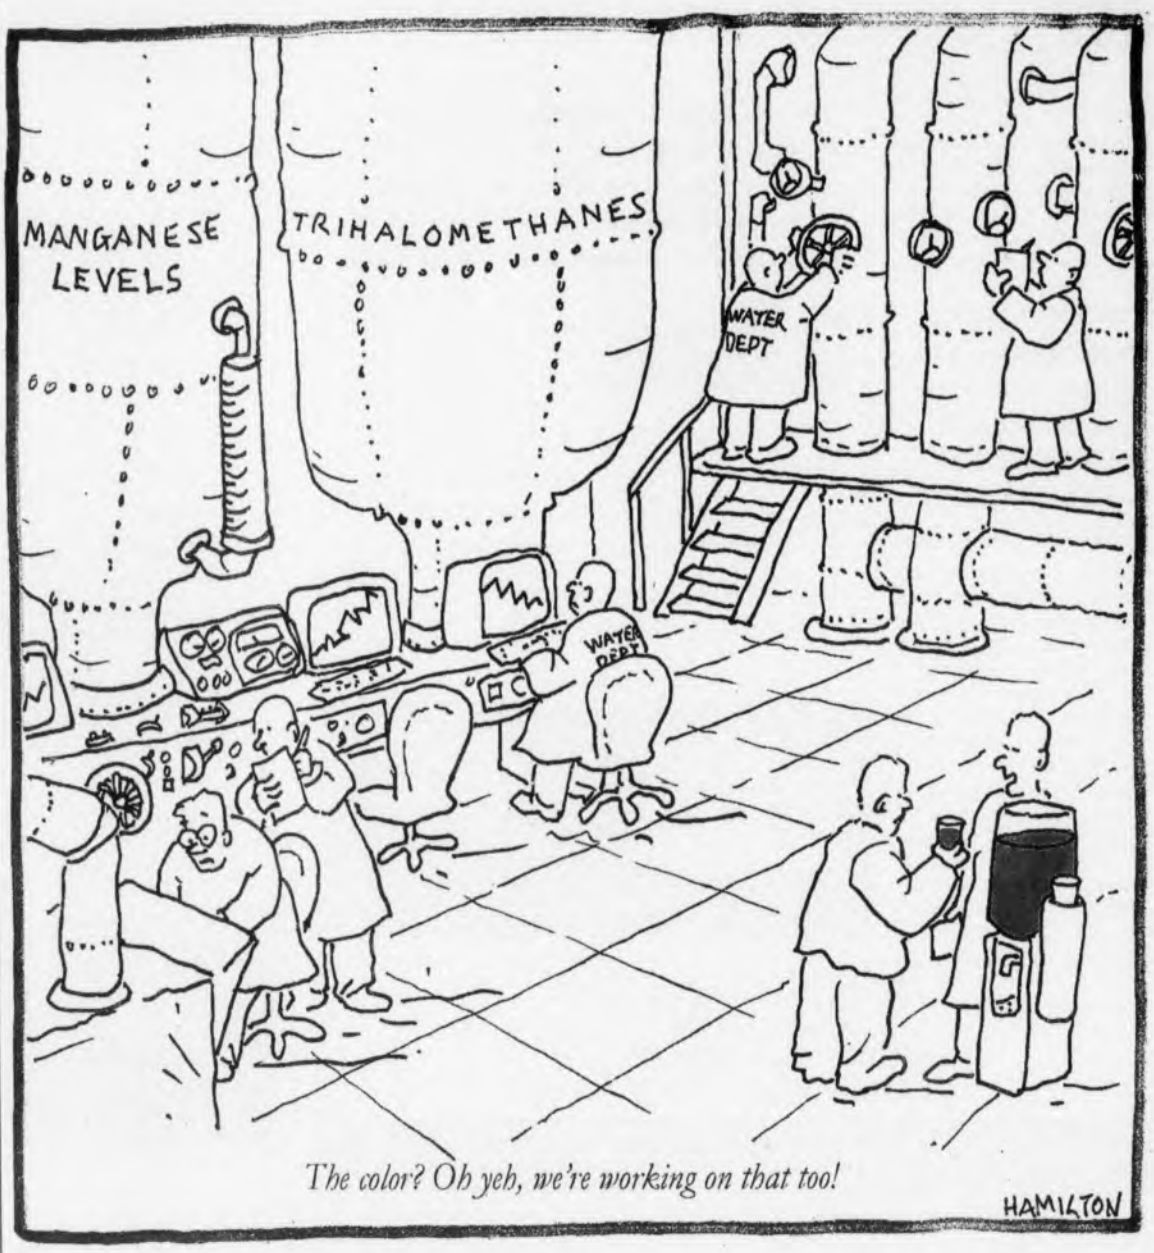
Planning Board, March 13 at 11 a.m. at the library and March 24, 7 p.m. at Town Hall.

Recreation Commission, April 6, 6:30.

School Committee, March 17, 7 p.m. at the high school.

Selectmen, March 15 & 22 , 7 p.m.

Water Commission, March 15 at 6 p.m. at the King Street plant.



ZBA, April 6, 7:30 p.m.

All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

April Veterans' Agent visiting hours

Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services will be at Paul Pratt Library, Room 2B, as follows: Saturday, April 3, 7:45 p.m.; Monday, April 5, 10 a.m. to noon; and Wednesday, April 7, 10 a.m. to noon. People can drop in or call ahead if they prefer. Visiting hours are not only for veterans, but also for spouses/surviving spouses and those concerned with aging parents (veterans/spouses) as well as for general advice.

If the aforementioned schedule does not meet one's needs, the veterans' agent will meet people at a convenient location and time, i.e., the library, his home, people's homes. The Cohasset Veterans Agent is Joe McElroy. For more information, call him at 781-383-0505 or email cohjoe@aol.com.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Legal costs and the school budget

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing in response to last week's article on the Cohasset School Department budget.

I have to ask – why does our superintendent need an additional $55,000 in her budget to cover school-related legal fees?

A little research at Town hall yielded information about the "legal costs" both before this current administration and since Dr. Walsh started at Cohasset School District.

Here are those amounts paid out for "legal advice to the school administration" each year:

Fiscal Year	Cost
2000	$14,677
2001	$9,340
2002	$13,000
2003	$21,668
2004	$15,580

Since Dr. Walsh and current Administration:

Fiscal Year	Cost
2005	$76,285
2006	$61,785
2007	$57,695
2008	$130,121
2010	$68,854... for only the first six months!

Prior to 2005, our school leaders did not seem to have any difficulty in avoiding contentious legal battles, and kept costs at an average of $14,853 — well within the line item budgeted amount of $31,000. It appears that Dr. Walsh, on the other hand, goes to battle often, and at the expense of the taxpayers who have paid an average of $66,452.66 per year since 2005. All the Union contracts have been settled for the next three years, so again, why the need for so much more money when contract negotiations are not pending? Are new legal battles already in the making, and hence the push to increase funding in that line item?

Legal costs are just one area to revisit, but it's clear the School Committee needs to take another look at the entire budget.

Perfect ending to perfect season

COMMENTARY

RON FORD

We have planned a special night to honor the team on March 19 at the gym when the CHS varsity girls and boys teams will take on the CHS Faculty All-Stars...

On behalf of our Girls' Basketball Team, Coaching Staff, and Cohasset Middle-High School Community we would like to thank everyone who supported our Skippers all season long. Skipper Nation should be proud of not only our 25-0 Undefeated State Champs but also the way that students, parents and fans represented the Town of Cohasset on Tuesday. We pre-sold 955 tickets (with even more fans joining us at the Garden) and we filled 10 "Superfan" buses. That means about one out of every seven Cohasset residents were at the game yesterday. Our "Superfans" are the best high school basketball fans in the state and yesterday you proved it. Your support was unbelievable !

Special thanks and congratulations needs to go out to our CHS Chorus, under the direction of Mr. Bryan Marks, who 50 members strong did a tremendous job singing the national anthem at center court yesterday. To all of the school administration and staff at CMHS who volunteered as chaperones, helped sell tickets and organize the spectator busses, and supported our student-athletes all year long, thank you.

To Cohasset Fire Department Chief Bob Silvia and Police Chief Mark DeLuca who help provide a true "Champions Welcome" with their departments escorts for the team bus through town yesterday, thank you. A big thanks goes out the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club, who all season-long provided all of the support and involved the entire Cohasset Basketball Community from our grade one youth teams right up to our travel programs in the CHS Varsity Basketball experience. The Boosters set up all of the signs around town, (including the message board on Route 3A) getting fans out to the games, the halftime youth basketball games, the videotaping of games, concession stands, t-shirts, etc. All of the support is the result of parent boosters from basketball and other sports working together to make the CHS Athletic experience a first class one not only for our athletes but for the entire community as well.

Finally, I would like to thank Coach Levangie and the Girls Basketball Team for taking us on such a memorable ride. It has been an amazing three years. A record of 68-5, three South Shore League titles, two South Sectional Title, two State Championships and finishing off with a perfect 25-0 season. Our seniors Samantha Crough, Tori Lehr, Meredith Kelly, and Manager Izzy Franklin finished their high school basketball careers as champions who set the bar high for our future Skippers. Thanks for letting us all come along for the ride.

You will get one more chance to see the girls play. We have planned a special night to honor the team on March 19 at the gym when the CHS varsity girls and boys teams will take on the CHS Faculty All-Stars in a game that will raise money for the CHS Music Trip to Philadelphia in May. More details will follow.

Go Blue!

Ron Ford is the Athletic Director at Cohasset Middle - High School.

HEALTH NOTES

Shingles, Lyme and other serious viral diseases

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Shingles vaccine, licensed in 2006 reduced the risk of shingles by 50 percent. A single dose of shingles vaccine is recommended for adults 60 years of age and older.

For health issues, it's being a busy time. After last week's touting the onset of spring, we've received word of many new flu cases, so it's important to maintain defenses: wash hands, disinfectants, etc. But new reports are also now appearing about some more serious viral infections: specifically Shingles and Lyme disease.

The information age has made proper health practices and procedures increasingly difficult for almost everybody. Microbes which cause viral diseases, unlike the larger bacteria, most of which don't harm people, make assessment of symptoms more difficult. Many ailments — such as pneumonia, meningitis and diarrhea — can be caused by either type of microbe. Furthermore, inappropriate use of antibiotics has helped create strains of treatment resistant bacterial disease. A future Health Notes will discuss current thinking on disposal of a variety of medications and medical paraphanalia now apt to be found in medicine cabinets.

Shingles is a painful localized skin rash often with blisters that is caused by the varicella zoster virus (VZV), the same virus that causes chickenpox. Anyone who has had chickenpox can develop shingles because the virus remains in the nerve cells of the body after the infection clears and VZV can reappear years later causing shingles. They commonly occur in adults 50 years old or older; people with medical conditions or those who receive immunosuppressive drugs.

A shingles rash usually appears on one side of the face or body and lasts from 2 to 4 weeks. Its main symptom is pain, which can be severe. Other symptoms, fever, headache, chills and upset stomach can lead to pneumonia, hearing problems, blindness, brain inflammation, encephalitis or death. Severe pain (post-herpetic neuralgia) can continue long after the rash clears up. Tell your doctor if you have any severe allergies, or other ailments which could affect treatment.

Shingles vaccine, licensed in 2006 reduced the risk of shingles by 50 percent. A single dose of shingles vaccine is recommended for adults 60 years of age and older.

Someone with a minor acute illness, such as a cold, may be vaccinated. But anyone with a moderate or severe reaction, call 911 or 1-800-232-4636 (1-800-CDC-INFO)

Lyme Disease, a bacterial infection that includes a skin rash, swollen joints and flu-like symptoms is contracted from the bite of an infected tick. Many of its symptoms are like those of other diseases may include:

The rash resembling a bulls-eye, fever, headache, muscle pain, stiff neck, swelling of knees and other large joints. In the early stages, doctors assess symptoms and medical history. For later stages of the disease, lab tests can confirm the diagnosis. Today's antibiotics usually cure early stage Lyme disease. If not treated, the disease can cause problems with the joints, heart and nervous system.

The season of greatest tick infestation in Cohasset is mid April through August, the time when deer tick nymphs attach themselves to hosts: dogs, cats and us. So, if you're out in the woods, or in high grass, take the precaution of covering up completely. Tuck trousers into your socks, and perhaps get out the Deet insect repellent and give your legs a spray. Remember, light colored clothing shows off ticks that may be along for the ride. When you come home, put your clothing in a hot drier for a few minutes. Ticks must have been living aboard for at least 24 hours to infect humans, so it's highly probable that a careful inspection will reveal them before they've done harm. They will not infest pets with suitable protective collars. If you find a tick, don't use gasoline, nail polish remover, or other salves or unguents; dislodge it with tweezers. Pull straight our without twisting. If the tick has been attached for some time, it's necessary to see a doctor or a health nurse for advice about symptoms. Mark the date on the calendar and if possible, save the tick for identification.

So, now that we're hopefully going into the good weather season don't forget to watch out for the other harbingers of spring: ticks, mosquitoes, and poison ivy. Visit the CDC's website at http://www.cdc.gov/vaccines.

Historical Society to sponsor program March 17

"The Life and Times of a Naval Aviator," will provide a daughter's insight into the family aspects of her father's life as well as take a look at the history going on around him.

Joseph James "Jocko" Clark was a man who came from humble beginnings. He was born on a reservation in the Oklahoma Territory and was the first person of Native American descent to graduate from the Naval Academy. He saw action in three wars, had a ship named for him and finished his naval career with the rank of Four Star Admiral.

Cohasset Historical Society will welcome Admiral Clark's daughter, Mary Louise Clark, as guest speaker at 7:30 p.m., on Wednesday, March 17, at Historical Society headquarters, 106 South Main St. Her topic for the evening, "The Life and Times of a Naval Aviator," will provide a daughter's insight into the family aspects of her father's life as well as take a look at the history going on around him. There is no charge for the program and light refreshments will be served.

Mary Louise Clark has a master's degree in French literature and philosophy as well as three years of legal education and five years study at the Museum School. She has been on the staff at Quincy College for the past 21 years.

Participate in a green transportation meeting

On Saturday March 13th, from 11a.m. to 12:30p.m, Brewer will host an information session at the Cohasset Public Library meeting room.

Do you have ideas to improve getting around Cohasset easier, safer and be healthier at the same time?

The town and Planning Board member Clark Brewer want to hear from you.

On Saturday March 13th, from 11a.m. to 12:30p.m, Brewer will host an information session at the Cohasset Public Library meeting room.

The purpose of this meeting will be to address options for grant applications under the Clean Air and Mobility Program. The intent of this program is to provide incentives, support and funding that improves air quality, including small scale infrastructure improvements that support pedestrian and bicycle facilities in Cohasset.

Public input will help in establishing priorities under this program and funding opportunities in the future.

'The invasion'

By Rosmarie Engel-Conn
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Rosmarie Engel-Conn reads from one of her memoirs of being a teenager in Germany during World War II.

Series of memoirs

The Mariner is publishing a series of memoirs by Cohasset resident Rosmarie Engel-Conn. The 83-year-old German native has written down some of her most vivid memories and experiences as a teenager during World War II.

She lived under Adolf Hitler's rule, worked in an ammunitions factory as part of mandated service to the country, narrowly survived the bombing of Dresden, and escaped harm when the Russian army marched into her village just outside of Wittenburg.

This year is the 65th anniversary of the end of World War II.

Her memoir "The Invasion" is the second installment in the series. To read the first essay about the bombardment of Dresden, visit www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset.

After surviving the deadly night of the bombarding of Dresden in February 1945, I returned to my parent's house in Miihlanger, a little village near Wittenberg, Saxony.

My father was still missing at the battlefields in Russia. The daily news we received, by listening to the radio, or by talking to neighbors, was sparse and very frightful. It was obvious, that the fights at the East-Front – unsuccessful – since weeks were coming to an end.

As the result, we finally would be confronted with the invasion of the Russian Army. Having heard about the behavior of Russian soldiers entering enemy territory everybody knew what to expect: terror, destruction or even death.

Day by day, living from our limited, rare food supply in a cold house, where only one room was barely heated.

Because, since some time, there was no coal available, my mother bought a big round type of stove with a lid on top. It was constructed of a thin layer of metal and had to be stuffed in the morning with shredded wood supply you could find in lumber stores or – now and then – on the black market. This strange oven only sent low heat, so we gathered close around. Close and closer as more of the terrifying news spread: The Russians are coming! They would conquer very soon our little village! What would happen? How to act best, to escape rape, harm, humiliation, death?

My mother was just 37 years old, with two teenage daughters 19 and 17, and a young son of 12 years.

The decision had to be made fast, how to take the first encounter with the Russian soldiers...they would be drunk, literally and also mentally, by their marching forward, during the last weeks of the war and their victory. All shocking stories ever read about the behavior of these troops came to mind again. These men, fathers and brothers themselves, but in the triumph of victory forgetting all normal human behavior and education, acting like barbarians, looting the conquered territory and harvest their booty. So, a decision was necessary – as fast as possible!

My mother, courageous, decided that we wouldn't sit shaky in a corner and wait for the invasion – whatsoever!

She took the small wooden wagon out of the garage and ordered everyone to dress warm, take a wool blanket and to fill some big bottles with water. We put a round, big enamel-pot, matches, spoons, cups, knife and some food, as well as a bag with important or precious belongings on the cart.

Weeks ago, my mother, with the help of neighbors, buried two big wooden crates on our property, far in the back, under the protection of big fir trees, all silver items, porcelain, family memories, important papers, etc. were there – rather safely hidden – as we thought – and hoped!

Then we left the house and it impressed me deeply and I never forgot the moment when my mother didn't lock the house door with the key as usual, but left it open. What she must have felt in these moments. I only understood much later. To leave back all your possessions, things you had worked hard for and items close to your heart – you left not looking back – in a kind of stony condition. Forced – there was no other choice. Only to protect, to save your life and your children. Nothing else counted anymore, even not knowing, was this the right or wrong decision you made, so spontaneously.

Together with the four of us came another teenage girl from the neighborhood. And on the road we were. There was movement around – people on the go in both directions. No cars, nobody owned one anymore, they were all confiscated during the last weeks of the war.

We walked over one hour, to reach Wittenberg, changing the crew, now and then, who pulled the wagon. It was packed to the rim, but, no words of complaints or discussion. Forward, off, away – as far and fast as possible from the deadly danger of the arriving enemy. Our next destination was the large bridge in Wittenberg, which would lead us over the Elbe-River, to a region covered with dense forests.

It was early spring – not to cold – and we hoped we could hide there for some time, so the first and most feared encounter with the Russian soldiers could be avoided.

And, a thin, vague hope then, after some days, a kind of normal life would return and enable our little group to come out of our, hopefully, safe hiding spot and try, cautiously, to get back to the house. This was the plan. Would it work? Fear and hope in one kept us going. Shaky and trembling we pulled the cart forward.

The Elbe-River looked grey and slow; it was flooding. No ships or boats in sight. All seemed to be in a kind of breathless still stand. In the distance we heard shooting and some explosion.

Fear was hanging in the air over everything. People hurried by, nobody smiled, no greetings, no normal behavior. Angst – haunted in expectation of terror and danger – and you couldn't control the outcome! Everybody was involved in this approaching avalanche of danger and had to find the best way to survive it for himself!

When we arrived at the forest it was against evening. Between bushes, greenery and thicket, my mother selected a spot where we finally stopped.

We girls were sent out to bring branches and twigs to light a fire and also to find some stones, on which we could balance the cooking pot.

Nobody talked, we did the job, and when the hot water steamed out of the pot, my mother unwrapped a sausage-shaped item containing the pressed light green powder of "Knorr" green pea soup.

With a piece of bread for each one, this was our supper this night under the sky. Nobody was really hungry or showed appetite, not even my young brother, who was a good eater.

I always carried a little sketchbook with me. Now, in this kind of adventurous, romantic situation, I started to draw the gleaming fire between the four stones and the steaming pot on top amidst the surrounding of pure nature. This calmed me down in a way. And there was mother for protection! She fed you, she warmed you – you felt safer now – whatever would happen!

Almost through all our stay here we were wrapped in the blankets, waiting in a still stand of time. Waiting for the next unforeseeable happening.

In the air were continuous detonations, bullets, explosions coming closer now, with increasing sounds keeping us aware of our dangerous situation.

When it dawned, the next morning, there was less noise in the air. Was this a sign, that the Russians had stormed the city?

We kept bent down in our green thicket. There was some bread for breakfast but no fire anymore for a hot drink.

Only waiting, waiting in an unnatural peaceful surrounding.

We stayed another day and night in this kind of wilderness, when we heard from people, who passed by in the distance, that the Russians had taken Wittenberg and the surrounding villages. They had acted tremendously wild, taking or destroying everything they could lay hands on.

The people, shocked and full off fear, described soldiers whose arms were covered from the hands to the elbows with wristwatches, rings on each one of their 10 fingers. They raped women of all ages, not even respecting elder women, but humiliating even grandmothers in front of family and children.

After these vividly given descriptions, my mother decided to stay one night longer in the woods.

But then we packed our small possessions on the wagon and headed back to the house. Careful and slow, we used side paths and arrived after three hours at home. What a shock awaited us!

The house door wide open – the stairways and floors thickly covered with feathers! Obviously, the soldiers, angry to find nobody in the house, had slit all feather beds – these beloved possession of a German. And not only this. They had opened some of the glasses with preserved cherries they had found in the basement pantry, and had poured the blood red dark fruit all over the spread out feathers. What a mess! What a view! All drawers were hanging down in their anchored fastening, their contents wildly spread around.

On the search for precious items the invaders had acted like barbarians the same way I had read in so many stories about wartimes.

We didn't move, trembling we stood confronted with an unbelievable situation. Then, my young brother ran out, to check back on our little forest. He returned with good news. The two wooden crates, buried there, were still uncovered.

So, we escaped the first storm of danger and disaster, not knowing what to expect next.

We stood there, speechless, with wild beating hearts – tired, dirty, after so many days and nights living in the woods; devastated about what we saw in front of us, but in a way feeling lucky not to have been here, where all this unbelievable disaster happened.

The tears which started to run over our faces were not sad ones, but pouring out in a feeling of relief.

A relief about having survived a terrible threat unharmed so far.

Then, without uttering any word, we all came together, close, embracing each other, in a long, long hug while the tears were running over our faces.

Curtain rises on 'Footloose'

CDC production really rocks

The Cohasset Dramatic Club is presenting the smash Broadway hit "Footloose," from March 12 to 28 at Town Hall.

A large and talented cast will present this high-energy musical featuring many memorable hit songs from the 1984 hit film starring Kevin Bacon. In a nod to the Six Degrees of Kevin Bacon game, the cast – comprised of many veteran Boston area performers - has charted their own degrees of separation through their acting experiences. In addition, a portion of the proceeds from the "Messages to the Stars" fundraiser held at each "Footloose" performance will go to help relief efforts in Haiti through Kevin Bacon's SixDegrees.org.

Both the film and stage versions of "Footloose" feature an unmatched number of top 40 hits by the likes of Kenny Loggins, Eric Carmen and Sammy Hagar. The story presents a timeless tale of youthful rebellion and romance coming up against the establishment of one small town – as told through a powerhouse combination of exuberant dance, comedy and songs that will raise the roof off the old Town Hall.

The show is directed by Lisa Pratt, music directed by Mark Bono, choreographed by Caroline Maus and produced by Cecelia Chapman. "Footloose" performances are Fridays and Saturdays, March 12 to 27 at 7:30 p.m. and matinees on Sundays, March 14 to 28, at 2 p.m. Tickets are $18 for general admission and $14 for seniors, students and groups and can be purchased at Paperscapes, Cohasset Village, Buttonwood Books CJC Hwy, Cohasset or via reservation at 617-697-2115. Tickets may also be purchased the day of the show, one hour prior to the show at the box office. For more information, go to www.cohassetdramaticclub.org.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

FOR SCHOOL COMMITTEE CANDIDATES: Town boards have a lot of business to attend to. However, it is the public's business. Even as reporters we face challenges grasping all the issues and at times, boards do not relate well to audience members whether present at the meeting or on TV. What can you do to ensure the School Committee's business is more "user friendly" to the citizenry?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Jeanne Astino

As a "watcher" I concur that it is often difficult as a member of the audience – at School Committee meetings and viewing from home – to feel like a valued contributor. Attempts to limit audience participation over the past year have particularly troubled me. With that said, I have already reached out to members of the community, to participate in an interactive way through my website (www.astino.info).

Designed for two-way participation, the site includes my views on issues facing our schools and encourages people to let me know how they feel about these issues through a variety of "conduits" if you will. I have set up a separate email account for school-centered issues so nothing gets lost in the shuffle. My website contains a link to this email account. There is a general comment page linked to the site for those who want to give more specific feedback. I also want to assure everyone that I am only a phone call away should they desire more personal contact – not everyone loves the computer!

Through a series of surveys, I've been gathering information to be shared with the community and with the Committee once I am elected. Some of the information is already available – when you complete the survey, pie charts appear at the end and you can see results of the multiple choice questions immediately. There is currently a parent survey on the site, which is very user friendly. This week a second survey has been added, geared to student feedback. The more people who respond to the surveys, the more meaningful the feedback becomes; I appreciate how busy people are and value each response!

Once elected, I will continue this flow of open communication, and will welcome ideas for respectful and meaningful discourse.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Adrienne MacCarthy

About 15 years ago, I became actively involved in following the state of Cohasset Public Schools, when the old Joseph Osgood School (the town Library) was in much need of repair or renovation. I started attending School Committee meetings to hear more. It took a long time to figure out the ins and outs of the process. Attending any public/open meeting of a governmental board is part of everyone's right under law (M.G.L.30A). This way you can observe your government's business in action. Participation/speaking at the meeting is not guaranteed under the law, however, the Chair has the discretion to allow participation and usually establishes procedures for that participation to keep an orderly flow to the meeting. In addition, the School Committee has an area on its agenda for communication.

During my 6 years on the Committee, we have implemented additional ways to access the School Committee's business and communication has actually grown. Today, through the use of the our website, www.cohassetk12.org anyone can access the agenda prior to a School Committee meeting; access our District Goals, Strategic Plan, Minutes, Program of Studies, etc. and a host of other interesting and meaningful materials. I invite all to access the website, if you can, it is one way the School Committee is becoming more "user friendly"; however we are always looking to be current in new methods of communication.

In addition, School Committee meetings have been televised for several years now, however, it has been a constant battle to make sure the audio is clear so that citizens can actually hear what is being said; this is an area that continues to need improvement.

In addition, Committee members often attend School Council, Elder Affair, and etc. all in an effort to bring the business at hand to the citizenry.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Paul M. Ognibene

As a parent, candidate, and business owner, making the School Committee's work more "user friendly" and transparent is something I've given much consideration. Previously, I ran an online media company which enabled students, parents, teachers, and administrators to collaborate on school activities. One important thing we learned is that every constituent deserves access to the same information available to decision makers.

What happens in the meetings is often a result of how information has been shared beforehand. There are several measures we can take to make public information, such as contracts and performance evaluations, curriculum guidelines, and budget details, more accessible. I'll draw on my entrepreneurial experience and have three initial ideas:

1) Leverage use of social/digital media to share information and make decision-making more transparent.

Revamp the Web site; use Facebook and Twitter to distribute information; add online forums for questions/comments and to create an instant feedback loop.

2) Make meetings more engaging and interactive.

Open meetings with a summary of the agenda and allow for public comment at the beginning of the meeting so discussions can be tailored to address constituent concerns.

If you've watched our School Committee meetings on TV, you know the audio/video can be poor. We need to fix this once and for all.

3) Create a Cohasset Mariner "School Committee Corner"

Create a new, dedicated section of the newspaper to summarize important School Committee information.

The success of any school system depends on parent involvement. The School Committee needs to ensure channels are in place to allow parents to be involved and engaged. I'll do everything I can to capitalize on Cohasset's greatest assets to ensure our schools are the gold standard they deserve to be.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Linda Snowdale

The School Committee's business should be more user friendly to the citizens of Cohasset but also to the other town boards who work to benefit our community.

We cannot ignore the frustration and anger brewing among people who feel that they are being patronized when they are taking initiative to be involved. Cohasset's government cannot continue to be a house divided. It is paramount that the school committee encourages debate and participation among its members, school staff, students, town departments, and boards while including the town's people who want and deserve to be heard! After all, whom are we working for?

How does the school committee become more user friendly? It's about good relationships! Respect! Integrity! Patience! Accountability! Gratitude!

Public information has to be easily accessible and transparent to all in order to make informed decisions. On the website, the agenda should be posted well beforehand listing protocol for meeting behavior and reviewed at the beginning of meetings. Other postings should include important documents such as works in progress: school policy, Program of Study, a detailed budget, the superintendent's evaluation process and the contract using blogs and surveys to improve these items. A wish list can be included on the website and matched with volunteers available to meet needs. Encourage involvement with the channel 22 audience by asking for and considering responses to emails, phone-ins, and/or text messages before, during and after meetings. Improve relations between departments; start with a uniform accounting system. In these ways, the school committee can be more user friendly as it partners with all of our community for the sake of our children! Consensus can be built in a climate of trust and support leading to the creation of the best education for our students!

NEXT QUESTION

For School Committee candidates: We talked about the School Committee's role in communicating with the public and making their meetings accessible to all, but how about the School Committee's role in communicating with the school department? Where does the buck stop when questions arise about the direction of education or issues at the schools — with the Superintendent or the School Committee?

Please note: answers to this question will appear in two weeks. There will be no Question of the Week responses next week due to the fact that editor Mary Ford will be away. "Monitoring Question of the Week is tricky and there is great opportunity for error," Ford said. "Therefore, we will skip a week and these answers will appear in the March 26 issue."

Responses should be brief - no more than 300 words - and must be received by 5 p.m., Tuesday. Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Rotary offers Youth Leadership Awards

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"The Cohasset Rotary Club is delighted to offer scholarships for this incredible weekend of leadership training,."
— Rich Fitzpatrick, Cohasset Rotary Club

"If we worked on the assumption that what is accepted as true really is true, then there would be little hope for advance."
— Orville Wright, aeronautical designer, inventor

Leading is a skill. Not a gift. It must be learned and nurtured. Orville Wright grew up in a family that recognized that. A quote from him says he "grew up in an environment where there was always much encouragement to pursue intellectual interests; to investigate what aroused curiosity." Orville Wright was a leader and a Rotarian.

On May 21-23, the Boston South Shore District of Rotary International is hosting a Rotary Youth Leadership Awards Conference at Cape Cod Sea Camps, Brewster, Mass. The District includes Rotary Clubs from Quincy to Providence. For the first time, the Cohasset Rotary is pleased to be sponsoring two Cohasset students to be "leaders of tomorrow." The selected students will attend the conference and hopefully be inspired by this unique opportunity. Sponsorship includes: room, board, program fees.

"The Cohasset Rotary Club is delighted to offer scholarships for this incredible weekend of leadership training," says Rich Fitzpatrick, who along with Ron Goodwin, are the co-chairs of the Youth Leadership Committee. "A child in school may learn many things about many different subjects. However, the tools needed to identify and recognize what is needed to be a great leader is much different than day-to-day learning. This conference brings about the best of these kids."

Candidates must currently be in the 10th or 11th grade and must be Cohasset residents. The students will learn the fundamentals of leadership; ethics of positive leadership; importance of communication skills in effective leadership; problem-solving and conflict management; Rotary's purpose and service to the community; building self confidence and self-esteem; and the elements of community and global citizenship.

The feedback from the students who went last year was very positive and last year's students will be facilitators this year. In addition, two of last year's participants have been selected to go to the 2010 Rotary International Conference in Montreal.

"What we're looking for is potential leaders," says Goodwin. "Great leaders aren't born, they're encouraged and taught the necessary skills."

The Youth Leadership Awards are just one example of how the Cohasset Rotary Club gives back to the community. For more than 60 years the local club has contributed thousands of hours of community service and hundreds of thousands of dollars to support local and international humanitarian projects.

All eligible students are encouraged to apply. Visit www.cohassetrotary.org to download an application. All applications must be submitted by March 31. They should be mailed to The Cohasset Rotary Club, PO Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025. Questions can be emailed to rotarycohasset@gmail.com

Anthology a cappella quartet at First Parish

COURTESY PHOTO

Anthology is a professional quartet of enchanting women's voices.

Anthology, a professional women's vocal quartet, will perform American jazz and folk songs at First Parish Cohasset at 4 pm on Sunday, March 21. Admission will be $15 for adults and $12 for seniors and children.

Anthology is a professional quartet of enchanting women's voices. Their expansive variety of music is presented with the fine polish of classical training and an effervescent whimsy that rises from an enthusiasm for all styles of performance. Anthology's repertoire is a collection of classical choral music, hot jazz, Renaissance polyphony, world folk traditions, and music from the razor's edge of local Boston compositions. Anthology sings fresh new arrangements of old classics, discovering exciting new repertoire in children's songs, TV anthems, popular music, and anything that inspires them.

Anthology is Michelle Vachon, Vicky Reichert, Anney Gillotte, and Allegra Martin, who is also the music director of First Parish Cohasset.

'Means to a greater goal'

on the building of a new Senior Center.

"We want people to be aware we're underway," said Glenn Pratt, a member of the ad-hoc committee.

The concept for a new Senior Center is driven by a need for a new home and increased space to meet the growing needs of the senior population. The town's 20-year lease with the South Shore Community Center is up in 2011.

Elder Affairs director Coral Grande said her department was the "best bargain in town." Elder Affairs accounts for 0.6 percent, or $192,499, of the town's general operating budget.

"We're very proud of the services we offer," Grande said, naming advocacy, dispersing information and referring seniors and their families to appropriate services, transportation and nutrition as some of the strengths of the department.

"We really and truly need additional space to keep the programs we have and add additional programming," Grande said. "In a new Senior Center the sky's the limit, we can do anything we want to do."

Grande said in her 36 years of working with elders, she has seen the face of the senior change drastically. With those changes, the breadth and type of services offered by elder affairs has to change with them.

"We want to have programs to fit what people want," Grande said, adding her department's approach is to provide services for seniors and their families. "A senior is not an isolated person. They have ties to the community and they have families."

Currently, there are 1,726 seniors 60 and up in Cohasset (as of June 2009), which represents approximately 25 percent of the town's population. In 10 year's time seniors will represent 40 percent of the town's population – "that's a staggering figure," Grande said.

For her, the end goal is not to build a new Senior Center, but rather it is the means for a greater goal.

"Our goal is to take care of the seniors in our community by providing programs and services that meet their needs," Grande said.

"In a new Senior Center the sky's the limit, we can do anything we want to do."

— Coral Grande, Director of Elder Affairs

"There's a place for everybody (in this effort). I want to know everyone's ideas," Grande said.

Once a building committee is formed, the organizers envision several working groups being established for different aspects of the project – interior design, fundraising event planning, space planning, the list goes on.

A key part of the proposed project is the integration of multiple affordable housing units for seniors on the second floor. The housing component opens the project up to Community Preservation Fund money, would provide a steady stream of revenue for the building and give the location 24/7 security, said Joe Nedrow, chair of the Council on Elder Affairs.

Marita Carpenter, president of the Social Service League of Cohasset, said her organization and Cohasset Elder Affairs are "good partners and friends" in this effort. After a long struggle, the Social Service League received permission to donate $1 million to the building of a new Senior Center. The money comes from the Mary Hooper Trust Fund of which the League is the trustee. In her will Mary Hooper put aside $25,000 to build an old age home in Cohasset.

"I hope all of you help us make our dream and Mary Hooper's dream come true," Carpenter said.

Donations to the building of a new Senior Center can be made in one of two ways. First, through the non-profit Friends of Elder Affairs at 3 North Main St., Cohasset, which is tax deductible. Second, a donation can be made directly to the Town of Cohasset treasurer specifying the check is for the Senior Center Building Fund.

Making progress: Senior Center timeline at a glance

What's been accomplished?

✔ Pledge of $1-million donation from the Mary Hooper Trust from the Social Service League.

✔ Land swap agreement and Planning Board approval for Swim Center parcel.

✔ Preliminary engineering completed to ensure site is viable.

What's next?

The big items on the docket for the next few months.

☛ Use of private donations to do more complete site engineering – soil testing, surveying, etc.
☛ The formation of a Senior Center Building Committee.
☛ Talks with Sewer Commission on tie-in with town sewer system.
☛ Development of concrete cost estimates.
☛ Establish financing plan.
☛ The beginning of a capital campaign.
☛ The identification of what is needed space-wise in the new building.
☛ The creation of a business plan.

What's down the line?

➤ Fall 2010: Present business plan to Special Town Meeting and release of $220,000 in CPC funding.
➤ Spring 2011: Seek funding from Town Meeting (if necessary.)
➤ Summer 2011: Selection of design/architect for plan development, bid project construction, and permitting.
➤ Fall 2011: Groundbreaking on building construction.
➤ Fall 2012: Building completed, dedication, grand opening.

Special Town Meeting on water issues planned

(loss of $335,000); and the rainiest summer in five years left many not using their sprinkler system (expected water user revenue is off $500,000).

"We recognized the problem after reading the meters in November," Pratt said. At that point, the Water Commission stopped all ongoing projects and scaled back to only necessary spending.

The same revenue shortfalls that are creating the deficit in the current year's budget will affect next year's budget as well. Pratt said they are basing next year's water usage numbers on this year's to give a conservative baseline, and can no longer count on Linden Ponds or Avalon to pad their budget.

To compound the water department's financial issues is the vast amount of debt the department has taken on over the past 15 years. Each allocation was approved by Town Meeting and now the biggest years for repayment are upon the town.

In fiscal 2010, debt service made up 54 percent ($2.695 million) of the budget. In fiscal 2011, debt service is expected to consume 63.5 percent, approximately ($2.97 million) of the total water department budget.

"We have a very difficult problem ahead of us. It's a community problem now. There's no way we can see how to make our debt go away," Pratt said.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley called the situation with the water department an "immediate crisis," but one that needed to be dealt with thoughtfully and thoroughly.

Restoring confidence

One of the key initiatives that needs to be addressed is restoring public confidence in the town's water quality and the management of the department. Quigley said without addressing the issue of how people view the water, it is very unlikely any water rate increase would pass.

"Plain and simple, it's a mess. There are a lot of things that seem like we have a gun to our head. We need time (to look at the problems)," Quigley said.

Selectmen Ted Carr questioned whether the drop in water usage over the past year could also be tied to consumer confidence in the product.

Pratt said he felt making some of the capital improvements requested would help restore confidence in the water, particularly the phosphate program, which will address the discolored water plaguing the system.

"We need to present a solid plan for people to buy into. We need some time to build some confidence. I don't think doing something to do something is the right thing to do," Quigley said.

However, waiting to make a decision, particularly on the water rate increase, would dig the department deeper in the hole, Pratt said. If the water rate increase request does not go forward at Town Meeting, it means another billing cycle at the same rates, possibly deepening the water department's deficit.

Selectman Ralph Dormitzer also questioned the reliance on the multi-tier water rate system to increase revenue. The tiers are meant to charge more to the biggest water users. Dormitzer said the system may be giving water users a disincentive to use more water.

"(It could be what is) killing you on the revenue side," Dormitzer said, adding he believed people would use more water if they knew they would still pay a reasonable price for water and not be hit an overage.

Dormitzer said a revenue breakdown between tier 1 and tier 2 was not available, but that that was his instinct. He also requested the town look into a "real top-to-bottom audit" of the water department.

Dormitzer said he also had concerns about the methods being used to address the water department's operational problems.

"Everything compounds to something else…nothing we do seems to (address the issues), it either doesn't solve the problem or it causes another," Dormitzer said.

Voices from the audience

"A lot of people don't have confidence in the water quality, not just in the color, but if you are drinking it or cooking with it, what you are putting in your body and your kids' bodies…I think many would be willing to spend more money if we knew we were getting not only clear water, but also healthy water."

– Erin O'Duggan, Highland Court

"If we lose three months, we're going to pay for it. Ultimately it's coming out of my checkbook through my water bill or my tax bill."

– Kathy Devaney, Spring St.

"Even if the quality changed overnight, I think still the consumer does not have the confidence."

–Maria Osborne, Spring St.

Capital projects sidelined

The Water Commission pulled its long-talked about $5 million plant retrofit capital request off the table, but they said they still need funding for several other projects. The details are still preliminary and no estimates have been given to Capital Budget Committee or the Board of Selectmen.

The ballpark figure given for the four projects at last week's Capital Budget Committee meeting was close to $1 million.

It seemed to the consensus of the Board of Selectmen to put off the capital requests until a Special Town Meeting can be held sometime in June, along with the other water department-related articles.

Below are the projects the water commission says are needed as soon as possible:

- First, funding is needed to implement a "phosphate program" that is intended to improve the issues of discolored water primarily related to manganese. Water Commissioner John McNabb said the phosphate program was essential to control lead emissions in the water.
- Second, a new scheme is needed for the sludge lagoons, which hold the waste products of the treatment process. The removal of the sludge is costing the department about $200,000 annually, a new system would pay for itself in a couple of years with the savings on the operating side of the budget, Pratt said.
- Third, the presence of "milfoil," an invasive plant species in Aaron River Reservoir affecting about three-quarters of an acre, needs to be eradicated. Pratt said the department made an attempt at eradication last year, but the process did not clean up the entire area.
- Lastly, there are items left over from the water department portion of the Little Harbor project that need to be paid for in the coming year. Pratt named street paving and unexpected pipe replacements as two of the outstanding items. There is no funding left from the previous water department appropriation for the project, which included the replacement of three miles of water main in the Little Harbor district while the streets were dug up for the sewer expansion project.

'Water Planning Group' formed

In order to figure out how to move forward with the Water Department, the Board of Selectmen voted to form a committee to look at the financial problems facing the enterprise fund and develop workable solutions for the short- and long-term.

"It's a special task force to come up with a global solution for the water problems," said Selectmen Chairman Paul Carlson said Monday night. The group will make a recommendation to the Special Town Meeting to be scheduled in June (see related story).

The group was formulated after the Budget Planning Group, which has been meeting to discuss short- and long-term financial planning for the town.

The group will be comprised of two Selectmen (Fred Koed, a former water commissioner, and Carlson have signed on), two Advisory Committee members, two Capital Budget Committee members, two Water Commissioners and two at-large citizen members. Town Manager Bill Griffin and Finance Director Michael Buckley will serve as staff resources for the board as well.

"It will be high pressure, a lot of hard work and a pretty short deadline," Carlson said. Carlson emphasized the group would have posted meetings and would welcome public input.

If a resident is interested in serving on the water planning group, send a letter/e-mail of interest to the Town Manager's office at Town Hall (wgriffin@townofcohasset.org). Letters must be received by Monday, March 15 at 5p.m.

On the agenda: CHS program of studies

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Want to know what's happening with the high school's program of studies next year? Or how the School Committee evaluates the Superintendent of Schools?

If the answer is yes, plan to be at or tune in to this coming Wednesday's School Committee meeting. Both topics are on the March 17 meeting agenda.

Middle-High School Principal Joel Antolini will present to the committee the 2010-2011 program of studies, which lays out the courses available for students in grade 9 to 12 next fall. New courses and any changes to the curriculum will be unveiled.

The presentation of the program of studies ties in to the on-going discussion in the community on "leveling" courses at the high school, a tact that would combine college prep and honors levels in the same classroom. This type of classroom is already in some courses, mainly electives, according to last year's program of studies.

Some parents are worried about this type of model in more classrooms and the impact it could have on both sets of students and their ability to reach his/her potential.

School Committee member Helene Lieb said any major policy change in the direction of the high school would need to be approved by the School Committee.

"Nothing can be shoved down the throats of the people of Cohasset or the faculty," said Lieb. "There is no way after the research I've done that there will be any major change for next year."

School officials said copies of the program of studies would be available for audience members to follow along at the meeting. The School Committee annually approves the program of studies for the high school.

In addition, School Committee Chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said members of the community have expressed a need to understand the process surrounding the superintendent's evaluation and annual review.

In e-mails sent to MacCarthy on which the Mariner was copied indicate there is some concern from a group of parents that the Superintendent of School's contract was renewed two months before her annual review was completed.

In her response to those parents, MacCarthy said it would be best to have the topic discussed in an open session with the entire School Committee.

At the March 3 School Committee meeting MacCarthy said past evaluation process would discussed as well as the new regulations on the evaluations of superintendents effective July 1.

Also on Wednesday's agenda is a discussion and possible vote on whether to approve Cohasset High's involvement in a regional sailing team.

Helping local families faced with cancer

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

For nearly a decade Adrian Morris and his friends, colleagues and salon guests have been gathering together to celebrate their good friend, Karen Petrillo. This year's celebration, co-sponsored by Pastene, is on Saturday, March 13th from 7 to 11 p.m. at the River Club in Scituate. As was the case last year, there no tickets required and no fee to attend. All who walk through the door are encouraged to give what they can, and to participate in the live and silent auctions, that take place throughout the night. There will also be a terrific fashion show by Ports & Co., Cohasset; along with great food, drinks and dancing.

Petrillo will live forever in the hearts of all who knew her. This event, held in her memory, grows bigger in dollars and in spirit every year. This year Morris is proud to announce that Comedian Patty Ross will one of the evening's highlights. Patty is one of the most sought after personalities on the national comedy scene. She has a unique persona and bigger than life stage presence and has attracted audiences, corporations and entertainment industry people across the country.

Proceeds from the event benefit Learn Live Love Cancer Outreach Organization, a charity founded by Rosie Lonborg (wife of former Red Sox player, Jim Lonborg) and two other local women, Pam Ahl and Amy Webber. Their mission is to provide confidential financial assistance to women and families in New England communities who are affected by a diagnosis of cancer. Learn Live Love doesn't have any "red tape." It's a grass roots organization that provides help, almost immediately, to those in need. It's an organization that personifies who Karen Petrillo was as a person. According to Morris, Karen would be proud that funds raised in her name go to his local group. Karen died just five days after the first event, she was 47 years old.

The goal of this event is to have fun. Please join the celebration on Saturday, March 13th at 7 p.m. at the River Club on Border Street in Scituate. Call LemonLime Aveda Lifestyle Salon for more info. at 781-383-6663.

New approach offered to CSCR interns

The Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research announces a new approach to its program offering students a position as a research intern.

The CSCR internship program is designed to provide students with extended opportunities to log more than 100 hours of research experience that involves training, field work, lab work, data analysis, report writing and public education and outreach. It is designed to meet the needs of students who want to be involved in a research project from start to finish, and who want to be a published author of a scientific report. Interns begin project orientation in late March or early April, train through the spring, apply research skills during the summer, and work through the fall months to produce and publish a scientific paper "that can meet the rigors of professional peer review." This paper is then shared with all interested local, state and federal agencies, as well as published on the CSCR website.

Interns do not pay any tuition fees; in fact, interns with significant experience may be offered a chance to earn a stipend sometime during a multi-year career with CSCR.

Student interns who maximize these opportunities by exceeding 100 hours throughout the year increase their science education by approximately two additional classes. Potentially, a student who joins the program in the eighth grade has the chance to increase his or her science education by an additional 10 courses.

Additional details and an application on the CSCR website at www.ccscr.org.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Astino coffees, website

A candidate coffee was held by Trish Morse on Thursday, March 11. Jeanne Astino appreciated the opportunity to meet with old and new friends interested in learning more about her views regarding the schools. She looks forward to meeting with others in the coming weeks prior to the election on April 10th!

On Friday evening, March 19, Kevin and Lisa Dooley will host "Cocktails with the Candidate" in support of Astino's candidacy for School Committee on Friday evening, March 19. Astino looks forward to discussing the many issues currently facing the schools at this event.

Something new has been added. Check out Astino's website for the second in a series of surveys for Cohasset residents; this next survey looks for information from students in Cohasset. These surveys have been developed to get feedback on the schools and educational experience. Astino urges each Cohasset resident to get involved by taking one or all of the surveys on her website at www.astino.info and thanks all who participate.

Ognibene website, kick-off

School Committee candidate, Paul M. Ognibene, launched his campaign website this week at www.VoteForPaulO.com. In addition, Ognibene and his wife, Jen, will be will be hosting a campaign kick-off event at their home on 44 Beach Street this Sunday, March 14, from 5 to 7 p.m.

Celebrate the life and work of Fran Hagerty

Cohasset Maritime Institute and the Cohasset Historical Society announce the exhibit and event, "Fran Hagerty, The Man, His Life, His Work" on Saturday, March 13 at 7p.m.

A major feature of the exhibit is donated archival films of Hagerty built boats; 110's sailing in Boston Harbor, the Charles River off MIT and Cohasset Harbor; ice boating, Hagerty Rowing Shells being raced and more. The films had never been viewed due to their fragile condition and age.

CMI and CHS coordinated in having the films professionally transferred to a digital format. Commenting on the content, Michael Dick of CMI stated,

Space is limited to 100 guests at the March 13 event, which begins at 7p.m. Tickets are available through the Historical Society ($10 for historical society or CMI member, $15 for non-members). Call 781-383-1434 or send an e-mail to cohassethistory@yahoo.com to reserve a spot.

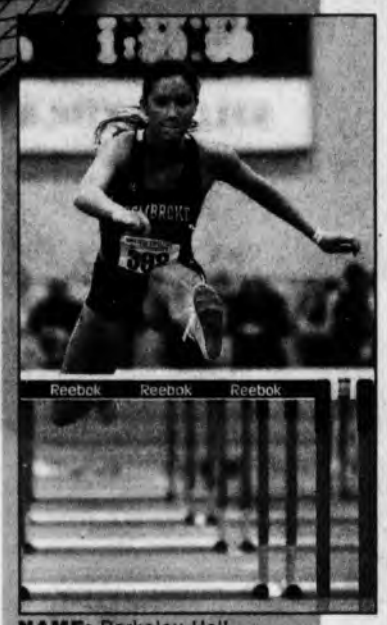
CNC SUPER TEAM



Girls Track

NAME: Emily Clark
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Senior
STATS: Clark is Ms. Versatile for the Lady Wildcats, excelling in many events. She won the MSTCA Girls Pentathlon championship last week, scoring a school-record 8,159 points. Clark outpaced 108 other competitors by excelling in the 55-meter hurdles (8.97 seconds), high jump (4 feet 11 3/4 inches), long jump (a school-record 16-41/4), shot put (29-1) and 800 meters (2:35.38).

NAME: Becky Stoyle
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Stoyle flew around the track this winter in the 300. She had the fastest time in the league this year (41.28 seconds), which was a personal best and school record. She also placed second at the Division 3 State Championships.

NAME: Berkeley Hall
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Senior
STATS: In just her first season of indoor track, Hall shined in a number of events, but individually, her strongest event was the 55-meter hurdles. She had the fastest time in the Patriot League this winter (a personal-best and school record 8.41 seconds) and she finished second in Division 3, fourth at All-States, and fifth at the New England Championships in the event.

NAME: Molly O'Dea
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior
STATS: If she was running the 55-dash on the day of any particular event, you could have just penciled in the word winner. O'Dea won the Patriot League championship, the Div. 3 State Championship and the All-State Championship this season, and finished third in the New England championships with a 7.20 time. In the All-State meet she ran a 7.19. O'Dea also runs the 4x200 relay as the anchor of a team that made it to the All-State meet.

NAME: Molly Barker
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Freshman
STATS: She ran a surprising 11:42.41 in the 2 mile for 14th place overall. Barker had to deal with an incredibly fast early pace, mostly due to the unlikely placing of Div. 2 cross-country champion Jenna Davidner of Easton in her heat. Barker fought hard in the second half of the race, running by several athletes en route to her eventual place.

NAME: Mary Scanlan
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Scanlan battled back from injury this year to make quite an impact in the 600 meters. She had the fastest time in the league this year, a personal-best 1:36.02, finished in third place at the Division 3 State Championships and eighth at the All-State Championships. Then, Scanlan became the first-ever Pembroke High School athlete to win a medal at the New England Championships, where she took fifth place. She also broke the school record twice.

NAME: Katie Sheehan
SCHOOL: Scituate
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Sheehan made it to the All-State Championships in the 1,000, despite the fact that she just started running the event toward the end of the season. Earlier in the year she had been running and winning the mile, but made the switch from the mile in January with the though that she had the best chance of success at the elite level in the 1,000. She ran a personal best 3:06.80 in the Div. 3 State Championships.

NAME: Nicole Gilbert
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Gilbert won the Div. 4 State Championship in the long jump with a 17-02.50 jump, and continued to improve from there, jumping 17-6.25 in the All-State meet. She also finished seventh in the 55 hurdles at the Div. 4 State Championships.

WEYMOUTH 4X800 TEAM

NAMES: Bridget Jaklitsch, Julie Tevenan, Jenn Kimball, Jill Corcoran
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADES: Sophomore, sophomore, freshman, junior
STATS: This 4x800 foursome finished third in the Div. 1 Championships with a 9:36.60. "Jill really pulled out a fantastic anchor split," said Miller. When Corcoran took the baton, Weymouth was in fifth place. Her split of 2:18.3 was the fastest she's ever run indoors, and she came within a hair of catching Margo Gillis of Newton North for second.

WEYMOUTH 4X400 TEAM

NAMES: Emily Clark, Felicia Hopkins,Gabi Toro-McCue, Melissa Darling
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADES: Senior, senior, freshman, sophomore
STATS: The final event of the All State Meet summed up the resilience of this foursome. Clark opened with a 63.5 split, slowed considerably by a botched handoff but Hopkins recovered, ran 62.9, and handed off in fourth place in the heat. Toro-McCue, one of the steadiest and sharpest rookies the squad has ever seen, came through in 62.0, giving way to Darling, who ran a 60.7, getting Weymouth into third place in the heat, and ninth overall, running a time of 4:09.58.

PEMBROKE 4X200 TEAM

NAMES: Berkeley Hall, Becky Stoyle, Teresa Fatemi, Michelle Coate
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADES: Senior, junior, senior, junior
STATS: This 4x200 foursome posted the best time in the Patriot League this year with a time that not only was a personal best but also a school record (1:46.11). The girls won the Division 3 State Championships, where they came 0.01 seconds off the meet record and finished fourth at the All-State Championships.

MARSHFIELD 4X200 TEAM

NAMES: Jill Clapp, Courtney Ternullo, Julie McCauley, Meg Landry
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADES: Freshman, sophomore, senior, junior
STATS: The Atlantic Coast League's top 4x200 relay team, these Marshfield girls posted a league best and personal record 1:46.92 during the season. And then, after finishing third at the Division 2 State Championships and sixth at All-States, the girls set a personal best at New England's, running 1:46.62 to take eighth place and become the first Marshfield girls relay team to compete at the New England Championships in seven years.

NAME: Jill Corcoran
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Her 5:04.28 mile at the All-State Championships was a personal best and good enough for fourth place. She trailed only three sub-5:00 efforts, those of Newton South's 1-2 punch of Kathy O'Keefe and Melanie Fineman, and Beverly's Corcoran's season, unlike the rest of the team, will continue at the New England Championships this Friday, where she hopes to add a New England championship to her resume.

Perfection

The quest for a title comes full circle

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

When writing the epic novel, the basics of a classic are a time-honored tradition.

There's the journey.

Whether it's an all powerful ring, the fall of an empire or finding love, the story is in the journey.

Make new friends, make new enemies, conquer an enemy or turn them into a friend.

Battle for redemption.

Complete the quest.

That was the story for the Cohasset girls basketball team in the 2009-2010 campaign.

The Skippers' journey began last season with a heartbreaking loss and ended with a joyous victory celebrating a Division 4 State Championship and perfection on the Garden parquet one year later with a 50-40 win over a scrappy 16th seeded Manchester-Essex (13-13) on Tuesday night.

Let's set the scene:

A year ago, the Skippers suffered a heartbreaking loss to Millis in the Div. 4 Sectional Finals at Braintree High School.

There were tears and a real sense of loss for a Cohasset team that had won the state title the previous year and had finished the regular season with a 19-1 record.

That loss, that feeling was something the seniors on this year's squad didn't want to experience again.

Thus the quest for perfection.

Along the way, the Skippers vanquished 25 foes, including the one that started the quest in the first place.

That happened last week when Cohasset vanquished Millis 54-42 in the Sectional Semifinal round at Bridgewater-Raynham High School.

There was a time, early in the season when players or coaches weren't talking about last year.

That was irrelevant. This was a new season. Take it one game at a time.

That changed during the season.

As they got closer to the prize, Cohasset players began to admit there was a little more than just wanting to win for the sake of winning.

"Last year we were so close (to returning to the title game)," said Cohasset senior guard Meredith Kelly, who led the Skippers with 19 points, including 15 in the first half, where she outscored the challengers 15-14. "The fact that we lost made us want it so much more. We wanted it. We weren't going to leave it out there."

When the Hornets and their star guard Lizzy Ball (who were the overtime victims to Cohasset two years ago – nice twist there) clamped down on Kelly in the second half, Tori Lehr, another Skipper senior, took over.

Lehr finished the game with 11 points, all in the second half. She also chipped in a game-high 17 rebounds.

Lehr admitted the same motivation.

"That gave us the drive," she admitted with a smile. "Nobody likes to end with a loss. If you're in the tournament and don't win, you end with a loss. Being able to do this again is ridiculous. We were so happy to come back. I'm so proud of this team. We really didn't like the feeling of losing, that feeling in your gut. We pushed ourselves to do our best."

It wasn't just games.

This squad was focused on a title every moment they were on the floor, practice or games.

"We came to practice every day, worked hard and focused on working hard," Lehr said for more than the first time this season. "We worked hard for two hours. We focused on one game at a time. The next game was always the most important."

Throughout the season, LeVangie echoed the sentiment, calling this group the most focused and hardest working team he's had.

The tunnel-vision worked.

Yes, Cohasset knew there was a ring at the end, a prize under the cereal, a kingdom to be won, but they prioritized and won the battles and the war.

They finished their quest on their own terms and when their book is written it needs only one word for a name – Perfect.

QUOTES OF NOTE

"I got everybody in there, but the seniors really wanted to be in at the final buzzer … It won't matter. Thirty years from now every one of them will have scored 25 points and had 15 rebounds when they played on the Garden floor."

Cohasset coach John LeVangie on getting everyone into the championship game.

"We didn't like the feeling of losing, that feeling in your gut … We pushed ourselves to do our best."

Senior, Tori Lehr on last year's Sectional Final loss to Millis.

"We're using last year as motivation. We never want to feel like that again."

Senior, Meredith Kelly after beating Millis in the sectional semifinal.

"There are no real words I can say … We're just thrilled to go back."

Lehr about beating Nantucket to secure the return trip to the Garden.

"Playing at the Garden is amazing. Two years ago it was the greatest experience even. I can't wait to do it again. It's just a cool court to play on."

Senior, Samantha Crough on playing at the Garden.

"These games are fun. The crowd is cheering every basket. It's fun."

Crough on the atmosphere of the playoffs.

"They know how to win. We came out really strong at the beginning and had them rattled, but they did what they had to do. They're tall at every position. They're a phenomenal team."

Manchester-Essex coach Lauren DuBois on Cohasset.

"It helped that five or six of us played here two years ago and they only had two returning players. I think we were more comfortable."

Kelly about Cohasset's previous experience at the Garden.

Cohasset Tennis Club High School Tournament

Cohasset and Hingham Boys and Girls tennis teams got of to an early start with a warm up tournament held by Linda Karoff last weekend at the Cohasset Tennis Club.

The girls division was very evenly matched in the ten team round robin format.

The strong team of Maddie Lund and Nichole Lund came in 1st notched 29 games. They edged Holly Johnson and Julia Krumholtz with a total of 27 games. These four Hingham gals will all compete on the Hingham girls varsity this year.

Cohasset's Hannah Rawson and Meredith Spofford played very well narrowly missed on a trophy posting 26 games and placing third. Hannah and Meredith will both be challenging for singles positions on the Cohasset girl's squad this year under Gigi Meehan and Kathy Previtt.

Juniors Robbie Hill and Will Choi defeated Senior Captain Mike Filby and Junior Travers Craven 8-6 in a third set tiebreaker. Flashes of brilliance and a little rust colored this hard hitting match.

Thanks to Professional Linda Karoff and owner Bud Schultz for hosting this event.

Cohasset Swim and Dive team news

The Cohasset Swim and Dive Team 2010 is getting ready for registrations and wants to share some news with you all. The Cohasset Swim and Dive Team 2010 season registration for returning athletes will be held on Saturday May 1 from 8-11a.m. at the Recreation Center ("Teen Garage").

The Cohasset Swim and Dive Team will be holding try-outs for the 2010 season sometime within the last weeks of the school calendar. Dates and times will be posted soon. For all seniors who are interested in applying for the Cohasset Swim Team Scholarship, please obtain an application in the High School Guidance office. Qualifications include at least five years of swimming for the Cohasset Swim Team. Deadline for the application is April 14. Coaches are needed. The Cohasset Swim and Dive Team is seeking highly motivated, responsible individuals for the Swim Team Head Coaching and Assistant Coach positions. Responsibilities include: directing the swimmers during team practices and meets, supervising assistant coaching responsibilities as well general organization of the team. In addition, the Dive Team is seeking qualified candidates for Head Coach and Assistant Coach positions. Responsibilities include: directing the divers during team practices and meets as well as team coordination. Interested individuals should address a letter of intent to the CSDT Steering committee and include their qualifications by April 1st to: kimspicer@comcast.net

Mr. Skipper contests include: at left, Sean MacCarthy; bottom of pyramid, Kevin O'Connell, Nick Lieberman, and Ian Porter; middle or pyramid, James Earle and Billy Mack; and top, Bob Nahill. The annual pageant gets under way at 7 p.m. tonight in the high school auditorium. Tickets are $10.

Basketball, drama kids and Mr. Skipper!

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

Seven studs of Cohasset High School will be competing for the honorable and cherished yellow slicker while making fools of themselves and creating laughter for those in attendance.

Oh, hi. I didn't see you there because I was so busy this week. Busy with awesomeness. I wasn't the only one in the school who was "busy with awesomeness", as this week defined fun filled.

Okay…so maybe Monday was just your average day. Technically that means the weak wasn't literally "fun filled", but it was pretty close to being completely full. With that being said, let's push that fast forward button to get to the good stuff. Aaaakdsjsdjdspfgk (that's the noise something makes when it is fast forwarded).

Tuesday was a half-day for the vast majority of the school as nearly everyone piled into their cars or the 10 super fan buses to get to the Division 4 Girls Basketball State Championship Game. If you have been living under a rock, then I am pleased to be the first person to tell you that the girls won in a convincing fashion. The final was 50-40 against the Manchester Essex Hornets. Their sting (pun intended) was not felt by the lady Skippers who got their 25th win to finish undefeated. Oh, and lets congratulate the 1,000 fans who supported the Skippers and demoralized the Hornets. Man that was a fun game.

Temporary format change: This next paragraph is also about something on Tuesday, not Wednesday. Yeah, I am glad to see you reading on your toes. Anywho, after all of the basketball stuff, the focus (of a little less than 50 people) turned to the auditorium where Check, Please was performed for the town. The play went fantastically well and prepped the actors for their semi-final performance on Saturday in Weston. Thanks for those that came out to support us. For those that didn't…well you missed out. Sorry!

Now we are onto Wednesday. You know what I smelt on Wednesday? I smelt a half-day. Always fun and always something different. You know what else I smelt on Wednesday? Art. No, I wasn't huffing paint; I smelled the art made by Cohasset youth of all ages in the annual Eat Your Art contest. The creative juices and frosting were flowing all over the place. Personally, my favorite is when someone makes something out of raw cookie dough, and then you eat the cookie dough. For the record, raw cookie dough is my second favorite food. Right behind chicken parm, and right above Twizzlers. If only someone made some art using the combination of the three…I guess I will just have to wait till heaven to get that.

Thursday…hmm…Aaaakdsjsd jdspfgk…

Friday (man I love that fast forward button) is the day of, drum roll please, MR. SKIPPER. Seven studs of Cohasset High School will be competing for the honorable and cherished yellow slicker while making fools of themselves and creating laughter for those in attendance. Please, go. You won't regret it. Even if you do end up regretting it, which is incredibly unlikely, then at least you will have the satisfaction of helping the Senior class get a sweet prom. Support the Seniors. Support the contestants. And most importantly, support your favorite newspaper article writer, Sean MacCarthy. That is correct, I will be partaking in this years Mr. Skipper contest (no need to contain your enthusiasm). And if that isn't enough to persuade you, there will be a raffle at the end of the night with some great prize possibilities.

That's all I got for you all tonight. I have to go rest up and practice for my Mr. Skipper talent, which is phenomenally hilarious by the way. See you on Friday night, because I know you would never do anything to hurt/disappoint your favorite writer. If you do I quit. Okay, no I won't, but I will be sad and no one wants that, right? Right? Great. See you there then.

Sean MacCarthy wants YOU to buy a ticket to Mr. Skipper.

Hundreds of plungers head to the surf for the annual Passion Plunge at Nantasket Beach to benefit the Special Olympics of Massachusetts.

"Mad dash out of the surf!" (In forefront: Jay Nothnagle a 12-sport special olympics athlete; to the left of him is Cohasset Police Chief Mark DeLuca).

Passion Plunge for Special Olympics!

More than 800 brave people plunged into the Atlantic Ocean (38 degrees!) on Saturday March 6 at Nantasket Beach and Revere Beach to raise funds for Special Olympics Massachusetts. The day began with the fun Costume Parade with outfits ranging from Magicians to Pirates, March Lions & Lambs, and Mullets, with 1,000 spectators enjoying the event in warm air and sunshine.

Then followed the serious business of dashing into the icy surf! 500 Nantasket Plungers helped to raise some $400,000 for Special Olympics. (All survived!)

As Special Olympics does not charge athletes or their families to participate, these funds are vitally important to support the year round training and 130 competitions in 27 sports for 12,000 athletes aged 2 to 78 in Massachusetts. Even with the help of 13,000 volunteers, it costs almost $500 a year for each athlete!

Again, a sincere "thank you" to all who pledged and supported this wonderful organization that builds self-confidence, pride, and healthy athletes!

If you haven't yet had a chance, please support our athletes with a pledge by going on-line at "www.PassionPlunge.org", our secure site to make a donation.

"SSHARC's Team" included Cohasset's Graham Sida and other lions.

"March Lion & Lamb" - Nick (lamb) & Graham Sida (lion) both from Cohasset and members of the SSHARCs Team.

Police association fund drive under way

Cohasset Police Association (CPA) is conducting its annual fundraiser. The Association will be mailing letters to every Cohasset home asking for donations to help support local causes and charities; 100 percent of the donations will go to the CPA, which chose not to use a professional fundraising company that makes telephone calls.

Groups and organizations, the CPA has donated to over the past year include: Cohasset Little League, Cohasset Food Pantry, Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, South Shore Community Center, South Shore Art Center, Jingle Bell Walk, Holiday Stroll, Cohasset Public Schools (Law Classes), Cohasset Police Motorcycle Unit and Cohasset Police Honor Guard.

The CPA also provides two scholarships annually for Cohasset High School seniors.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

TEN REASONS WHY YOUR CHILD NEEDS A SUMMER CAMP EXPERIENCE
By Bette Bussel – Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

There's no doubt that summer camp is fun. Kids get to sing silly songs, play funny games, swim in lakes, and tell spooky stories around a campfire; this is the image of camp that has been captured and memorialized in films, books, and television programs. But there's much more to camp than just a good time. For the last century and a half, experiential education in summer camp settings has played an integral role in children's overall development – cognitive, physical, and social-emotional. Here are ten reasons why your child shouldn't miss out on the unique growth experience that awaits this summer at camp:

1. Development of critical-thinking and leadership skills. Camp provides the perfect environment for your child to learn and practice individual and group decision-making, how to socialize and navigate their interactions with others, and how to resolve conflict and other issues that may arise when living and working together closely.
2. Increased physical activity – from canoeing and hiking to soccer and tag, an on-going workout is a natural part of the day.
3. Direct experiences in nature and living much more closely to the Earth – being outside is proven to reduce stress levels, improve mood, and simultaneously stimulate all of a child's senses.
4. Lasting intergenerational and diverse relationships – from peers to counselors, summer camp gives your child an opportunity to meet new people from a variety of age groups, providing them with positive role models and new friends.
5. Safety away from home – at camp your child is supervised by trained professionals who ensure their safety while inspiring them to try new things.
6. Greater self-reliance, self-sufficiency, & self-confidence – in addition to learning how to take responsibility for themselves, their space, and their belongings, campers often discover strengths that they never knew existed through various activities and experiences. Being at camp is independence boosting.
7. Reduced summer learning loss – studies have shown that during summer vacation, students can lose the equivalent of up to three months of what they've learned during the school year. Camp programming keeps a child's brain active, alert, and acquiring knowledge and skills.
8. Positive risk-taking – camp provides a safe, wholesome, judgment-free environment for your child to step out of their own comfort zone to take physical and emotional risks that they never would have under other circumstances.
9. A strong sense of community – group living and team experiences teach children how to work together for a common goal and to find their place and voice within a group.
10. Memories that will last a lifetime – when the summer ends, camp memories live on in children's hearts and minds.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
MARCH 22, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A pesky health problem should clear up soon. Meanwhile, travel — both for personal as well as for business reasons — is strong in the Aries aspect this week, and well into the next.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Look for Bovines to be on the move this week, whether it's traveling for fun or for business. Other "moves" include workplace adjustments and, for some, relationship changes.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Geminis who have just gone through a hectic period involving job and/or family matters might want to take some well-earned time out to relax and restore those drained energy levels.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A romantic situation seems to have stalled, just when the Moon Child was expecting it to go forward. Could that be a bad case of miscommunication going on. Talk it over openly and honestly.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Showing a genuine interest in something that's important to a friend, family member or colleague could open a communication line that had been pretty much shut down for a while.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Making a potentially life-changing decision takes as much knowledge as you can gather, plus determination and patience. Take your time working it out. Don't let anyone rush you.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You should be back on schedule and heading in the right direction after clearing up a misunderstanding. But there could still be some setbacks. If so, correct them immediately.

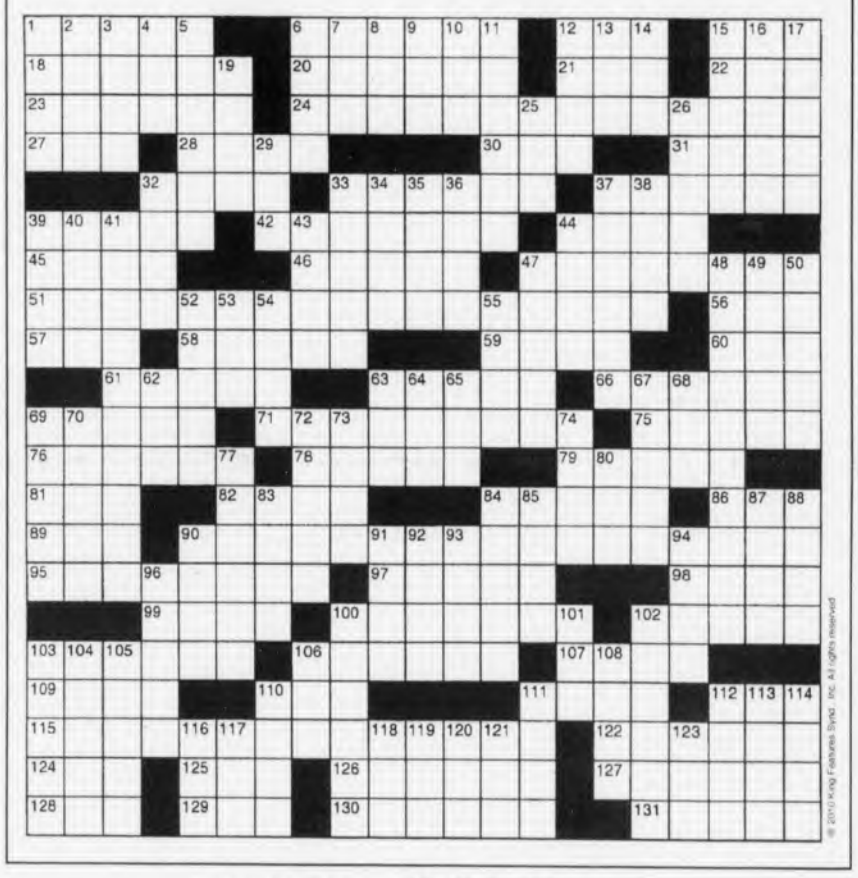
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A business matter keeps you pretty busy, but try to squeeze in time to be with family as well as close friends. You need the good vibrations you get from people who care for you.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Investing in an attractive prospect (business or personal) with little or no information can be risky. Avoid future problems by getting all the facts before you act.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Someone close to you might have an unexpected reaction to a decision you feel you're prepared to make. Listen to his or her point of view. It could prove to be surprisingly helpful.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't give up yet. That once warm, personal relationship that seems to be cooling off fast could recover with some tender, loving care, and who better than you to provide it?

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Career matters are strong this week. You might want to enter a training program to enhance your skills. Also, consider getting professional help in preparing a brilliant resume.



(c) 2010 King Features Synd., Inc.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of respecting the feelings of others, which is one reason people feel comfortable having you in their lives.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

An interview with Ali Lutz

Haiti coordinator for Partners in Health

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

The 2010 Cohasset Reads Together has now come to a close. The reading selection was "Mountains Beyond Mountains; Healing the World: The Quest of Dr. Paul Farmer," by Pulitzer Prize winning author, Tracy Kidder. The book is the example of "a life based on hope and on an understanding of the truth of the Haitian proverb "Beyond mountains there are mountains – as you solve one problem, another problem presents itself, and so you go on and try to solve that one too."

Kidder's book tells the true story of Paul Farmer, who found his life's calling while in medical school. He set out to cure infectious diseases and to bring the lifesaving tools of modern medicine to those who need them most. Farmer founded Partners In Health in 1987. PIH is a nonprofit corporation based in Boston and active in the Caribbean, Latin America, Africa, Russia and the United States. PIH strives to achieve two overarching goals: to bring the benefits of modern medical science to those most in need of them and to serve as an antidote to despair.

Last Sunday, Cohasset was host to Ali Lutz, the Haiti coordinator for Partner's in Health. The following interview with Ms. Lutz shows how Dr. Farmer's ideology and passion are part of the very fabric of the entire Partner's In Health organization.

• What is Partner's in Health? What do you do?

Lutz: We provide comprehensive healthcare to some of the poorest communities in the world. We don't just treat disease. We tackle the root causes of disease – which is poverty.

• How do you set out to accomplish your mission?

Lutz: We build local capacity wherever we go. In Haiti we have over 4,000 Haitian employees working in our clinics and hospitals, including doctors, nurses, teachers, accountants and engineers, who are all part of PIH – and all are Haitians. We don't want to build up a Partners in Health infrastructure, we want to build up a Haitian system of delivering healthcare.

• How soon after the earthquake were you there? What did you find upon arrival?

Lutz: I traveled there two weeks after the earthquake and remained there for two weeks. I expected people to be traumatized, and of course they were and still are. But what I also found was my colleagues doing incredible work. The earthquake has been about Haitians helping Haitians, the very thing that PIH is fostering. When the earthquake struck most of my colleagues immediately rushed to Port-au-Prince to make sure their own friends, families and neighbors were OK. Then they immediately set up clinics and began doing what it takes to care for people in this situation.

• What were you, in your role as the Haiti coordinator, specifically doing to assist in the efforts?

Lutz: My work began immediately in Boston. I was coordinating and communicating back and forth to the field in Haiti. They needed me to coordinate care at our hospital in Cange, a small remote village in the Central Plateau of Haiti. I helped coordinate surgical teams from the United States. Even though we have Haitian surgical teams, there was an enormous need for specialists including orthopedic doctors and plastic surgeons. The sheer volume of patients was such that we needed to ask U.S. doctors to come to Haiti.

I coordinated patient transfers. Some patients needed complicated surgeries and were brought via helicopters to the USNS Comfort Naval Hospital, which was anchored off the coast of Port-au-Prince. In addition, our hospital received patients from the Comfort who required post operative care. In short, I had to make sure the system of doctors had everything it needed to function. That included food deliveries. It was day-to-day coordination of everything from the healthcare to the basic needs.

• What do you see as the greatest challenge for Haiti now and in the immediate future?

Lutz: This earthquake is going to change Haiti for generations to come. The kind of injuries we're seeing are crush injuries; amputations. The trauma of going through this is going take physical therapy and mental health support for a very, very long time. Even when Haiti is no longer on the front page of the newspaper there are millions of people who need to rebuild their lives, people whose lives were completely destroyed in Port-au-Prince. Those people are all going to move back to the rural areas where their family is from. They're going to need help with agricultural projects and schools and to prepare for an expanded and traumatized population.

• How, if at all, did "Mountains Beyond Mountains" inspire you and your work?

Lutz: The book changed my life. I read "Mountains Beyond Mountains" while I was working in the area of social justice domestically, here in the U.S. Then I read this book and it spoke to my heart. The Partners in Health people are doing something wonderful. I knew I had to join them so I started asking around and a friend of mine who works in public health knew of a position open in Haiti.

• What is the ultimate goal for you in Haiti?

Lutz: We have to do what we can so they can live up to the history of Haiti. It's a small country rich in strength and born out of the struggle for human rights and freedom. It's the first country to have a successful slave revolt. Haiti has the strength and resiliency to come back and survive.

We focus on the poorest of the poor and maintaining and fostering their dignity.

This message, and our work, is replicated everywhere we go.

We are not Haiti's Hope – the people of Haiti are their own hope.

AFTERGLOW

I'd like the memory of me to be a happy one, I'd like to leave an afterglow of smiles
when day is gone.
I'd like to leave an echo
whispering softly down the ways, of happy times, and laughing times, and bright
and sunny days.
I'd like the tears of those wjo
grieve to dry before the sun,
Of happy memories that I
leave when life is done.

'Rent' due at Company Theatre

By R. Scott Reedy

Choreographer, Jordie Saucerman of Weymouth, choreographer, Helen Forrest of Weymouth, director, Zoe Bradford and music director, Michael Joseph of Weymouth are surrounded by the cast of "Rent."

From the moment it premiered off-Broadway on Jan. 25, 1996, the musical "Rent" was a sensation. Its rock opera-infused score and "La Boheme"-inspired story of young artists and musicians on New York's Lower East Side struggling to survive under the specter of AIDS made it a must-see show for a whole new generation of theatergoers.

Composer and creator Jonathan Larson died unexpectedly at age 35 the night before its New York Theatre workshop premiere, but "Rent" continued on, transferring to Broadway that spring where it won the 1996 Tony Award for Best Musical and the Pulitzer Prize for Drama. It lasted on Broadway for 12 years, spawning many, many national tours – the first of which opened at Boston's Shubert Theatre in November 1996 – and a devoted legion of "Rent-heads" who will no doubt follow it to the South Shore when it makes its long-awaited debut next week at Norwell's Company Theatre.

"We've been hanging on to the edge of our seats for six or seven years now waiting for the rights to 'Rent' to be released. Every year, we asked and asked to get the chance to do this show. When something is as fun and inspiring as this show, you can't wait to get the chance to do it," explained "Rent" co-director and Company Theatre co-artistic director Zoe Bradford last week by telephone from her Hingham home.

Having seen the musical in Boston and on Broadway, Bradford realized that its story resonated in a very personal way for her.

"This show touches a very special place for my co-artistic directors and friends Jordie Saucerman and Michael Joseph. When we were young and starting to form what would become the Company Theatre over 30 years ago, we lived the story of 'La Boheme.' Jordie, Michael and I were a group of friends getting together to feed off each other and make things happen creatively," says Bradford, before making a clear distinction between the Company troika and the show's Bohemian characters. "Our life experience was entirely minus the drugs, of course, but we were still very much struggling artists. The three of us really relate to not having a space to do your art. It is a key theme in this show and one of the biggest challenges Company Theatre faced in the early years. And, we also lost two frequent Company Theatre collaborators to AIDS in the late 1980s and early 1990s."

The show's still-powerful message, coupled with the fact that it launched the careers of Jesse L. Martin ("Law & Order") and real-life couple Idina Menzel ("Wicked") and Taye Diggs ("How Stella Got Her Groove Back"), attracted a large turnout to its Norwell try-outs earlier this year, according to Bradford.

"We had 90 people audition for 16 roles, which proved something we knew going in which was that a lot of young performers had grown up with this show and really wanted the chance to do it. We even had people showing us what they could do via videos posted on YouTube. Joel Maki, the actor we have playing Mark, grew up in Massachusetts, but is living in New York now. He has done all kinds of national tours, but he wanted to come back home for this experience. And apparently it is every girl's dream to play the role of Mimi. For that role, we wanted somebody who was the right age and ethnicity, but also someone who could believably convey real pathos. We saw 100 young women just for the Mimi auditions, before finally selecting Charisse Shields from Lunenberg."

Once the cast was chosen, a decision was made that the performers should learn more than just the musical score.

"We wanted to make sure to increase awareness among our cast of the many important themes in 'Rent,' from same-sex and interracial relationships to living with AIDS. We're planning an educational talk with William Ketter, former editor of "The Patriot Ledger," who was on the Pulitzer Prize committee the year Jonathan Larson won. We are also studying multimedia performance art in New York City in the 1990s. We will also be showing our cast clips from the AIDS-themed 1993 feature film 'Philadelphia' and the 1985 made-for-television movie 'An Early Frost.'"

While it may depict an earlier time, Bradford says "Rent" has lost none of its relevance.

"I was worried that this show might seem dated, but it doesn't at all. It is still very powerful and very poignant and, perhaps most importantly, it is joyous and life-affirming. The songs, like 'Seasons of Love,' are timeless, of course, but Jonathan Larson won the Pulitzer Prize for more than just the music. It was for the show's entire message about life and acceptance and the joy of creating things together."

"Rent" will be presented at The Company Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, Norwell, from March 19 through April 18. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 781-871-2787, or go online at companytheatre.com. In keeping with a tradition established in New York, half-price rush tickets for down front seating will be available the day of the performance.

South Shore Art Center in Cohasset is mounting an exhibition of mixed media art entitled Media Mix. This national exhibition was juried by Gretchen Keyworth, Director Emeritus and Chief Curator of Fuller Craft Museum in Brockton. Boston area artists include Hingham artists Jeanne Wiley and Ann Conte whose woven car will occupy the center of the gallery. Ron Mello of Middleboro entered a frog on wheels constructed from ceramic, copper, brass and iron. Marshfield artist Sally Dean's portrait of Sacajawea is comprised of wood, tin, resin and found objects. And Donna Grygo of Quincy, also known as the "Lone Beader," works in glass seed beads and acrylics. Media Mix opens at South Shore Art Center on Friday, March 19 with an opening reception from 6 to 8 p.m. and continues through May 2. Gallery hours are Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday, noon to 4 p.m. 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset. For more information call 781-383-2787 or visit www.ssac.org.

Auditions

BAY PLAYERS will offer open auditions for "Our Town" from 1 to 3 p.m., on Sunday, March 21, and 7:30 to 9:30 p.m., on Monday, March 22. Auditions will take place at The Zone, 822 Webster St., Marshfield. "Our Town" is a three-act play by American playwright Thornton Wilder. It is a character story about an average town and its citizens, as depicted through their ordinary, everyday lives. The story also depicts a young couple as they discover love, move to marriage and deal with death. Local director Michael Pevzner of Kingston will direct this show, which will include a cast of about 15. "Our Town" will be performed June 18, 19, 25 and 26. All interested actors are encouraged to audition. Bay Players is also asking volunteers to come and spend some time. There are many things to do in a play that don't require people to memorize lines or be onstage. Behind-the-scenes work can be a lot of fun. For more information, call 339-793-1027 or go to www.bayplayers.org.

Packed house hears program discussion

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Near the end of the 31/2-hour discussion on the high school's program of studies Wednesday night, School Committee member Helene Lieb joked the audience had signed up for AP level of Program of Studies.

And for much of the audience, it may have felt that way, given the amount of information at the meeting.

The discussion was a continuation of an ongoing conversation in the school community about course leveling at the high school and the possibility of more courses combining the two levels (college prep and honors) in one classroom.

A standing-room-only crowd filled the community meeting room at the high school. Parents, teachers and students sat on the floor, stood against the wall and listened from down the hall for the discussion and presentation.

The issue is important to all segments of the school community, as it would signify a substantial change in the way curriculum is taught and learned. Not one audience member who spoke expressed support for combined level classrooms beyond what was already at the high school.

From the comments made by parents and teachers in the audience, many were looking for assurances from the school administration that there would be no continued movement toward more combined-level classrooms.

Access arriving

Selectmen approve budget for CCTV

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Local cable access television is coming back in its entirety … well, soon.

Like a movie delayed in production, the local cable access has been stalled for the past few months as the Cable Advisory Committee waited for several pieces to come together.

Pat Martin, chair of the Cable Advisory Committee, told the Board of Selectmen Monday night that come the end of March the efforts for a new TV studio in Town Hall would be full speed ahead.

In the past year, the town has signed two contracts for cable access: a 10-year renewal with Comcast and a new contract with Verizon.

With the license agreement signed between Verizon and the town as of December, Cohasset residents now have two cable television providers to choose from. Because of competition in the cable television, Comcast is no longer providing television studio access to residents. With financial support from the cable providers and their customers through a monthly surcharge, Cohasset will set up its own studio and residents will be able to develop their own programming.

Message in a bottle

Girls find bottle washed up in harbor

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Cohasset shoreline is full of treasures, but one particular treasure found last week could have been misinterpreted as just another glass bottle washed up on the shore.

However, the three young girls who found the bottle last week saw something special in it — a message.

The DeGroat girls — 8-year-old twins Kyra and Annabell and 4-year-old Bridgit — stumbled upon the ordinary green

Buttonwood Books & Toys to present local poet

Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset will welcome Scituate poet Joyce Wilson at 3 p.m., on Sunday, April 11, for a reception and reading to celebrate the release of her debut book of poetry, "The Etymology of Spruce." The event is free and refreshments will be served.

Wilson has been an active participant in the poetry communities in Boston, Cambridge and the South Shore. For more than a decade, she has edited "The Poetry Porch," a magazine on the Internet for poets, teachers and students. She teaches English at Suffolk University, and her poems have appeared in many journals, among them "Agni," "Antigonish Review," " Harvard Review" and "Poetry Ireland." She has given readings of her original poetry in venues from Cambridge to Brockton to Provincetown.

People who are unable to attend, but would like to order a signed copy, can call Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

A FRIEND INDEED

The majority of older adults prefer to remain in their own residence as they age. Although this is a positive decision, many times it can result in a solitary living situation. Companionship is important for seniors. Home healthcare aides can provide important companionship functions that can keep seniors from feeling isolated, lonely, and depressed. Personal care assistants can participate in a wide variety of friendship-building activities with seniors. These can be simple activities such as reading books, chatting about current events, watching movies, and engaging seniors in hobbies and activities that keep them alert and involved. A companion will share and enrich the senior's life and embrace his or her interests and experiences.

If you worry that your loved one might be in need of daily assistance - or simply lonely - then please call our office to schedule an appointment. We place experienced and compassionate caregivers with seniors who require a wide spectrum of care, from occasional help with errands to full-time live-in care. It helps your parents and it helps your peace of mind. Isn't that worth it? Cohasset man arrested on marijuana charge

A 19-year-old Cohasset man was arrested last week on charges of selling marijuana to high school-age youth in Cohasset.

Logan Chase of 17 Highland Court, who is on probation for assaulting two animal control officers last spring, is being held in the Dedham jail without bail.

A resident informed the Cohasset Criminal Investigation Division (CID) of suspicious activity on Highland Court in February. Upon that information, the detectives began their own investigation and surveillance on the property for roughly three weeks.

During the course of the investigation, detectives observed numerous individuals between ages 17 and 21 allegedly entering the home then leaving in the car shortly after.

After an investigation, the detectives arrested Chase on South Main Street March 12. Shortly before the arrest police say they observed Chase allegedly distributing a quantity of marijuana to several adolescents.

According to police, they allegedly seized about nine grams of marijuana and $545 from Chase's person during the arrest. Detectives later seized an additional 68.5 grams of marijuana from the trunk of Chase's vehicle. Police estimate the street value of the marijuana seized at approximately $1,370.

Chase pled innocent at his arraignment in Quincy District Court on Monday to charges of distributing marijuana, possession of marijuana with intent to distribute and committee controlled substance violations within 1,000 feet of a school (South Shore Community Center Nursery School).

During the course of the investigation, CID was assisted by the Cohasset Police Major Case Response Team (MCRT), which consists of members of the Patrol Division who assist CID during investigative and enforcement activity.

Chase was on supervised probation after pleading guilty to assault and batter on two animal control officers in June. The officers were taking Chase's pit bull to be euthanized after it bit a young girl in the face.

Because the arrest violates his probation, Chase is being held at the Dedham House of Correction and is set to appear back in court on March 29.

Cohasset Police Detective Lt. Gregory Lennon, commanding officer of CID, said, "Today's arrest should send a clear message that we will continue to aggressively investigate anyone who engages in the illegal distribution of drugs in the Town of Cohasset, especially those that distribute drugs to our youth. The citizens of Cohasset deserve nothing less, and we will not stand by and let a handful of criminals destroy the quality of life in this community."

Police department offers Mass Marketing Fraud tips

Cohasset Police Department has recently seen an increase in Mass Marketing Frauds and would like to provide residents with an overview of these types of frauds along with information on how to avoid becoming a victim.

Basic overview

Mass Marketing Frauds target individuals of all ages and walks of life. Victims are lured with false promises of significant cash prizes, goods, services or good works, in exchange for up-front fees, taxes or donations.

Costs of fraud

Mass Marketing Frauds victimize millions of Americans each year and generate losses in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Top schemes

Foreign lotteries and sweepstakes; Nigerian letter scams; credit and loan scams; overpayment scams; and charity scams

Common scams

Foreign lotteries and sweepstakes. Foreign lottery fraud is currently one of the most prevalent consumer frauds. Victims are told that they have won a lottery or sweepstakes in a foreign drawing. To collect the winnings, victims are told they must first pay various taxes and fees.

Nigerian letter scams: Victims are asked to help illegally transfer funds out of Nigeria in return for a share of the money. Perpetrators ask victims for their bank account information under the pretext that it is needed to complete the transaction. Victims may also be asked to pay money up-front to help defray the cost of taxes, legal fees or bribes.

Credit and loan scams: Victims with poor or non-existent credit are offered credit cards/loans-for an advance fee. "Credit repair services" may offer to help those with poor credit improve their credit ratings-for an advance fee.

Overpayment scams: The victim is advertising an item for sale. A "buyer" sends the seller a counterfeit check or money order for more than the cost of the item. The victim is asked to return the difference between the payment and the cost of the item. When the payment turns out to be counterfeit, the victim is held responsible by his or her financial institution.

Charity scams: Con artists solicit donations in the name of non-existent or fraudulent charities. Most charity scams occur during the holidays or in the aftermath of disasters, when philanthropy is most common.

How to avoid becoming a victim

The hallmark of Mass Marketing Fraud offers appear "too good to be true." Payments for goods or services are required in advance. Personal information is requested over the telephone. Offers are unsolicited. Representatives use high-pressure sales techniques, claiming that immediate action is required.

Report scams when they occur

Don't ever be embarrassed. These frauds are perpetrated by sophisticated con artists.

File a claim with the appropriate entities.

Report the crime promptly. People will have a better chance of getting money back and bringing the perpetrators to justice when a complaint is filed soon after the crime.

POLICE BEAT

Juvenile charged with A&B

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A 16-year-old juvenile was arrested on charges of assault and battery after police were called to a residence in the midst of a domestic dispute. On Saturday afternoon, a 911 call was placed from a mother in the midst of a domestic dispute between a father and son.

According to the police log, the caller reported the son had a kitchen knife in hand and there was an active fight between the father and son.

The juvenile was charged with assault to murder, assault with a dangerous weapon on a person over 60, assault and battery on a person over 60, and assault and battery.

Ambulance needed

A 54-year-old Cohasset female was driving herself to the hospital, but by the time she was driving on Route 3A she felt too sick to continue. She had chest pains and feared a heart attack. She called 911 from her cell phone and was routed to Cohasset Police Department. She was advised to pull over and a Hingham EMTs met her at the intersection of Route 228 and Route 3A. She was transported to the hospital by Hingham's ambulance.

"The best thing is to call ambulance; they can begin pre-hospital treatment in the ambulance," Lt. William Quigley said. "If someone ever passed out behind the wheel that's only going to compound things."

Down trees, flooded basements

Public safety officials responded to dozens of storm-related calls over the rainy weekend. There were several basements flooded on Pleasant Street that the fire department responded to. A tree toppled into Black Rock Road, completely blocking passage on Monday night around 9 p.m. It was removed around noon on Tuesday.

On Sunday, multiple log entries indicated downed tree limbs in roadways and wires down.

Police kept a close eye on the tidal flooding "hot spots" at Bow and Margin streets during the high tides.

Alarm set off

Police responded to a burglar alarm at Our World Children's Museum at 5:20 a.m. last Monday morning. It turned out a person who was known to police was assisting the museum director in moving some items inadvertently set off the alarm, which is located in the boiler room.

Looking for bus

Cohasset Police received a call from Hingham Police about a male who looked disoriented wandering around West Corner. CPD responded around 5:30 p.m. on Tuesday and found the 39-year-old male was looking to get to Quincy, but was unsure where to get the bus. The man was not intoxicated. A Cohasset cruiser gave the man a ride to the Station Street bus depot in Hingham.

Suspicious activity

A resident called in to report a suspicious car pulling in and out of driveways at about 8 p.m. last Tuesday. It turned out the car, which was occupied by a male and female, was delivering newspapers in the area.

Although this incident ended up being easily explained, Quigley said residents should always call in a car that seems suspicious.

"We don't mind checking it out," Quigley said, adding there have been several break-ins in the area.

Lots of smoke

A person out for an evening stroll noticed what looked like an inordinate amount of smoke coming from at chimney on South Main St. They walked in to the police station to report it. Police and fire responded to the residence and found the smoke was coming from a fireplace. The residents were trying to take the chill out of the house with their fireplace.

Knock, knock

A knocking on the door at 1:15 a.m. last Friday startled a resident enough to call the police. Police responded to the Elm Street home, but it was soon figured out the person at the door was known to the resident.

Blocked street

A Hobart Lane resident called the police department out of concern that workmen were blocking the roadway. Police responded to the scene where a tree service was working in the area. The homeowner who had hired the tree service had informed police that the street might be blocked while the work was being completed. The officer was able to talk to the workmen and the trucks were rearranged as not to block the street.

Anytime when construction work is going to block a roadway, property owners need to seek permission from the police and fire departments in case they need to respond to an emergency in the area.

Test calls

When new phone lines were put in at Deer Hill School, test calls were made to 911 to ensure the right information came up on the emergency dispatch computers. Deer Hill and its coordinating address (208 Sohier St.) comes up on the police computers when a 911 call is made from the phones there. All checked out fine.

Fox in Wheelwright Park

A Forest Avenue resident reported seeing a large fox walking around the area in the afternoon and just wanted to be sure the animal control officer was aware. Quigley said ACO Paul Murphy is aware of the fox, but it does not appear to be bothering anyone.

Purse stolen

A resident whose purse was stolen in Boston requested a police officer to check her residence before she entered. The resident was concerned the perpetrator had all her information, including where she lived. Police checked the house, which was clear.

Tracy O'Connor will be running in the Boston Marathon to help conquer cancer as a member of the Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge team.

O'Connor running for cancer research

On April 19, Tracy O'Connor of Cohasset will be running in the 114th Boston Marathon to help conquer cancer as a member of the Dana-Farber Marathon Challenge (DFMC) team.

O'Connor, along with DFMC teammates from across the United States and other countries, will run Massachusetts' historic 26.2-mile marathon route from Hopkinton to Boston with a goal to raise $4.4 million for cancer research at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

By raising a minimum of $3,250, DFMC runners are helping to fund the Claudia Adams Barr Program in Innovative Basic Cancer Research at Dana-Farber.

Since the DFMC's inception in 1990, runners on the team have raised more than $43 million for the Barr Program. Dana-Farber trustees and Jacksonville Jaguars principal owners J. Wayne and Delores Barr Weaver founded the Barr Program in 1987 to honor Delores Weaver's mother, Claudia Adams Barr, who lost her battle with cancer 30 years earlier.

In 1990, Dana-Farber was among the first charity organizations to be recognized by the Boston Athletic Association (B.A.A.). The DFMC team offers its members training guidance from Jack Fultz, the 1976 Boston Marathon men's champion, plus team training runs, extensive fundraising support and volunteer opportunities for non-runners. DFMC runners who are not time-qualified for the Boston Marathon receive an invitational entry into the race.

To contribute to the DFMC or to support a runner, go online to rundfmc.org or contact the DFMC office at 617-632-1970 or dfmc@dfci.harvard.edu.

Candidates Corner

Ognibene kicks off campaign

Last Sunday, school committee candidate Paul Ognibene and his wife Jen hosted a campaign kickoff attended by a standing-room-only crowd.

"I was pleased that so many supporters braved the rain to come to my campaign kickoff," Ognibene said. "The event was a great opportunity to meet my fellow residents and spread the message that I'm running for school committee to ensure excellence, accountability, and results."

Ognibene's campaign Web site is voteforpaulo.com.

Astino adds student survey to Web site

School committee Jeanne Astino's Web site, astino.info, has a new addition. While a poll for parents has been available since the Web site's inception, there is now a student survey available.

Astino invites parents, and students to complete an appropriate survey on the site. She is available by telephone or e-mail at jeanneastino@gmail.com.

Snowdale schedules meet and greet

Linda Snowdale, candidate for school committee, has a Web site, snowdale.info. Be sure to view it regularly for updated information.

Snowdale hopes to share views with residents Tuesday, March 23, at 7 p.m. for a meet and greet at 63 Old Pasture Road, the home of Michael and Ellen Maher.

Linda can be reached at 781-383-9131.

Briefly

Water planning group

The Board of Selectmen will populate the water planning group at next week's meeting. Six residents have expressed interest in being a part of the advisory group that will take a close look at the financial issues facing the water department. Two citizens at large will be appointed to the committee. The group will also have two representatives each from the Board of Selectmen, Advisory Committee, Capital Budget Committee and Water Commission.

During the public comment period, Old Pasture Road resident Martha Gjesteby expressed concerns with the configuration of the water planning group. She said the issue needed fresh eyes and insight, not the same elected officials. She also said there could potentially be an Open Meeting Law issue with having two out of the three members of the Water Commission involved in the group.

"You want a pure, non-biased opinion," Gjesteby said, adding there could be members of state and federal agencies available to help the town as well as grant money.

Gjesteby said specific expertise like a strong financial background or engineering background would be important to have on the committee.

Treat's Pond

The Treat's Pond Army Corps of Engineers wetland restoration project could head for a Town Meeting vote this fall. The Board of Selectmen will discuss the project at their meeting March 22.

Board of Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said he recently met with Amory and Priscilla Houghton of 91 Atlantic Ave. to discuss the project and area's related flooding problems.

"(They) reiterated they have been trying to get some relief for years," Carlson said.

The Houghtons asked for Town Meeting to take an up or down vote on the project. In previous meetings on the topic, they have described not being able to get into their driveway during severe rain because of flooding from the nearby pond.

The project was previously discussed on the floor of annual Town Meeting in 2008. An up or down vote was not taken on the project; instead Town Meeting voted on a resolution to look into the project and alternatives further.

The project is coming to a head because the Army Corps of Engineers is looking for an answer by April 15 on whether the town would like to move forward with the project.

The overriding issue for the Treat's Pond and surrounding Atlantic Avenue area is severe rainstorms have caused and continue to cause serious flooding for several residents in the area. Although the Army Corps primary goal was creating a healthier wetland, they said a side effect could be improvement in the flooding situation.

In addition, the Army Corps would contribute about $1 million toward the cost of the project, but the remaining funding, which was estimated to be about $600,000, would need to come from a non-federal source, likely the town or the state.

Currently, the DPW goes out during severe rain events to clear out the end of the drainage pipe that outfalls on Sandy Cove.

No WWTP overflow

The Wastewater Treatment Plant expansion done in conjunction with the Little Harbor sewer project passed the heavy rain test this past weekend, Sewer Commission John Beck said.

There was no overflow event at the plant despite the heavy rains and coinciding stormwater runoff over the weekend, Beck confirmed on Monday. The plant processed about 600,000 gallons on Sunday and 900,000 on Monday, up from a normal flow of about 240,000 gallons per day.

The plant expansion included the installation of new membranes that can more swiftly handle water flow, Beck said. During the expansion, an "extreme flow pipe" was created to treat water through a UV chamber if the plant could not process it through the entire treatment system because of the elevated flow. Beck said the extreme flow pipe did not need to be used.

During rainy weather flows through the sewer plant always jump because of inflow and infiltration (I&I) issues throughout the system.

In years past rainy weather has cause the treatment plant to overflow spilling partially treated sewage into the surrounding area of Jacob's Meadow.

Sewer budget recommended

The Board of Selectmen reviewed and recommended the sewer department budget on Monday night. Sewer Commission chair John Beck said the sewer budget was tight, but balanced — and balanced without the need for a rate increase in the next year.

"It took careful action on both sides of the equation, revenue and expense, to balance the budget this year," Beck said.

The sewer department's budget was affected by the reduction in water usage over the last fiscal year, just like the water department. The sewer department bills are based on water consumption.

Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley raised concerns about the $20,000 year over year increase in the consulting engineer line item as well as what she observed as a reliance on the consulting engineer to deal with issues the commission should be dealing with.

"It does seem to me that the commission delegates just about everything over to the consulting engineer. The commission is not as involved as it could be," Quigley said.

The Sewer Commission regularly uses engineer Dan Coughlin, principal engineer at Coughlin Environmental Services, for engineering and technical support.

"I'm a little squirmy now given the situation at the water department," Quigley said.

Quigley abstained from voting on the recommendation of the budget.

The Sewer Department budget was recommended at $2,273,035.

Wigs, jigs and Ghillies

Irish step dancing school is thriving on the South Shore

By Matthew J. Gill
MGILL@CNC.COM

On a somewhat snowy afternoon earlier this month, a group of about a dozen local youngsters took part in an adapted version of a familiar child's game.

It's called Duck, Duck, Jig.

Largely the same as the "Goose" version — a youngster walks around the exterior perimeter of a circle of seated friends — the difference involves the 'jig."

When the circling student said "jig," and then tapped a friend on the top of the head, the 5- to 8-year-old youngsters did not run around the circle as they would in Duck, Duck, Goose.

They skipped.

This was, after all, one segment of an Irish step dancing practice.

What did you expect?

With about 150 students, and classes held throughout the week, the Dunleavy Shaffer School of Irish Dance is faring fairly well on Washington Street in Norwell.

In an recent interview, Suzanne Dunleavy McDonough, who founded and owns the dance school with Theresa Shaffer Wilkinson, talked about the school, the students and some of Irish step dancing's interesting steps.

"We both love Irish step dancing," said Dunleavy. "That's why it's so great for us to see the kids learning. Whether they will be world champions or if they'll go to a nursing home (to perform), it makes us happy to teach them how to do it. (Irish step dancing) is so athletic, and it requires so much coordination, but at the same time it's dance and it's also a cultural expression."

Dunleavy said she and Shaffer opened the school in Norwell in 2005, renting space at another location. Just over a year ago, they moved to the current studio on Washington Street.

When they first started, Dunleavy said the school had just four students. Now they have more than 150, and though most of the students hail from towns on the South Shore, there are a few who travel from as far off as New Hampshire to sharpen their Irish steps.

The school offers step dance classes from pre-beginner (for 3- to 5-year-old children) on up to teenage classes. In the past they've offered classes for adults as well.

"Step dancing really is pretty easy and fun to pick up," Dunleavy said. "The steps aren't really that complicated. At least the beginner steps."

The average person, she said, can learn how to do it.

And it's really fun, Dunleavy said, adding that a large number of the school's students have come to really enjoy step dancing, and many of the students who also take ballet and/or tap classes often leave those dance styles behind to focus on Irish step dancing.

"Most of the parents say to us 'I can't get my kid to stop dancing,'" Dunleavy said. "They dance in the supermarket, and in church…"

The dancers of Dunleavy Shaffer are currently preparing for the world championships, which will be held in Scotland later in the year. To help raise funds for the trip, they're hosting a fundraiser at Uno Chicago Grill in Hanover on Tuesday, March 23. That day, they'll dance at the restaurant on Route 53 at 6 p.m. and a raffle will be held at 7 p.m.

From left, sisters Eveline and Katherine Ronzoni of Cohasset practice their dance steps together.

The basics, and some Gaelic

Getting started, Dunleavy said newcomers generally begin with some basic steps: pointing one's feet, moving side to side and crossing one's legs in front and behind.

During a class for 3- to 5-year-olds earlier this month, Shaffer started the session by leading her charges through a variety of stretches and movements. As the children skipped around the room, many wearing blue Dunleavy Shaffer T-shirts or sweatshirts as well as shamrock stickers on their faces and forearms, Shaffer held her hand out above their heads so they would stretch up to touch it as they passed underneath.

"Are you as high as you can go?" she asked them.

"Make sure you're not talking. Make sure you're dancing," she said during another exercise.

"Lots of big hops. More tippy-toes too," she added in another exercise.

One student later announced, excitedly and without any noticeable prompt: "My mom is almost ready to have another baby."

"When's she going to have the baby?" Shaffer asked.

"Uhm …" the student responded. "April 7."

As one's step dancing skill improves, Dunleavy said dancers can take on new dances, ranging from jigs, slip-jigs and treble-jigs to reels and horn-pipes. At first, a dancer starts out wearing soft shoes, or Ghillies as they're known in Gaelic. Later, as they begin to stand on their toes and complete big jumps, the dancers don harder shoes with stiff fiberglass toes.

STAFF PHOTOS/CHRIS BERNSTEIN

Cohasset's Madeline Ronzoni, 10, center, and Claire Gilliland, 12, of West Barnstable demonstrate steps for their younger classmates during an Irish step dancing practice earlier this month.

Both Dunleavy and Shaffer have Irish ancestry, and they both started step dancing when they were very young, about 4 or 5 years old.

Dunleavy said she got into step dancing because her aunt had done it before her. She said Shaffer got her start in step dancing because her father is a musician, and performed at many step dancing competitions.

When she was growing up in New York and Connecticut, Dunleavy said female step dancers often curled their hair for performances, and the male dancers wore kilts. That's changed a little though. Today, she said the girls usually wear wigs and the male dancers wear pants.

With or without these changes, Dunleavy said step dancing, because of its energetic movements, often generates "frequent costume malfunctions."

Today, when girls are dancing, it's not uncommon for their wigs to fall off, she said, or for their shoes to do the same.

Things haven't changed that much though.

On one occasion when she was performing at Radio City Music Hall in Manhattan a number of years ago, Dunleavy said the kilt of one of her fellow dancers — a male — fell off.

To reiterate, nowadays the guys usually wear pants.

Over the years, Dunleavy said she has danced in many interesting venues, including in Ireland and Scotland. Back in 2003, she achieved her highest rank in the field. In the category of senior ladies (ages 21 and over), she was ranked ninth in the world.

Outside of their roles as dance instructors, the school's two founders are busy in other areas as well. A resident of Quincy, Shaffer is a teacher's aide in Milton and she has two children. A Marshfield resident, Dunleavy is an assistant district attorney for Plymouth County. She has one child, and there's another on the way.

Dunleavy Shaffer School of Irish Dance is at 263 Washington St. in Norwell.

The gift of gab

The following funny phrases were overheard during a recent Irish step dancing class at Dunleavy Shaffer.

"I bet you used to have long hair."
One student asked her teacher

"Does that make your feet tired?"
Shaffer, the teacher, asked her students.
"Yes!," the students responded in unison.

"Save the best for last."
One student, ending debate on whether the group would play games first, or do more dance work.

"Ears open. Mouths closed. Arms down."
Shaffer, the teacher, directing her charges.

"Do we get candy?'
One student, at the conclusion of practice.

Cohasset students soar at B.C. High

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

GREAT NEWS

This week we are featuring great news about young Cohasset residents who are doing well in high school, college and beyond. We are so proud of one and all.

BC HIGH

The following Cohasset students earned honors for the second quarter of the 2009-2010 academic year at Boston College High School.

HIGH HONORS: Paul Oliver Forrer, Class of 2010; John McHugh Kearney, 2010; Robert Christopher McCunney, 2010; Thomas Joseph Pecca, 2010; Maxwell Otto Shipp, 2010; Charles Dirkson Coffman, 2011; James Vincent McKelvey, 2011; Colin Lewis Quinlan, 2011; Scott Franklin Wilson, 2011; Patrick Bidwell Kearney, 2012; Jay Matthew Salerno, 2012; Michael Edward Fegreus, 2013; Andrew Stephen Fontaine, 2013; Blair Patrick McGowan, 2013; and Zachary Richard Strecker, 2013.

To achieve high honors, students must have at least a 3.80 quality point average and all grade of C-plus or higher.

HONORS: David M. Hernon, Class of 2010; Anthony J. Testa, 2011; Michael Francis Troy, 2011; Christopher Franklin Wilson, 2011; Taylor Christian Golz, 2012; Alec Charles Hurd, 2012; Matthew Won-Yung Swanborg, 2012; Hunter Willem Forrer, 2013; Robert Joseph Hillman, 2013; Michael Robert O'Brien, 2013; and William Theodore Patsos, 2013.

To earn honors, students must receive a quality point average of at least 3.2 and all grades C-minus or higher.

Keep up the great work, guys!

NATIONAL HONOR

South Shore Vocational High School student David P. Dockendorff, III of Scituate was selected for membership in The National Society of High School Scholars (NSHSS). The announcement was made by NSHSS Founder and Chairman Claes Nobel, a senior member of the family that established the Nobel Prizes. "I am honored to recognize the hard work, sacrifice, and commitment that David has demonstrated to achieve this exceptional level of academic excellence," Nobel said. Formed in 2002, The Society recognizes outstanding academic achievement at the high school level and encourages members to apply their unique talents, vision, and potential for the betterment of themselves and the world.

After graduating from VoTech's NATEF (National Automotive Technicians Education Foundation) Master Certified Program, David, will attend the University of North Western Ohio, majoring in Automotive and High Performance studies. He is the son of Kelli and David Dockendorff, Jr., the grandson of Jeanne and Bill McAuliffe of Cohasset and Pam and David Dockendorff, Sr. of Scituate, and the great-grandson of Althea and Bill Fisk of Scituate.

EXETER

Sam Game of Cohasset, son of David Game and Sally L. Sisson, a grade 12 student at Phillips Exeter Academy, earned honors for the 2009 fall semester. Great work, Sam!

BOSTON UNIV.

Nicholas F. Secatore of Cohasset was named to the dean's list at Boston University for the fall semester of the 2009-2010 academic year. Super news!

ST. LAWRENCE

Jack W. Gilbert of Cohasset, Class of 2011, has been selected for membership in the St. Lawrence University chapter of Psi Chi, the national psychology honorary society. Jack graduated from Cohasset Junior-Senior High School.

To be eligible for membership, a student must have completed four psychology courses and have a 3.4 average, ased on a perfect 4.0 scale, in those courses and a 3.3 overall academic average.

Way to go, Jack!

ITHACA COLLEGE

Catherine O'Driscoll, daughter of Barbara O'Driscoll of Cohasset, graduated with a bachelor of arts degree from Ithaca College's Roy H. Park School of Communications. The degree was awarded in December 2009.

All the best in your future endeavors, Catherine!

BASIC TRAINING

Marine Corps Pvt. Andrew T. Liberty, son of Heidi P. and Franklin P. Liberty II of Cohasset, recently completed 12 weeks of basic training at Marine Corps Recruit Depot, Parris Island, S. C., designed to challenge new Marine recruits both physically and mentally.

Andrew and fellow recruits began their training at 5 a. m., by running 3 miles and performing calisthenics. In addition to the physical conditioning program, Liberty spent numerous hours in classroom and field assignments that included learning first aid, uniform regulations, combat water survival, marksmanship, hand-to-hand combat and assorted weapons training. They performed close order drill and operated as a small infantry unit during field training.

Andrew and other recruits also received instruction on the Marine Corps' core values – honor, courage and commitment, and what the core values mean in guiding personal and professional conduct.

Andrew and fellow recruits ended the training phase with The Crucible, a 54-hour, team evolution culminating in a ceremony in which recruits are presented the Marine Corps Emblem, and addressed as "Marines" for the first time in their careers.

Andrew, you are making Cohasset proud!

MERRIMACK

Molly D. Trahon of Cohasset was named to the 2009 fall dean's list at Merrimack College.

To be named to the dean's list, a student must achieve a 3.25 grade point average or higher, based on a 4.0 grading system.

Congratulations, Molly!

SWIM, DIVE

Here's something to remind us all that summer is not too far away. The Cohasset Swim and Dive Team 2010 season registration for returning athletes will be held on Saturday (May1) from 8-11am at the Recreation Center (Teen Garage). Dates and times for tryouts will be posted soon.

For all seniors who are interested in applying for the Cohasset Swim Team Scholarship, please obtain an application in the High School Guidance office. Qualifications include at least five years of swimming for the Cohasset Swim Team. Deadline is April 14th.

Highly motivated, responsible individuals for the Swim Team Head Coaching and Assistant Coach positions are being sought. Responsibilities include: directing the swimmers during team practices and meets, supervising assistant coaching responsibilities as well general organization of the team. In addition, the Dive Team is seeking qualified candidates for Head Coach and Assistant Coach positions. Responsibilities include: directing the divers during team practices and meets as well as team coordination. Interested individuals should address a letter of intent to the CSDT Steering committee and include their qualifications by April 1 to kimspicer@comcast.net

KITCHEN TOUR

Here is a date that is so worth saving on your calendars. The South Shore Community Center is pleased to announce that they will once again be hosting the Kitchen Tour on April 9th from 10:30 – 3 p.m. Come see these six unique homes, designer fabrics, lush floral arrangements and tempting treats prepared by some of the area's finest caterers. For more information call the Center at 781-383-0088.

SAILING CLUB

The Cohasset Sailing Club is looking to its membership and beyond for an adult to fulfill the role of Program Director of the Junior Program, which in 2009 taught 225 Cohasset children how to sail. This is a paid position requiring presence at the Club for 10 to 15 hours per week, Monday through Friday, with occasional weekend check-ins, roughly from June to August. It is a fun and rewarding way to spend some summer hours enjoying our ocean access and the children of Cohasset.

This position has been filled by Anne Rowland for the past six years. She will remain as Vice Commodore with Executive Committee oversight of the program, thus she will provide guidance throughout the eight-week season to whoever fulfills the role.

The Cohasset Sailing Club, a non-profit organization, has for 50 Years had as its mission that every child in the community should have the opportunity to share in the town's rich, seafaring heritage by receiving a thorough training in the art of seamanship.

Please see cohassetsailingclub.com for more information and you can email your interest to cohassetsailingclub@gmail.com.

That is all the news for this week. Please send in your news, photos and event information to us no later than Tuesdays by 5 pm and REMEMBER that every celebration is one that we love to share!

BRIEFS

Bradley schedules office hours

Democratic state Rep. Garrett Bradley of Hingham, will host district office hours from 4:30 to 5:30 p.m. on Monday, March 29, at the Sons of Italy Hall in Hingham. Attendees are asked to enter through the Route 3A side entrance of the building into his district office.

People who are unable to attend scheduled office hours, but would like to meet with Bradley, can call 617-722-2520 to schedule an appointment.

Census Bureau accepting applications for temporary employment

The U.S. Census Bureau's Waltham local 2010 Census office is recruiting applicants for temporary jobs with flexible hours. The Waltham office serves Cohasset, Scituate, Hingham, Hull and Weymouth.

Census takers, also known as enumerators, are needed to conduct in-person interviews with community residents who do not return questionnaires. These positions need to be filled by individuals with flexible schedules as work may occur in evenings and on weekends. Some positions may involve shift work. All temporary employees must be able to attend training, for which they will be compensated. Most training sessions take place during the day on weekdays; occasionally, a session may be in the evening or on weekends.

Job applicants must be at least 18 years old, have a valid Social Security number, be able to pass a background check and complete a 30-minute, multiple-choice, employment test that measures knowledge, skills and abilities required to perform a variety of census jobs. In most cases, workers will also be required to possess a valid driver's license and have use of a vehicle. U.S. citizenship is required to work for the 2010 Census except in rare occasions when no qualified U.S. citizens are available. Bilingual applicants throughout the district are being sought.

Qualified applicants are encouraged to call 866-861-2010 to schedule an appointment to take the employment test and submit an application. TTY callers should use the 1-800-877-8339 number. More information, including a practice test, is available at 2010censusjobs.gov.

Cohasset residents perform in piano festival

South Shore Conservatory welcomes the public to its annual Piano Festival, Duet Fest 2010, scheduled for 4 p.m. Sunday, March 21, at the Ellison Center for the Arts in Duxbury, 64 St. George St., Duxbury.

It will feature performances by students and faculty centering around the wide range of repertoire for one piano, four hands, as well as works for two pianos. Performers include Cohasset residents Brianna Sheldon and Miles Morin, as well as faculty members, Hui-Min Wang, Mark Goodman, Margaret Li and Edwina Li.

The concert is free and open to the public, and a reception for the performers will follow. For information, call 781-934-2731, ext. 11 or visit online at sscmusic.org.

COURTEST PHOTO

SweatPea is a lovely 3-year-old Dilute Calico female.

SweatPea needs a 'forever home'

This week's feature feline is "SweatPea"

SweetPea is a surrender. She was surrendered by a person who can no longer care for her and hopes the shelter can help to find her a "forever home." She was well loved and cared for as will be apparent when you meet her.

This lovely Dilute Calico is a 3-year-old female. She is aptly named as she has the sweetest disposition. If you're looking for a cuddle-bug, she may be the one for you. Check her and our other felines out at hsar.org, stop by during open hours on Monday from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. or Saturday from 2 to 3 p.m. If these times aren't convenient, call Shirl at 781-925-3380 for adoption appointments, only.

The shelter telephone numbers are 781-925-3121 or 1-877-378-1195. The shelter is located at 50 L St., Hull; the mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue PO Box 787, Hull, MA. 02045, e-mail address is hsar@hsar.org.

Save the date for the shelter's 10th anniversary celebration to be held Sunday, March 21, from 2 to 8 p.m. There will be three bands, a buffet and raffles galore. Check out the Web site, hsar.org for more information. Tickets are available at the shelter for only $25. They'll cost $30 at the door. All proceeds support the shelter.

Holly Hill Farm schedules spring gardening workshop

Holly Hill Farm, 230 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, will present a spring gardening workshop from 10 a.m. to noon, on Saturday, March 27. Those attending can learn what they will need to create an organic vegetable garden. People can work with Holly Hill Farm staff and receive tips on how to organize a garden, sources for compost, seeds, organic fertilizers and tools and learn how and why to build a raised bed. In addition, participants will learn how to build a cold frame to get an early start on seeds.

This workshop is the first of a four-part series of spring gardening workshops at Holly Hill Farm. Future workshops will include April 10, starting seeds; May 15, direct sowing of seeds and transplants; and June 12, organic garden maintenance and care. Cost per workshop is $12 for members and $15 for nonmembers.

For information, visit hollyhillfarm.org or call education director Jon Belber at 781-383-6565.

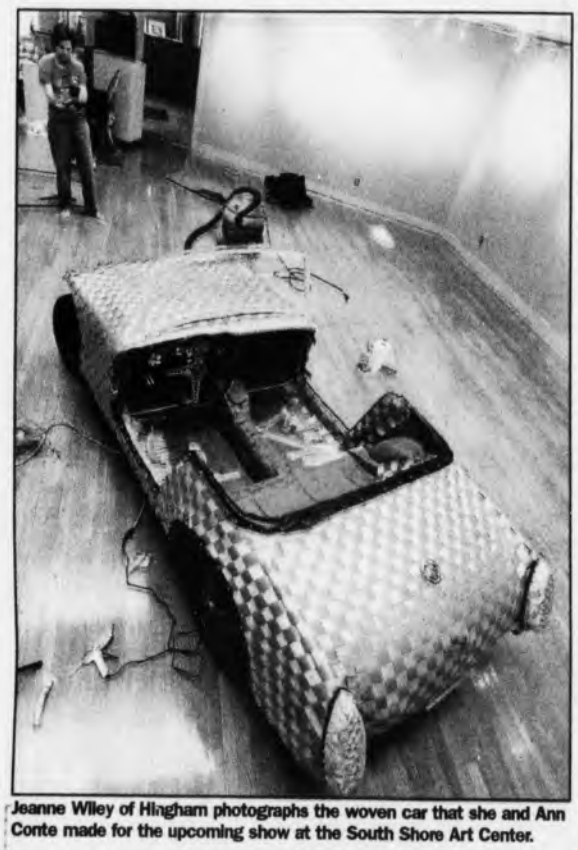
Junk car becomes art

Local artists create 'The Woven Car'



By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Last June, two local artists set out on the project the biggest project of their artistic careers.

The goal was simple, if not a little off the beaten path: to weave, as in basket weave, a car.

Hingham residents and artistic collaborators Jeanne Wiley and Ann Conte have pursued that goal since last June. The result is now sitting in the center of the South Shore Art Center's Bancroft Gallery as part of its Media Mix exhibit.

The artists transformed an early 1960s model MG Midget that most recently was holding firewood in a backyard into an example of ingenuity, sustainability and art.

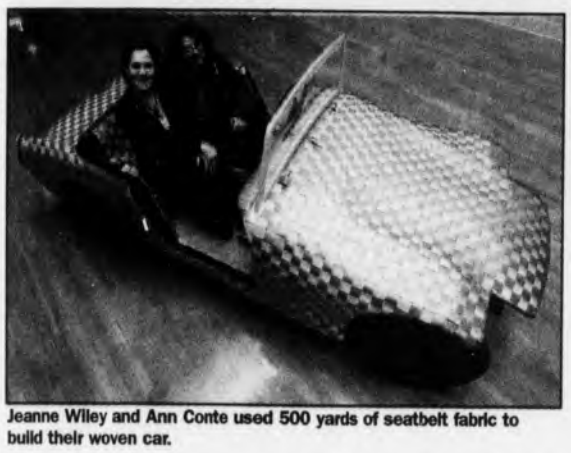
Jeanne Wiley of Hingham photographs the woven car that she and Ann Conte made for the upcoming show at the South Shore Art Center.

"This whole project is about recycling, reusing, repurposing and sustainability," Wiley said.

The artists approached the project like a car with no brakes heading down a steep hill.

"This was a big project and it could have gone off the rails at any point," Wiley said. "We approached it really like a job; there was no failure."

Each time they hit a wall of creativity or uncertainty over how to accomplish something, it was the strength of their partnership and collaboration that got them through, both Conte and Wiley said.



"We definitely complement each other," Conte said.

Conte is more analytical with a thoughtful approach to her work, while Wiley is more impulsive when she gets caught up in an idea.

"We're a good balance," Wiley said.

The two artists met about two years ago when Conte started working with ceramics again. Wiley runs the ceramics studio at the South Shore Art Center.

When Wiley thought of the project, she immediately thought of Conte. In that initial phone call, Conte did not hesitate, but immediately embraced the idea. Her response to Wiley was, "I can close my eyes and see it."

Jeanne Wiley and Ann Conte used 500 yards of seatbelt fabric to build their woven car.

From there they set out on the creative endeavor — the most involved artistic project either of them had ever been a part of.

When the car arrived in Wiley's driveway it was missing pieces, rusted out and generally in terrible shape. Wiley called upon her weaving background, as she weaves Nantucket baskets and often tried to meld them with her ceramics. Using seatbelt fabric — about 500 yards of it — she created an entirely new shell for the car. The weave was bolted to the car with 500 bolts, which was a painstaking and challenging effort, they said.

The seatbelt material was slippery, making it difficult to work with, and creating an exact fit for the car involved mapping and clamping and testing. Each bolt had to have a pre-drilled hole before it could be secured. Wiley also sculpted a new stick shift for the car and decorative flowers for the dashboard.

Conte, an accomplished painter and mixed media artist, painted the wheels and the undercarriage using a unique painting process, essentially painting in rust. She also created the taillights using an innovative process of monoprinting on clay.

"We both brought what we had to the party. It's been a great collaboration," Wiley said, adding they often ended up on the floor laughing.

Together they perfected their power tools skills, attempted new artistic trial and error, edited through "a billion ideas" and come away very proud of their accomplishment.

"There was a real learning curve," Conte said.

The project attracted the attention of DuPont because they chose to feature DuPont's environmentally friendly product called Corian Terra to make up the interior of the car (tufted seats, floorboards) and the windshield.

The woven car will be featured prominently in DuPont's booth at the GreenBuild 2010 trade show in Chicago in November as well as in interior design magazines.

As the project came together, Wiley said the piece got more and more beautiful, making it easier to trudge forward.

"It was extremely exciting," she said.

Wiley describes the final product as a "joy producer."

The woven car is the centerpiece of the Media Mix exhibit, which opens Friday, March 19, at the South Shore Art Center. There is an opening reception from 6 to 8 p.m.

What's next for the artistic duo? There's an old rudder-less boat sitting in Wiley's backyard and a plan has already been hatched. To give a glimpse, they are going to start by cutting the boat in half, and the world will have to wait and see what they come up with.

About the exhibit

Gretchen Keyworth, director emeritus and chief curator of Fuller Craft Museum in Brockton, juried this national exhibition. Keyworth viewed hundreds of images and selected 51 pieces to represent the best in mixed media. Images were submitted from artists across the United States, and the artists in the show hail from 14 different states. Media Mix opens March 19 and continues through May 2 in the Art Center's Bancroft Gallery.

Local artists, in addition to Wiley and Conte's woven car, include Ron Mello of Middleboro with a frog on wheels constructed from ceramic, copper, brass and iron, Marshfield artist Sally Dean's Sacajawea constructed of wood, tin, resin and found objects. Diana Grygo of Quincy, also known as the "Lone Beader," has glass seed beads and acrylics.

The Bancroft Gallery located at 119 Ripley Road is open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Sunday noon to 4 p.m.

Ann Conte, left, points out the work that she and Jeanne Wiley did on a MG Midget to Valerie Mine, center, of Hingham and Valerie's sister Barbara Miller of Rockport. Mine's sculpture studio is next to Conte's at the Fourth Floor Artists building in Rockland.

Food allergies eat at father

Cohasset man launches Web site

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I wish there was a darn guide."

On a fateful night a few years back, Cohasset resident Paul Antico drove around for two hours looking for a place to take his two boys for dinner. It was a Saturday night and there were waits everywhere — and he had the complicating factor of his two boys had food allergies.

He needed a guide to tell him a restaurant in the area that had proven itself to be allergy-friendly.

Flash forward to today. Antico, a former Fidelity financial analyst and portfolio manager, is the entrepreneur behind a new Web site, AllergyEats (allergyeats.com). It is that "darn guide" Antico was wishing for.

The Web site lists more than 600,000 restaurants in the United States and depends on peer-to-peer ratings of how "friendly" a restaurant is in catering to people with food allergies and other food intolerances, like Celiac disease (gluten intolerance). It establishes a star rating and provides space for a written comment.

The information is searchable by geographic location, provides maps and driving directions, lists phone numbers and includes menus, industry certifications and other information of interest to food allergy sufferers when available.

"So many more people out there are being diagnosed with these allergies and (the restaurant industry) is beginning to understand they need to know how to deal with this," Antico said, who envisions people using the Web site in their neighborhood and while in more unknown territory on vacation.

According the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America Web site, food allergy is more common among children than adults. Ninety percent of all food allergy reactions are caused by eight foods: milk, soy, eggs, wheat, peanuts, tree nuts, fish and shellfish. AllergyEats allows users to search specific to each of those allergies.

"Too many people are being diagnosed with food allergies, and it is especially prevalent in young children. As a parent with a child who has food allergies it's a really scary thing," Antico said. "But people shouldn't be scared to eat out, and this gives them a good starting point."

As the father of five children, aged 12 to four months, two of whom have food allergies, Antico has an understanding of what a parent of a child with food allergies goes through.

"It's really hard when you first send your child to a birthday party with his own cupcake," Antico said, which is one of the main reasons he wanted to design this resource for parents and food allergy sufferers — to take some of the fear out of dining out with food allergies.

Antico describes the site as "dynamic" because of its reliance on user input.

"The database underneath the Web site is constantly changing," he said.

Visitors are asked to rate restaurants where they have had a dining experience and have specifically told the restaurant about their food allergies. They answer three questions about their dining experience, which is then used to develop a star rating for the eatery.

"I wanted a way to really quantify the information," Antico said of the star rating.

There is also a space for written comments where he hopes users share their experience and whether the food was fantastic (or not).

The initial response after the Web site's debut three weeks ago is good, Antico said. Ratings for restaurants in the greater Boston area have risen from a handful to around 80 restaurants, and there are pockets throughout the United States where word has spread about the Web site.

"People who have allergies and parents of kids with allergies have a bond, and with this Web site they are all trying to help each other," Antico said, adding he expects AllergyEats to have value for more than just those with food allergies. "Everyone knows at least one person with a food allergy and they can be the veto vote (for a restaurant)."

By providing practical information, in addition to ratings related to a restaurant's approach to food allergies, Antico hopes food allergy sufferers and others will return to the site again and again. In order for the site to be useful, users need to visit and rate restaurants. In order for users to come to the site, they need to find useful information there.

"I know it's a chicken and egg problem," Antico said. "The more we help each other, the more everyone is going to benefit."

Antico is spending the next few months promoting his product and striving to reach that critical mass of users. He has earned endorsements for AllergyEats from the Massachusetts Restaurant Association and the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America and is working on other partnerships. He is writing a biweekly blog and has useful information and links about food allergies and how to deal with them.

And he has plenty of ideas for the future, but is looking primarily to the users to direct the evolution of the site.

"I know I'm doing something good here," Antico said. "I'm going to do what I need to do to make this succeed."

Road race nearly sold out

Spring is just days away, and that means that the Cohasset Rotary Road Race by the Sea is only a few weeks away. Register now for the race, which takes place on Sunday, April 11, at 1 p.m. This year, the race is attracting record numbers and is on its way to a sellout field. Visit roadracebythesea.com to secure a spot in this 34-year-old Cohasset tradition which is one not to be missed.

The 6.2-mile road race is one of the most scenic 10Ks in New England. It's a course that has all the running challenges of a perfect race. There are rolling hills, and some flats, as the course winds itself throughout the backdrop of this seaside community.

Running the race is not the only option. There is also a walk on the same day, with a start and finish location at Sandy Beach. The Fran Coffey Memorial Fun Walk is a fantastic family event. It's the Sunday stroll that is both fun and raises money for local charities including Wellspring and People in Need. Walkers are also encouraged to register on line at roadracebythesea.com.

If running or walking is not your idea of fun, then please volunteer and help make the race the best it can be for all of our participants. If you have a group of friends, family or co-workers who would like to help out at registration, water stops or along the route, please contact roadracebythesea@gmail.com

This year the race is capped at 1770 — a number of historical significance, as it's the year in which Cohasset was incorporated. The number of registered runners is well on its way toward reaching that field size limit. So, if the Cohasset Rotary Road Race by the Sea 10K is on your list of "must do" events for 2010, please register now! Don't allow your hometown race to start with out you!

Schools change budget number

On Wednesday night, the School Committee reviewed its previously certified budget number and voted to make a change based on new information. The School Committee voted to reduce its budget request by $104,000, which brings it in line with the town manager's recommended budget.

The budget request now, which Town Meeting will consider Saturday, March 27, is just over $15 million.

School Committee chair Adrienne MacCarthy said five individuals came off the unemployment rolls in the past week, lowering the school's unemployment cost by $10,000 every month. Given that reduction, she proposed reducing the unemployment line item, a total of $240,000, by approximately $104,000.

"We'll still have $140,000 left in the line item," MacCarthy said.

If it turns out the line item was under-funded, the School Committee said they would have to go to the Advisory Committee or Town Meeting for an appropriation, an action that does have precedent.

"I think we should go in (to Town Meeting) with a balanced budget," School Committee member Helene Lieb said.

School business manager Dave DeGennaro said he felt comfortable with the reduction to the line item.

The School Committee voted 4-0 (member Lucia Flibotte abstained) to reduce the budget total.

April Veterans'Agent visiting hours

Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services will be at Paul Pratt Library, Room 2B, as follows: Saturday, April 3, 7:45 p.m.; Monday, April 5, 10 a.m. to noon; and Wednesday, April 7, 10 a.m. to noon. People can drop in or call ahead if they prefer. Visiting hours are not only for veterans, but also for spouses/surviving spouses and those concerned with aging parents (veterans/spouses) as well as for general advice.

If the aforementioned schedule does not meet one's needs, the veterans' agent will meet people at a convenient location and time, i.e., the library, his home, people's homes. The Cohasset Veterans Agent is Joe McElroy. For more information, call him at 781-383-0505 or email cohjoe@aol.com.

Recreation fair is March 21

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office, or visit www.cohassetrec.com or call 781-383-4109.

Recreation Fair – One of the biggest problems families run into when planning summer activities is that their options are spread out over many venues and information isn't always available when it's needed.

The Recreation Fair is Cohasset's solution, and then some. The Cohasset Recreation Department is hosting this year's event at the Deer Hill School on Sunday, March 21, from 1 to 4 p.m. In addition to fun games, food and giveaways the fair will be the kick-off event for summer registrations for a variety of youth programs in town including the summer recreation program, sailing, all of the recreation departments summer programs, and more.

Rec. Center dances and events

Club 45 – Parties for children in grades four and five. Register online up to one hour before each party. Popcorn, pizza, and beverage will be included. Activities will include billiards, ping pong, music, Nintendo Wii, air hockey, and other fun activities. Friday, March 26, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Cohasset Rec. Center. Fee is $8.

Kids Just Love Crafts – Join others for a jam filled program of ooey, gooey arts and crafts, stories and songs. Watch your 2 to 4 year-old child make a mess and have some fun as they create crafts that can be treasured for a lifetime. Space is limited to 10 children with a parent. Session is March 25 through May 6. Takes place at the Cohasset Recreation Center on Thursdays from 10 to 10:45 a.m. Fee is $60.

Babysitter's Training Course – This one-day, three-hour, held on March 27, from 9 a.m. to noon. The course is designed to assist fifth through eighth graders to be better babysitters and to learn the do's and don'ts of being home alone. Instructed by Kimberly Cleary, nurse and mom. The course will cover information on child development, playing with younger children, basic first aid, fire safety and prevention, and the overall responsibilities of babysitting. Each class is limited to 18 pre-registered students. Fee is $20 per student.

American Girl Doll Top Chef or Star Wars Jedi Training by EventFull – Saturday, March 20, at Cohasset Town Hall – ages 5 to 10; $49 per program.

American Girl – Join and bring your special American Girl friend to this workshop for several hours that you will both enjoy. Turn your American Girl into a Chef! You will creatively design a stove top, chef hat, doll play food and more. 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Star Wars Jedi Training – Participate in several hours that have everything to with star wars. Activities include: designing and making your own recycled Droid and learning what it is to be a Jedi Knight. May the force be with you? 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. send your child with peanut free snack and drink.

Instant Piano – Tuesday, March 23, at Cohasset Town Hall – 1 to 4:30 p.m. or 6:30 to 10 p.m. By the time you leave this most entertaining and info-packed class, you will have learned more than enough to get you going on your own wonderful musical journey...and have fun in the process. Cost $64; includes instruction, and textbook with accompanying CD for home study and practice. $30 for returning students for a refresher course without materials.

Rocket Camp – Wednesday, March 31, at Cohasset Town Hall, 1:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. Students in kindergarten through fifth grade will learn about rockets, how they work and how they fly. They will build and launch their own rockets. Cost is $25.

Suddenly in Command - This four-hour United States Coast Guard Auxiliary boating safety primer is designed for those not generally at the helm, and will help participants be prepared with the basics in case of an emergency. Students will learn about your vessel, including nomenclature and operating principles including starting the engine. Also included are descriptions of what causes boating mishaps and how to minimize them, basic boat handling and what equipment should be on board. Class is Saturday, April 10 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall and costs $35.

Introduction to Geocaching – This course, held the evening of Saturday, April 17, from 4 to 5 p.m. is focused on the up-and-coming activity of Geo Caching, a modern day treasure hunting experience. You will learn how to get coordinates for a geo trip and learn the skills necessary to use a GPS system. Later on use the GPS to find a treasure of your own. This course is designed to be enjoyed by individuals, couples and families. This course, which meets at Cohasset Town Hall, is open to all ages and families. The fee is $40 per child, and $75 per adult.

Rock Climbing – Students ages 8 and up have fun while learning techniques and how to use the equipment necessary to climb with confidence by professional guides. Top-roping allows for a safe climbing experience that builds confidence. This program meets from 9 a.m. to noon, Monday, April 19 to Wednesday, April 21 during April vacation week at Quarry Hills in Quincy. The fee is $95 per climber.

Nantucket Daffodil Festival – The Cohasset Recreation Department will be taking a group of travelers on a trip to Nantucket for the day on Saturday, April 24. Bus departs Cohasset Town Hall at 6 a.m. for a day of fun on the island. The fee is $119, which includes a guided tour, or $99 without the tour. Includes round trip motor coach transportation to Hyannis, round trip Fast Ferry to Nantucket and Guide and tour. You will have time to shop and have lunch on your own.

FOCUSING ON THE TASK AT HAND

Talking on a cell phone while driving sharply decreases the brain activity needed to control a vehicle, even if it's a hands-free phone. That warning comes from researchers who used functional magnetic resonance imaging (fMRI) to record the brain activity of people who drove while having the task complicated by listening to speech. They found that listening while driving caused a 37% decrease in the brain activity needed to drive. If this is the extent to which a casual conversation compromises the ability to drive, one can only imagine what happens when drivers text message. Automobile manufacturers can provide drivers with all the high-tech safety systems they can develop, but when all is said and done, driving behavior is key.

When you're driving, safety should always be your first thought. Refraining from texting is just one of the habits that can improve your driving safety. Getting into the habit of providing regularly scheduled maintenance is another. Because a well maintained car is a safe car. At ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT, our ASE-certified technicians can provide the preventive maintenance that not only improves your car's safety, but also catches small problems before they become big (and expensive) problems. Call 781-925-3200 today...but not while you're driving! We are located at 25 Atlantic House Rd. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Hwy., Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

HINT: Any activity that diverts drivers' attention from the road, from tuning the radio to reading, compromises safety.

OPINION

Tough sell

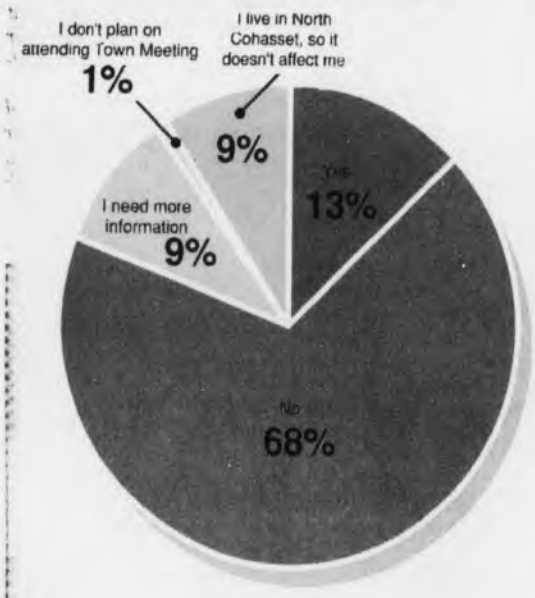
Although selectmen decided last week to table a potential water rate increase until a special Town Meeting in June, it was the subject of our poll question at wickedlocal.com/cohasset before the vote. If the mood of the respondents is any indication, town officials will have some convincing to do between now and then, because more than 60 percent said they would not vote for the increase. (Full results are in the graph below.)

Of our comments, however, the first, from kmckeon, was positive: "The water rates should be increased for as long as it takes to offset the cost to upgrade the system. Nobody could possibly understand the long-term effects this water could have on our health (especially our kids). Clear/colorless water should not be something we waste a lot of time voting on. Lets just fix it."

Cohasset Resident saw things differently in two posts, the second of which was specific to kmckeon's point:

"Enough is enough. Cohasset will have THE highest water rates in (Massachusetts) by a wide margin, yet our water quality is near the bottom of the list and is a legitimate health concern. Begs the question — why are we as a town in the water business at all? Please join me in voting against this rate increase at the Town Meeting. These annual 20 percent-plus increases are unsustainable and we as a town need an immediate solution (such as exiting the water business entirely). We allowed our officials to lead us to this point — join me in sending them the message that they must find another alternative besides these unbridled rate increases. They have gone to the well for the final time (pun intended)."

"The comment above that 'the water rates should be increased for as long as it takes to upgrade the system' isn't necessarily consistent with the problem. The water department has $36 million in debt for 'upgrades' that were made many years ago. This increase in the water rate is to cover the debt service costs associated with those historic expenditures. The (additional money) you will be paying will not improve your water quality one bit. Our water quality is so poor, on their Web site the Cohasset Water Department actually suggests we buy bottled water to drink. So, in return for the highest water rates in (Massachusetts), we get an undrinkable and hazardous product. If we would replace Cohasset Water with Aquarian, we would all save (money) and have safe drinking water for our families.



RogerQHill was short and to the point: "If they raise the rate I get a well!!!"

Again, it looks like increasing water rates could be a tough sell.

POLL POSITION

Last week's poll results

Will you vote for the water rate increase?

This week's poll

Annual Town Meeting is set for this coming Saturday, March 27. A total of 23 articles will be brought before voters. What Town Meeting article do you think will generate the most discussion?

MEETINGS

The following meetings are posted at Town Hall:

Advisory Committee, March 23, at 7 p.m., at Town Hall; March 27 at 8 a.m. at the annual Town Meeting at the high school.
Alternative Energy Committee, March 16, 7 p.m.
Conservation Commission, March 18, 7 p.m.
Library Trustees, April 8, 7 p.m., at the library
Planning Board, March 13 at 11 a.m. at the library and March 24, 7 p.m. at Town Hall.
Recreation Commission, April 6, 6:30.
School Committee, March 17, 7 p.m. at the high school.
Selectmen, March 15 and 22 , 7 p.m.
Sewer Commission, April 13, 6 p.m.
Water Commission, March 15 at 6 p.m. at the King Street plant.
ZBA, April 6, 7:30 p.m.

All meetings take place at Town Hall unless otherwise noted. Call the Town Clerk's office at 781-383-4100 for updates and additions.

Increases in water rates could produce drastic water saving measures

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thanks to Newcomers for generosity

TO THE EDITOR:

With tremendous appreciation, the Helping Hands Essentials Pantry offers our thanks to the members of the Scituate/Cohasset Newcomers Club for the items collected for us during their toiletries drive. We were overwhelmed by the generosity of the residents of Scituate.

Based in Quincy, the Helping Hands Essentials Pantry provides personal care items to members of the South Shore community in need, with a focus on the working poor who function at or near the poverty line. While other social services programs offer food and clothing, few provide the selection of toiletries such as toothpaste, diapers, soap, shampoo, razors, toilet paper and much more that we supply. Last month, we served 106 families from six different towns on the South Shore. As other social service agencies continue to refer otherwise marginalized families to us, we expect that number to grow exponentially. Donations from caring groups like the Newcomers will go a long way in supporting the pantry and our constituents.

We invite you to join us at the pantry from 9:30 a.m. to noon, on the second Saturday of each month to see the Newcomers' donations in action. Please contact me at essentialspantry@christchurchquincy.org if you would like to receive additional information about how to get involved.

Contract process was a mess

TO THE EDITOR:

First, thanks to Ann Musto for her terrific letter last week regarding skyrocketing school committee legal fees.

Unfortunately, it's not surprising with an administration in constant conflict with everyone from teachers, to paraprofessionals to special needs children and their parents, as well as just citizens and taxpayers trying to apply some common sense and a fair process to school decisions.

And when you see certain school committee members' heads bobbing up and down in unison every time Superintendent Denise Walsh issues some proclamation — no matter how dumb an idea — the sound you are hearing is ka-ching, ka-ching, ka-ching... money pouring out of the pockets of taxpayers and away from resources for our children.

The latest school committee boondoggle has to do with Walsh's contract; recall it's one of the most expensive of nearly all other towns in our region, even those with larger systems. It seems the committee, under the direction of Chair Adrienne McCarthy, actually allowed a renewal of Walsh's contract, nearly three months before conducting the required formal performance evaluation. Huh? That's like letting students take the test after they get the grade.

It's not only a violation of the contract itself, and highly irregular, but very ill advised, considering it's one of the most important and expensive personnel contracts in our community.

When asked to explain by numerous parents in several emails, McCarthy responded that she would only communicate on this by private phone conversation. Pressed for a written reply for nearly three weeks and a dozen e-mails from seven or eight families, she still would not provide a simple explanation as to why she ran the process that way.

After weeks of pressure and with a committee meeting looming, it was put on the meeting agenda.

Days ago, we received some eight pages of "legal analysis" from school committee lawyers, who McCarthy apparently engaged to explain to the community just what she was thinking. Eight pages of "legal backfill" to finally get to the main point that yes, they got it wrong, very wrong... apparently for at least a second time, and that they would try not to repeat it again.

After years of conducting what amounts to one of the most important tasks the committee has, one would hope it could be done right. It's not complicated.

But also, wouldn't it be refreshing if just once someone actually took responsibility and said simply, "We got it wrong," instead of trying to shift blame to other committee members or hide behind layers of lawyers. No wonder legal bills are sky-high and on the rise.

Now, additional concerns have surfaced that as part of the review process — when it finally did happen —concerns about Walsh's performance and approach submitted by committee members may have been excluded or removed from the final evaluation summary. Much like the budget, the murkiness around this process just seems to keep growing.

Community support makes spelling bee a success

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the CEF, we would like to thank all those businesses, school administrators, teachers, volunteers and families that helped to make this year's third annual spelling bee a huge success.

Two-hundred fifty students in grades two through five turned out on a very soggy Sunday to put their spelling skills to the test, enjoy the spirit of competition and celebrate learning. Hats off to all of the spelling bee participants and their families. They are all winners!

We would especially like to thank our corporate and private sponsors: Black Rock Country Club, Boston School of Etiquette, Coastal Nissan, Del's Lemonade, Harbor Medical Associates, Hill Realty Trust, Shaw's Supermarkets, Stop & Shop Companies, Suzi Corkhum/Usborne Books, the Bernsee, Devin, Donahue, Dunkelberger, Schubert, Vainisi and Whetstone families. Special thanks also go out to Eymer Design, Millennium Printing and Goodwin Graphics.

Practice that spelling and we'll see you next year!

Change to sewer funding is justified

TO THE EDITOR:

Passage of Article 23 of the Town Warrant would give the town the ability to take future action that could change the funding of the Little Harbor and Jerusalem Road sewer projects from 100 percent by residents to 50 percent by residents and 50 percent by the town. This change would make the funding of these two new projects the same as the current payment structure of the North Cohasset and Central projects. This change is justified, as the town has never required a sewer project to be funded 100 percent by the users; the town has always shared the costs of these projects.

To deny cost sharing to these new projects would be unfair and inequitable, as these residents are currently sharing the costs of existing systems in town. Furthermore, by sewering Little Harbor, these residents have saved the town the fines it was subject to under the state's court order.

The issue before the town is one of town values and ethics. Is it fair for the town to apply standards to one minority group, Little Harbor sewer users, different than they have applied to all the other sewer users in town? The answer in an ethical sense is clear — fairness and equity for all sewer users.

How the voters respond at Town Meeting and in any future election that may be authorized will reveal the values they hold to be important. They can vote to pull together for fairness and equity for all, or they can choose to discriminate against a minority group for a small financial gain to themselves. What are Cohasset values today? The voters will tell us.

Looking toward the future

LETTER FROM IRAQ

MATT TREVITHICK

COURTESY PHOTO

PUK/KDP (Patriotic Union of Kurdistan/Kurdistan Democratic Party) supporter holds the Kurdish flag. Today, the two former enemies (PUK/KDP) are sharing a ticket in an attempt to stay politically viable against a rising sea of new parties.

We thought our Cohasset readers would enjoy this article from Hingham resident, Matt Trevithick.

The men and the women who have just voted in Sulaymaniyah, in northern Iraq, dutifully line up to be photographed by the ogling press, who are looking for that picture of someone triumphantly holding up a purple ink-stained finger. The photographers want a woman or girl, and ideally she is veiled. "It looks powerful," they say. A quick check on the websites of major world newspapers a day later confirms this.

Judging by the number of purple fingers (most proudly on display) around the city, it seems that voting was the weekend activity of choice for most people, the youth in particular. I've heard students complaining that every single one of their friends changed their Facebook profile picture to one of them holding up a purple finger, and that it's "just so cliché."

People did not brave violence to vote here, which could explain the high turnout. But, as in elsewhere in the country, in the last few days leading up to the elections, curfews were imposed, concrete barriers blocked off roads, and regular policemen (in contrast to the military who are usually assigned these kinds of tasks) were deployed in record numbers. Those same policemen, as well as doctors and others deemed critical to the nation, voted ahead of the scheduled elections to ensure there would be enough help around the country on election day, should it be needed.

The venture into the voting booth was the culminating event of a weeks long run-up to the national parliamentary elections in this war torn nation. The campaigning gloves came off a month ago, at midnight, when anyone who was anyone was out on the streets. There was no mistake: it was hunting season in Iraq for every last vote.

Unlike in quiet suburban US towns where half or fewer of the residents vote or take much notice of their democratic privileges, the passing of midnight here in Sulaymaniyah on a weekend last month set off an explosion of energy. Every day, this city of one million people woke up to see even more election posters crammed into every space imaginable. Cars became advertisement for one party or the other, and wherever one party set up shop, others soon followed, in a never-ending game of "mine's bigger.") Six-story buildings were covered entirely with some party's logo. This is not the land of snippy little bumper stickers that promote the date of one individual's last day in office: this is the home of in your face, in your head politics. As the vote would be split by a few major parties that have launched themselves above the fray, the competition was fierce.

That competition was played out through TV, print, radio, and, of course, the internet. Unlike in the US where the media tout their objectivity, here most large parties fund their own TV and radio stations, websites, and even their own newspapers. The students and faculty at the nearby American University of Iraq like to joke that, after starting a student newspaper last month (www.auisvoice.org), they have created one of Iraq's first independent newspapers. They are probably right.

The bigger political parties here have histories that are steeped in intrigue and violence. Fifteen years ago, the two main parties of northern Iraq, the PUK (Patriotic Union of Kurdistan) and the KDP (Kurdistan Democratic Party) were engaged in a violent political struggle that left thousands dead. One side went so far as to enlist the help of the hated Saddam Hussein in a failed attempt to route the other. Iran even got involved; another joke here says the fighting only stopped after a meeting where both sides realized the other had Iranian advisors. Syria and Turkey, just next door, were likely watching closely.

In 1998, both sides worked out a tentative peace brokered by Madeline Albright, and remained in charge of separate areas of the region until 2006. Today, those two former enemies are sharing a ticket in an attempt to stay politically viable against a rising sea of new parties (their biggest competition, in a possible nod to American politics, is known as the Change party).

There is a strong hope that this election will change life for the better, even as this part of the country has profited immensely from the 2003 war. Some voters are concerned with how the region's voice will be heard in Baghdad, while others muse over the likelihood of decreasing systemic corruption. Still others, like the female candidates running for Parliament, hope to substantially improve the standing of women in society (Iraqi law dictates that one quarter of the seats in Parliament be reserved for women). These women, occasionally pushing their agenda to the very limit of society's firmly entrenched standards, are as bold as they are fearless: one of their female colleagues has already been gunned down in protest of her agenda.

At the local level, people are excited about what the elections may bring. As a senior Iraqi government official told me, "if you take a look around the neighborhood [the Middle East], this is the only place where the people are determining their own future. This is an exciting time for us." On a national level, however, things look less optimistic. The Sunni minority feels threatened, the Shiite majority appears uncompromising, and already violence has noticeably increased. Regardless of the outcome of the elections, a nation broken by chaos appears to be looking hopefully to the future – even as it knows that the final results, expected soon, will only mark the start of a long struggle to establish a cohesive government.

Matt Trevithick of Hingham works at the American University of Iraq – Sulaimani, where he is the assistant to the provost.

Paving is priority

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Spring has sprung
The grass has riz
I wonder where the paving is?

Of course we are referring to the completion of the paving operations that were begun in 2008 and continued last year as to put our roads back into shape after the Little Harbor Sewer, Water and Drainage Project work was completed. But before we discuss that, let's re-cap a bit about the function of the Greenbush Office for those of you who may be new to Town.

The Greenbush Office was started in early 2005 by the Town Manager to act as the Town's interface with the MBTA and their contractors for the massive Greenbush Commuter Rail Project, which was just getting underway. As time went on, since we are both engineers, the Town Manager found it useful to have a technical resource that could be involved in other projects beyond the Greenbush Project.

Some of these "other projects" were the major Village Revitalization project that updated the roads, sidewalks, drainage and added plantings and other visual improvements in the central village area. Another major project was the complete rebuild of Forest Avenue, with the installation of new sidewalk from Main St. to Jerusalem Rd. along with drainage improvements. Other sidewalk projects were also initiated and completed on Lower King St., Beechwood St., and Rocky Lane, as well as on Border St. at the Gulf River Bridge. We have been asked to play a major role on behalf of the DPW in the paving that will complete the Little Harbor Project.

So, that summarizes the past. Now let's look at the future. We have several major projects on our agenda for 2010.

Little Harbor Project

First and foremost on our list is the completion of the paving for the Little Harbor Project. Early next week we will be meeting with the Sewer and Water Commissioners to get their scheduling input. Next, we will meet with the paving and road preparation contractors to plan the Little Harbor paving tasks and the completion schedule. The three major roads to be paved are Beach St., Jerusalem Road and Atlantic Ave. Their side roads will be addressed when the main road is paved. Due to the very heavy trenching that was done on some of these roads, grinding the old surface will be necessary to properly restore the road base so that it is suitable for paving.

Just like last year, National Grid Gas will be renewing gas service lines in some of the same streets we will be paving. So, these gas line upgrades represent work that we will need to schedule around. Of course, we only want to do our paving after National Grid is finished with their work in each road.

Jacobs Meadow Outfall Project

A close second on the priority list is the design and construction of a new Jacobs Meadow outfall channel at the Legion. This project will replace the collapsing Jacobs Meadow outfall channel next to the American Legion building on Border Street as well as upgrade the tide gate structure in the Harbor. The net result will be a vastly improved drainage system for Jacobs Meadow. This will help the periodic flooding that occurs bordering the Meadow. Another benefit will be better control over the flow of salt water into Jacobs Meadow, which will improve the environmental health of this salt marsh.

This month we received the final contract for the $450,000 grant awarded to Cohasset by the Commonwealth for this project. Now, we can begin the final design and construction of Jacobs Meadow outfall project. An initial planning meeting was held with Vine Associates, the Town's engineering consultant for this project. In this meeting, the project schedule was set and progress has begun to complete the design. We hope to be able to review the preliminary design drawings within the next several weeks. Abutters can expect us to contact them to explain about the project and potential impacts that the construction might impose. Area residents may notice surveyors working around the Jacobs Meadow outfall area as we begin to prepare the necessary project plans and details.

Other Projects

Also this year, we will be completing the addition of new sidewalk on Route 3A from Lower King St. to the Greenbush Station. Other projects on our "to do" list for 2010 are paving projects on Sohier St., Pond St. and Beechwood St. So, you can see a lot more about to happen. All of this work must be coordinated with all of the various activities that take place in Cohasset each year such as: the Rotary Road Race, The Cohasset Triathlon, the Art Festival, and the Farmers Market. It's shaping up as another busy construction year around Cohasset.

Collapsed wall at the Legion.

A drawing of Stalin

By Rosmarie Engel-Conn
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

1945: In Germany, the Russian troops had just invaded and occupied the little village near Wittenberg/Saxony where I lived.

Life was insecure and shaky — what would happen next?

My father was still missing at the Russian battlefields; my mother tried to hide two teenage girls, my sister and me. All of us living in fear!

Daily life was harsh. A lost war, nearly no food supply after the invasion. People left their houses only in case of necessities. The one main road crossing the villages was empty now, and then the sharp horns of Russian military cars and loud voices in a strange language.

Scared after a long exhausted wartime, which had ended in disaster despite all efforts on the home front, the big question, what would happen next?

One morning, a sharp knocking at the door! A quick spy behind curtains. Two Russian soldiers, wearing brown uniforms with guns hanging over their shoulders. What a shock! Trembling and fearing we were! We two girls crawled under a bed — my mother, always a courageous woman, opened the door a little but the soldiers pushed it wide open. "Daughter Ros-Ma-Rie with us!" There was no resistance possible. My mother's knees wiggled, holding herself on the doorframe. Rosmarie! That was me! Horrified I came out of my hiding spot. The soldiers pushed my mother aside, who wanted to come with me. But holding my hand so tight, they let her come.

During the short drive in an open jeep — no word, only the stern, iron faces of the soldiers — what my mother must have felt these moments I could only understand later. Being only 17, I was shocked, but rather unaware of the danger I was in. Arriving at the headquarters on the little marketplace, holding tight to each other, we followed the soldiers into a small room. It was cold and hardly furnished; table chairs and sideboard — only necessities — a faded dry smell of nothing in the air.

An officer in a colorful decorated brown uniform entered the room. He barely looked at the two of us, standing. No greeting — who would have expected anyway!

In his hand was a page of a newspaper showing a small photo of Stalin, the Russian leader. "You draw big for Russian commandant, tomorrow" he said with a sharp determination.

I found myself holding the newspaper page in my hand. The two soldiers who had posed in the background pushed us out of the room and drove us, still breathing in fear and shaky, back to the house.

So I sat down at once with a wild beating heart and trembling fingers. Would I be able to do the drawing to their satisfaction? And if not, what could happen to me? I stared at Stalin's face; his big, square head, the strong mustache. The black hair brushed back he looked at me with a sharp glance in his eyes, and I started this strange urgent mission.

The next morning, the bang at the door again, no words, two soldiers followed by two scared women. Then waiting for the officer in the unfriendly office. He stared at my drawing, compared it with the photo. Would he accept my drawing? Nearly breathless I looked at him. He waved to one of the soldiers, standing guard in the background and gave a short order, not understandable to us.

Then, something wonderful happened — a long, huge fresh smelling bread — heavy was it, was handed to me. Unexpected, so much needed food for the next days!

Sitting in the jeep again, holding the brown crusted, warm bread on my knees like a treasure I felt so good, overwhelmed, relieved, out of danger. Even a little bit proud of my drawing, which would be displayed in the future at the wall to demonstrate the power of the Russian leader.

For the next few weeks the Mariner will be publishing the memoirs of Cohasset resident Rosmarie Engel-Conn. The 83-year-old German native has written down some of her most vivid memories and experiences as a teenager during World War II.

She lived under Adolf Hitler's rule, worked in an ammunitions factory as part of mandated service to the country, narrowly survived the bombing of Dresden, and escaped harm when the Russian army marched into her village just outside of Wittenburg.

This year is the 65th anniversary of the end of World War II.

Her memoir "A drawing of Stalin" is the second installment in the series. To read previous essays, visit www.wickedlocal.com/cohasset.

The group meets every Tuesday morning at 10:30 a.m. beginning April 27 through June 15. Space is limited. Register online through the Web site or call for further information.

Ongoing at the Library – Brain Fitness, a computer program designed to exercise auditory and memory skills; Knitting Group, 10 a.m. on Wednesdays. Edna Finnegan from the senior center will be on hand to help people learn how to knit or help with a knitting project.

Patrick takes a swing at Baker

STATEHOUSE ROUNDUP

JIM O'SULLIVAN

Gov. Deval Patrick is matching the vocabulary of President Barack Obama's concurrent push for a health care bill in Congress.

A recap and analysis of the week in state government.

Every once in a while in government, just when the eyes start to glaze over and loll backwards at yammering about the consumer price index and biannual open enrollment periods for health insurance, a policy door opens and the political enters.

Gov. Deval Patrick emerged last Wednesday from unremarkable testimony on his plan to check surges in health insurance costs, featuring twin "soft caps" on the rates insurers charge customers and providers charge insurers, to address a summoned throng of professional message filters and promptly strafed Republican rival Charles Baker by looking to indict Baker as a co-conspirator.

"My frustration has been, in the last three years, is that all of those players in the industry have come in and sat around my table, over and over again, and they've sat around other tables in this building and in conference rooms all over this town, and they talk about why it is they can't help but charge double-digit increases every year to small businesses and families. And those small businesses and families don't have a voice at that table. They have my voice at that table," Patrick said.

If that message sounds familiar — vilifying insurers and rhetorically adopting the standard of the small businesses and the families — it's because Patrick is matching the vocabulary of President Barack Obama's concurrent push for a health care bill in Congress.

"Charlie Baker is one of those people who came up, and frankly, you know, I'd like to see him express himself and show some support here. I'd like to see the other candidates show up on this subject," Patrick said.

Call the tactic rope-a-dope, bait-and-switch, if-you-don't-like-what's-being-said-change-the-conversation. The conversation, in this case, having centered on the diminishment of the governor's lead over Baker, who enjoyed a nifty twofer in an automated poll that showed both him pulling into a statistical tie with the governor and unenrolled Treasurer Timothy Cahill sliding a few points — just the equation Baker needs. Last Wednesday was a marked change in messaging for Patrick, who last month, after he announced the plan, was offered a chance to nip Baker over it and declined. This time, with mild inducement from a reporter and the spur of a worrisome poll, the governor lunged.

Patrick has also run into a rough patch with the Boston Herald, the city's tabloid of record, whose tough recent coverage of Patrick and his aides merited its own bullet point in last Wednesday morning's super-secret confab of the highest-ranking figures of the administration's thickly populated and occasionally responsive communications army.

Their marching orders, and those disseminated to the Patrick campaign ranks and Twitter readers, are now shifting. It has become time for them, and Patrick, to engage with the enemy, define the battlefield and, finally, launch a counterattack. Patrick will, for sure, loop in and out of the combat, sometimes opting to retreat to the general's tent and other times charge forth, but his performance last Wednesday — naming names, dropping pretenses — signaled his return to the campaign trail, acknowledgment that this sucker's going to get spicy and willingness to stand and throw that his admirers have worried has been lacking.

Lt. Gov. Timothy Murray, for months the administration's Horatio-at-the-bridge against the onslaught of broadsides and barbs, has a posse.

Policy-wise, Speaker Robert DeLeo helped House members into their johnnies and wheeled them into the operating room last Tuesday in preparation for what will likely be the uncomfortable procedure of informing local officials that, a year after tax hikes on the order of $1 billion, their assistance from Beacon Hill would likely sink this election year. At the same time, the governor, speaker and Senate President Therese Murray were all cocking eyebrows at a plan by those self-same local officials to circumvent them and appeal directly to the voters for authority to strike collective bargaining hurdles from the development of municipal health insurance plans, an idea the state's public employee unions absolutely abhor.

Privately, some capitol denizens said they were thrilled with the mayors' push, which comes as health care costs increasingly gobble municipal budgets. If the mayors go to the ballot and win, the Hill thinking in some corners goes, the state could score the savings without state officials absorbing the political damage inherent in making the AFL-CIO's head explode.

Meantime, the House and Senate circled each other over the depth of the local aid cut, upon which they agreed to agree before failing to agree, publicly anyway, until last Friday afternoon. In a process virtually entirely detached from the membership, consolidating what is perennially one of the Legislature's most contentious floor debates — with repercussions in 351 localities' trash disposal, police departments, classrooms — into the confines of a few offices, the barons of each chamber announced as the week ended, in a two-paragraph release, that they would cut state assistance to cities and towns by no more than $200 million, or 4 percent.

The Senate president wheeled out a fresh olive branch to businesses last Friday, dangling corporate tax incentives along with the unemployment insurance rate freeze already in effect and the in utero Senate plan to consolidate the state's economic development bureaucracy. That last bit, it's important to remember, was the product of Murray's sting operation against Patrick's agencies. The idea was for Senate staffers to engage in a little cloak-and-dagger, telephonic inquiry into rumors about how ineffectual certain agencies were. Turns out, the espionage revealed, they were.

"The system has been tested," Murray said, downright clinical in her disappointment.

Murray has repeatedly diagnosed the system as broken, lacking cohesion, and in doing so delivered a scarcely veiled rebuke to claims of fulfillment for one of Patrick's campaign promises: "making government run at the speed of business." Uncomfortable for the governor, who must deal with both traditional election year razzing from the opposition and broken-promise chidings from party affiliates.

Sixty years of pop culture in 90 seconds — "A few years ago, I spoke about domestic violence, 1950s, Jackie Gleason and Art Carney, on 'The Honeymooners,' remember the funny things that made everybody laugh: 'One more time, Alice, and POW, to the moon.' Remember that show? … We don't accept that anymore … We've all heard how we can have instant parties now in high school and probably college, because you put it on Facebook and four minutes later there's 400 kids at a party, because we have the technology," state Sen. Stephen Brewer took to the small screen and the Internets last Thursday in discussing the anti-bullying bill, meting out at breakneck pace a complex analysis of how technology and social mores have evolved over time.

Questioned about the discourse after the Senate passed the bill, Brewer acknowledged, "I wouldn't know a Twitter from a fritter." The Senate approved both the anti-bullying bill and the House-backed school nutrition bill reining in unhealthy food sales, meaning that if you're a mean kid who has been subsisting on Twinkies and butt-kickings, your life's about to change.

HEALTH NOTES

Disposing of drugs

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Both state and federal guidance is available in abundance about the problems of medications, their use both proper and improper, their disposal and the consequences of not getting it right.

Many of the problems for individuals in a household and neighborhood could be avoided if the opportunities and temptations associated with mishandling and disposal of drugs or harmful substances were avoided.

Too much advice and data are available on the Web and in the media to process. If you want a satisfactory answer, it's probably better to read our own straightforward approach to drug disposal by using the following set of rules:

• Pour medicine into a sealable plastic bag. If the medicine is a solid, add a small amount of water to dissolve it.

• Add any undesirable substance such as dirt, coffee grounds or kitty litter to the liquid medicine in the plastic bag. Seal the bag and immediately dispose of it in the trash for regular pickup. Use a marker to black out any useful information on prescriptions or empty medicine containers prior to disposing of them in the trash.

• Do not flush medicine down the toilet unless accompanying product information instructs that it is safe to do so. Don't keep unneeded medications in the home.

Now, with so many drugs and other medications requiring epipens, needles and injection devices called sharps and other disposable paraphernalia, the difficulty is even more pronounced.

The board of health has long had a continuing concern about the safe handling of medical paraphernalia, and now that a growing number and diversity of drugs and medications are entering people's homes, our concern has heightened.

Medical sharps include syringes, lancets, needles and other types of medical equipment that are used in the treatment of diabetes, allergies or other forms of home health care. Discarding loose sharps or syringes in the trash poses a risk to the people that collect and handle the trash. Used sharps can pass on germs and diseases. Even a single needle stick from a contaminated sharp can transmit diseases like Hepatitis B or HIV, the virus that causes AIDS.

Several million people inject medicines into themselves or someone for whom they act as a caregiver. It has been conservatively estimated that more than 3 billion needles are produced each year. All of them will have to be disposed of after their useful life has ended. In years past, it was recommended that the user simply dispose of his or her needles and other sharps in the trash. For years, it has been recommended to place the items in a household plastic container or coffee can, secure the lid and write "do not recycle" on the outside and simply place it in the household trash. However, this method does not really remove the sharp from the solid waste stream and it results in an increased risk of needle stick injuries for trash haulers, children and even animals.

Disposing of sharps in residential trash is the least preferable disposal alternative. However, if no other options are available, place the used needles and other sharps in a two-liter (No. 1 plastic PETE) soda bottle. Keep the bottle capped when not in use. PETE No. 1 is recommended because it has been shown to be more puncture-resistant than other types of plastic bottles. Check the bottom of the bottle for the No. 1 PETE chasing arrow symbol.

When the bottle has been filled, cap it tightly and seal it with heavy tape (duct tape is a good choice) and label it "Warning: Sharps! Do not recycle!"

If you have a problem with a specific drug, call us at 781-383-4116. We can also help with disposal; soon we will be operating a med disposal caddy in town hall. Just bring your meds or any sharps into the area near the soft drink machine and lavatories and an un-tamperable disposal device will be available there for you. When the device is fully ready, an announcement will be made, signs will appear and you'll probably read another Mariner article mentioning the fact.

In the meantime, for more information or in case of an accidental poisoning, call the poison center at 800-222-1222 or call Tara Tradd at 383-4116 or Mary Goodwin at 383-2210.

ALLOW CITY OF LAWRENCE TO BORROW $35 MILLION (H 4516)

Senate 31-4, approved a bill allowing the city of Lawrence to borrow up to $35 million to help balance its budget and solve its fiscal crisis. The measure calls for an overseer to manage the city's affairs and develop a three-year plan to achieve fiscal stability. If at anytime the overseer determines that the city cannot balance its budget and that the safety of citizens is in danger, the state would abolish the overseer position and appoint a finance control board with more power to run the city's finances.

Supporters of the bill said that it is a reasonable one which would give Lawrence the ability to responsibly borrow up to $35 million in order to get back on its feet. They noted that the measure includes the safeguard that would enable the state to take the more drastic move of appointing a finance control board if necessary.

Opponents said that the overseer provision is a weak one that does not go far enough and urged that the tougher finance control board be instituted immediately. They noted that the state's taxpayers would eventually be stuck with a $35 million bill if the city defaults on the loan.

The House has approved a different version of the proposal and the Senate version now goes to the House for consideration.

(A "Yes" vote is for the bill allowing Lawrence to borrow up to $35 million. A "No" vote is against the bill). N

IMMEDIATELY APPOINT A FINANCE CONTROL BOARD FOR LAWRENCE (H 4516)

Senate 7-28, rejected a Republican-sponsored new version of the Lawrence bill including a provision that would immediately put a five-member state finance control board in charge of the city. The original measure would install an overseer who could eventually call for the control board if he or she feels that the city cannot balance it budget.

Supporters of the GOP version said that the control board would have more power to ensure that the city acts responsibly and gets back on its feet.

Opponents of the GOP version said that it goes too far and noted that they support the appointment of an overseer with the future option of a control board.

(A "Yes" vote is for the Republican version that calls for the immediate appointment of a control board. A "No" vote is against the Republican version). Y

MORE NUTRITIOUS FOOD IN SCHOOLS (S 2314)

Senate 37-0, approved a bill that would ban junk food in schools and require the Department of Public Health to develop new and healthy nutritional standards for food sold in all school cafeterias and vending machines.

The proposal mandates that the standards include requiring that schools offer fruits or vegetables, drinking water at no cost and nutritional information about any non-prepackaged foods. It also bans the use of fryolators in the preparation of food.

Other provisions create a special commission on nutrition and childhood obesity; establish guidelines to assist school nurses in screening and referring children suffering from childhood obesity, diabetes and eating disorders; require that all schools include nutrition and exercise in their curricular and encourage public schools, colleges and universities to purchase locally grown foods from Massachusetts farms.

Supporters said that schools should not promote the sale of junk food and drinks that are unhealthy and have contributed to an increase in child obesity and diabetes. They noted that one in three Massachusetts middle school students and one in four high school students is overweight or obese.

The House has approved a different version of the proposal and the Senate version now goes to the House for consideration.

(A "Yes" vote is for the nutrition bill). Y

SCHOOLS MUST IMPLEMENT ANTI-BULLYING PROGRAMS (S 2313)

Senate 38-0, approved and sent to the House legislation requiring all public and private schools to develop and implement a plan to prevent bullying from occurring and to discipline bullies. The measure prohibits bullying on school grounds; at any school-sponsored event or activity on or off campus; through the use of the school's computer system while on or off campus; through the use of any personal digital device on campus and in any non-school related situations if the bullying affects the school environment or creates a hostile environment at school for the victim.

The measure also mandates that each school designate an official who is responsible for implementing and enforcing the bullying prevention plan; requires the principal to report incidents of bullying to local police and prosecutors if he or she believes that criminal charges might be pursued and includes provisions to allow reports of bullying to be made anonymously and to protect the informer against retaliation.

Supporters said that bullying continues to be a major problem in schools and noted that there is a very strong link between bullying and increased violence, substance abuse, absenteeism, poor performance in class and drop out rates. They argued that a tough bullying law is long overdue and will save countless children from a lifetime of physical and emotional scars and worse. They pointed to recent cases in Massachusetts in which victims of bullying committed suicide. (A "Yes" vote is for the bill). Y

Great music, lasting friends

CONSERVATORY NOTES

ED SORRENTINO

COURTESY PHOTO

Saxophonist Mairead Leahy of Foxboro who participated in Festival Wind Ensemble and Jazz Ensemble last year.

For more than 20 summers I have had the pleasure of watching young musicians from all over the state embrace the unique opportunities that South Shore Conservatory's Summer Music Festival offers them. Hingham clarinet student Victoria Baldassini, who participated in the program last summer, wrote "Summer Wind Ensemble was one of the best musical experiences I've had. It totally changed my outlook on music!"

What is its uniqueness? Beyond the fun of participating in SMF, it is a program that truly cares about the individual musical progress of each student, and maybe even more importantly, cares about the overall (human) growth of the participants. The culture of Summer Music Festival is not typical of a summer day program. In this time of technical proficiency, this alternate culture promotes playing for the pure joy of playing, in addition to perfecting technical skills. It's about playing what is emotionally pleasing. It's about playing from the heart.

Students are placed in one of two ensembles based on their age and ability. Summer Wind Ensemble, better known as SWE, is for younger, less advanced students, while Festival Wind Ensemble is for older, more advanced students. Some FWE students are even in college. At both levels, students receive an enriching and well-rounded musical experience through wind ensemble/band, jazz ensemble or chamber music, and master classes.

Our dedicated and committed group of coaches and conductors, who passionately share their talent and expertise with eager SMF students, are outstanding public and private school music educators and professional performers (musicians). Many of them are past Summer Music Festival students. As an educator, I can't help but be delighted that these students were so moved by music that they chose music education as their vocation and recognized its importance.

One thing I never take for granted is our state-of the art outdoor rehearsal and performance space. The Jane Carr Amphitheater creates a professional atmosphere in which students can build musical confidence. SMF students always return to school in the fall with expanded musical knowledge, having reached their highest musical potential. The program's music director, Malcolm Rowell Jr., is professor of music and director of bands emeritus, UMass-Amherst, and a member of the American Bandmasters Association.

Upon returning year after year, students seek out their pals from the previous summer and renew their friendships over a friendly game of volleyball or an ice cream sundae party.

And last but certainly not least, these musicians make lifelong friendships with others who share their love of music and understand their passion for playing. Upon returning year after year, students seek out their pals from the previous summer and renew their friendships over a friendly game of volleyball or an ice cream sundae party.

To ensure that participants receive proper placement and seating, all students must audition. I have already started listening to potential students for this summer's program. Middle, high school or college musicians interested in joining Summer Music Festival 2010 can contact me directly at 781-749-7565, ext. 21, or ed.sorrentino@sscmusic.org.

Ed Sorrentino is the program director of Summer Music Festival. He is also Percussion Department chairman and Jazz/Rock Department chairman. He is deeply committed to music education for all populations.

Tango – it's tantalizing!

FAMOUS BIRTHDAYS

MARY KENNEDY

This month in a departure from celebrating a famous birthday, Mary takes us back to the origins of the Tango.

Did you know that this elegant dance, popular in ballrooms around the world today, was born in the brothels and bars of Buenos Aires?

During the last years of the 19th century hordes of European immigrants poured into the cities of the New World, including Buenos Aires, capital of Argentina. Adding to the population in the poorer tenement districts were Africans, many of them former slaves, and from the pampas fiercely independent Gauchos, of mixed Indian and Spanish ancestry.

In the drinking halls and brothels of the city, the tango evolved as a dance of passionate intensity. From the Africans came the syncopated rhythms; the Gauchos contributed guitars and haunting ballads of loneliness and defiance. Tango songs of the early 20th century told of violent confrontations and the sadness of displacement from a faraway home. The music, played on the bandoneon, somewhat like a concertina, was often melancholy, yet with an irresistible beat. The lyrics of one famous ballad "Yira Yira" warn, "Don't expect any help of a hand – you'll see that everything is a lie, that nothing is love, that to the world nothing is important." Traditional dress for the male was a wide-brimmed black hat, a scrap of white silk around the neck, tight trousers. His image was that of a folk antihero, somewhere between a bully and a thief.

By 1912 the tango had immigrated to the United States and was becoming the craze of European ballrooms. The intensity, the tight embrace, the intimacy suggesting lust, were astonishing to a dance world accustomed to the restrained grace of the waltz. How shocking! How enticing! One French critic grumbled, "Half of Paris rubs up against the other half." Fashionable men now wore black tuxedos, spats and silk top hats. Meanwhile, in some American towns and cities, the tango was outlawed and dancers threatened with arrest. The Vatican promptly pronounced the dance immoral and banned it for Catholics all over the world.

Meanwhile, in some American towns and cities, the tango was outlawed and dancers threatened with arrest. The Vatican promptly pronounced the dance immoral and banned it for Catholics all over the world.

Two events of interest occurred in 1913: The well-known American dance couple, Vernon and Irene Castle, devised a more respectable tango without the indecent "locked embrace." The tango began to seem more appealing than improper. Later that year the first tango show staged in faraway Finland scored an immediate hit.

Several more years of controversy did wonders to ensure the growing acceptance of the tango. Then along came the "Roaring Twenties" – short dresses, bobbed hair – and heartthrob Rudolph Valentino starring in "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." In the famous scene that forever secured his fame, and perhaps the popularity of the tango, among adoring fans, he plays a wealthy Lothario who seduces languishing, yet lustful women with his impetuous tango.

No longer the "scandalous dance of pimps and prostitutes," the tango today is definitely respectable and wildly popular. Consider the Broadway hits "Forever Tango" and "Tango Argentino" and TV's "Dancing with the Stars." If you're thinking of lessons, there are only eight steps to master and eventually combine into figures. The emphasis, however, is always on emotion: passion, anger, sometimes even humor. According to Juan Carlos Copes, the Argentinean choreographer and probably the best-known tango dancer in the world, "Tango is the feeling. It is one heart and four legs."

Remember Al Pacino in the movie "Scent of a Woman?" He played the role of a blind former army officer for whom the tango was a kind of salvation. In that unforgettable scene in New York's Plaza Hotel he assures his beautiful young partner, "There are no mistakes in the tango. If you get all tangled up, you just tango on."

In 2009 UNESCO declared tango part of the world's cultural heritage, granting the dance and its music protected cultural status. And in one Northern European country where winters are long and dark, the tango is still the favorite dance. In fact, it has been Finland's unofficial national dance since the 1920s.

Fifty-five Year Old Loses 43½ Pounds!

When my doctor put me on blood pressure medication, I knew I had to do something and couldn't put it off any longer. I considered going with a personal trainer and decided to give Get In Shape For Women a try. The staff has been there every step of the way and I'm happy to say the results are fantastic. So far I have lost 43½ pounds and have come off my blood pressure medication! I know this is just the beginning; I've already set my sights on the next 25 pounds and more!

Packed house hears program discussion

"Is this where it ends, or are we going down the road of heterogeneous classroom?" asked Trish Morse, the parent of a high school student. "Heterogeneous classes are what we're afraid of — it is a wholesale change in how we offer courses."

Parents were given assurance that for the 2010-2011 school year, most of the courses would be offered at college prep and honors levels in separate classrooms, but committee members and administrators did not preclude continuing the discussion of "de-leveling" the middle school and high school in the future.

The current version of the program of studies indicates the "core" courses that students are required to take before graduation will always have separate classrooms for college prep and honors levels. There are a total of 16 core course offerings (see sidebar). The remainder of the courses are electives, and may be combined college prep/honors level depending on a number of factors, such as enrollment numbers, staff availability and student interest.

High school Principal Joel Antolini said he envisioned only 13 or 14 courses being blended with both college prep and honors students in the same section. He identified two English courses, seven social studies courses, one (possibly two) math courses and three science courses.

Several parents asked why this possibility, as Antolini described it, was not reflected in the program of studies document.

"The way it is written is that all electives have the potential of being combined," exponentially increasing the possibility of a student being in a heterogeneous classroom, said parent Bridget McGovern.

Antolini said the reason was student interest in courses, staffing levels and scheduling conflicts vary year-to-year and he had to remain flexible.

"If we have the staff to run separately, then we will, if not, we'll see if we can run it as a combined class," Antolini said.

Yet, many requests came from parents in the audience — and a couple of School Committee members — to make clear only a few select courses would likely ever be in combined-level classrooms. One parent asked for the "reality" of the situation, rather than a "hypothetical."

"If feels like (the schools) are moving in a philosophical direction (of a de-leveled school system) and this is the first step," said parent Michele Allen.

Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said the goal was to breaking down barriers and closing the achievement gap.

"(I) am not against leveling. I am in favor of keeping students in a pool for longer so we don't take away any opportunity for students to challenge themselves. I don't want to cut them short too young," Walsh said.

If Cohasset Public Schools were to pursue a more heterogeneous model of learning and teaching, School Committee members said the effort would need to start at the middle school.

Lieb did provide some assurance that for the coming school year there would be no major changes to the way courses were offered at the high school.

"Any future plans of Cohasset becoming the de-leveling haven of Massachusetts (will need to be discussed)," Lieb said.

Later, she indicated an in-depth study group would need to evaluate the concept.

Process questioned

Part of the conversation centered on the process and communication used to develop the program of studies. Although administrators said work on the program of studies is an almost year-round effort, the curriculum coordinator and the three program supervisors oversaw significant changes in the document over the past month.

The recent changes were largely a result of a parent meeting held on leveling issues at the high school in early February. Curriculum coordinator Nancy Mrzyglod said after hearing comments at the meeting, the administrators determined more explanation was needed to define student learning expectations in college prep and honors.

"In a perfect world where we spent all year on the project, we would have gone back to the teachers a zillion times," Mrzyglod said.

Some teachers participated in the rewriting of the course descriptions and learner outcomes, while others did not because of time or other issues.

For Lieb the issue was indicative a larger systemic problem.

"There was a problem with communication and input — it broke down," she said. "I see a systematic problem here and we need to fix it."

Later, Lieb said the school administration needed to get more input from parents, teachers and students.

A vote was not taken on approval of the overall program of studies, but the committee did direct the administration to work with the teachers and staff to finalize the program of studies by next week.

"The whole idea of the program of studies is evolving. We are directing the program supervisors to really elicit feedback from the staff, especially with the learner outcomes. (The tight deadline) precluded input we as a School Committee feel is needed for this important document," Lieb said. "Hopefully we'll never be in this position again."

The final comment of the discussion came from Ann Musto of Stevens Lane, who received applause from much of the audience.

"There is a huge elephant in the room. There is no reason for cramming this into two weeks," she said. "The superintendent has a principal and four curriculum coordinators. This should have been worked on all year. I am dissatisfied with that performance."

What are core courses?

These courses are guaranteed to be "leveled," with separate sections at the college prep and honors levels.

- English 9, 10, 11, 12
- World History, U.S. History I & II
- French I & II and Spanish I & II
- Algebra I, Geometry, Algebra II
- Introduction to Chemistry, Introduction to Physics

What are elective courses?

Elective courses offered at college prep and honor level may be mixed depending on enrollment. These are classes that fulfill graduation requirements that call for a certain number of credits in each subject area (English, mathematics, science, social studies, fine arts, foreign language). Middle-high school Principal Joel Antolini said most of the elective offerings would remain leveled. He counted 13 courses that he envisioned likely being a combined college prep and honors course. If additional courses did need to be combined, he would notify the parents of those students in the class.

Types of courses

College Prep: The student applies knowledge and concepts that reflect critical reasoning and communication skills.

Honors: The student applies knowledge and concepts that reflect critical reasoning and communication skills and reflect understanding of complex, subtle relationships of more sophisticated material.

College prep and honors courses have the same curriculum, but vary in the degree of rigor.

Advanced Placement (AP): The student performs college level work.

New courses approved

Three new courses were approved by a vote of the School Committee and will be offered to students next year.

- Literature and Media
- Creative Writing
- Engineering the Future

Learner outcomes

The 2010-2011 school year high school program of studies presented a new layout with further explanation on courses and expected "learner outcomes."

Curriculum coordinator Nancy Mrzyglod said the rationale behind the changes was to align the program of studies with the philosophy behind the methods and approach in the classroom.

New to the program of studies was a revamped "learner outcomes," which establishes the expectations for learning for all students, and the higher expectations of understanding for honors level students.

"The content is the same, but the level of learner outcome is different. We wanted to identify what were the higher expectations for honors students," Mrzyglod said.

In past program of studies, an honors level course was largely defined by an increased workload (i.e. read three additional books, write an additional research paper), rather than showing a deeper understanding of the material.

The program of studies will be available on the Cohasset High School Web site by next Monday.

Message in a bottle

glass bottle on the piece of Cohasset Harbor between the Yacht Club and the Bellarmine House.

"We were playing down by the water and we saw the bottle. I noticed the note in it," Kyra said.

The girls brought the bottle to Linda Bolster, a Stockbridge Street resident and the girls' daycare provider, who opened up the bottle and read the note inside.

The message, which was scrawled on a sturdy piece of cardboard and written in a child's hand, asked the recipient to be a "pen pal." The note indicated the bottle was placed in the Atlantic Ocean from Yarmouth, Maine, which is located just north of Portland.

The note did not say when the message was sent on its merry way. The girls were surprised the bottle had reached Cohasset Harbor unscathed.

"It was banging on many rocks and still didn't break," Kyra said.

The girls returned back to Bolster's home to write their own message to the youths (if they still are youths) in Yarmouth. In the letter, they told a little bit about themselves: their names, where they lived, and where and when they found the bottle. They asked the senders to write back to let them know when they sent the message.

When they went to mail the letter to Yarmouth, they told the story to the post office employees, who put a special Cohasset stamp on the letter.

"Everyone I've told the story to loves it. It's just a feel-good story," Bolster said.

To return the favor, the DeGroat girls, who never imagined they would find a message in a bottle, plan to send out their own message in a bottle.

Annabell thinks it will make it to Connecticut. Kyra thinks it might make it all the way to New York.

CCTV, will operate on an annual budget of about $100,000 going forward.

The startup costs, which are entirely paid for through the cable companies monthly surcharge, is about $157,000, including all the equipment purchases and revamping of the current meeting room equipment in Town Hall and the high school.

The budget, which selectmen approved Monday night, includes the money for staff on a 16-hour per week basis. The staff responsibilities would include studio operation, equipment training and maintenance, content development, community outreach, volunteer training and certification, community bulletin board oversight, archiving public meetings and scheduling.

Since the signing of the Verizon contract, the Cable Advisory Committee has been assisting the company in developing its system design and connections to the existing live broadcast system and its interface needs with the new studio. New wiring needs to be installed at Cohasset High School, and connections need to be made to the to-be-built Town Hall studio.

The committee has been working with Single Source, a system design consultant, to translate its goals into a system design, drawings, anticipated equipment list and the bid specs for purchasing.

The studio, which is being designed by local architect Clark Brewer, will be in the front corner of the Town Hall auditorium. The project is currently out to bid and bids are due back to the town on March 23. Construction is scheduled to begin on Monday, April 12.

While it was thought the studio would be up and running by now, the new target date to have the system ready for broadcast on July 1, Martin said.

Despite the long wait, the new cable access is expected to have more local programming and greater accessibility.

In a previous interview, Martin said despite the hiatus from the popular local cable access show "Our Town" and other local cable channel favorites, she and others have been developing and filming new programs. "Nashville North presents: A Tribute to Taylor Swift" is one of the programs filmed and developed by local guitar teacher Jim Armstrong and his Cohasset students. Cohasset High sophomore Anya Gruber co-produced the video.

Martin and "Our Town" co-host Mark DeGiacomo have been filming a new series with the Historical Society called "Living Histories" featuring verbal oral histories from long-time residents.

With the new system, selectmen and other town government meetings can be taped and shown multiple times.

CNC SUPER TEAM

Boys Track

NAME: Dana Lindberg
SCHOOL: Hingham
GRADE: Senior
STATS: Lindberg won the Div. 3 State Championship in the 55 meter dash and finished third in the long jump at the Div. 3 Championships. For a good part of the season, his 6.58 55 was the fastest in the state.

NAME: Ted Greene
SCHOOL: Norwell
GRADE: Senior
STATS: Battling back from an injury that sidelined him during the 2008/09 indoor track season, this senior made up for it in a big way this year. He placed fourth in the 300 meters (36.17 seconds) at the All-State Championships, which advanced him to his first-ever appearance at the New England Track and Field Championships.

NAME: Chris Greene
SCHOOL: Senior
GRADE: Norwell
STATS: Ted's twin brother also was a force to be reckoned with in the 300 meters. He placed 10th at All-States with a time of 36.60, a week after taking sixth place at the Division 4 State Championships.

NAME: Steve Sollowin
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Sollowin's 4:20.55 in the Div. 1 Championship was the second fastest mile in the state. He came back the following week and finished third at the All State Championship. He was undefeated in league competition and showed great range running top times from the 600 up to the 2 mile.

NAME: Ryan Kelley
SCHOOL: Pembroke
GRADE: Junior
STATS: After an impressive sophomore season, Kelley really came out of his shell this winter. The Patriot League all-star finished 11th in the mile at All-States with a time of 4:30.92. That came one week after he won the event at the Division 3 State Championships (4:31.19).

NAME: Dan Joyce
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Senior
STATS: Joyce made his final indoor track season a memorable one, placing eighth at All-States with a time of 4:28.22, which sent the Atlantic Coast League all-star to his first-ever New England Indoor Track and Field Championship.

NAME: Joel Hubbard
SCHOOL: Marshfield
GRADE: Sophomore
STATS: Undoubtedly one of the top 1,000 meter runners in the region, Hubbard placed third at the All-State Championships with a time of 2:32.42, and then he finished fifth overall (2:32.76) in the event in his first-ever New England Track Championship appearance. His time at All-States placed him as the No. 2 sophomore in the nation.

NAME: Chris Dooley
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Senior
STATS: Dooley showed incredible fight this season in the 1000. He once again had a stellar dual meet season, only losing one race. He shined in the 1000, finishing third at the Div. 1 Championship and finishing sixth place at the All-State Championship, beating all the Div. 1 competitors from the week before.

NAME: Zak Stuart
SCHOOL: Weymouth
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Stuart sacrificed personal success in the 600 to help the team in both dual meets and relays and still managed one of the best 600-meter times in the state. He ran 1:25.92 at the State Coaches Elite meet. He is one of the premier long sprinters in the South Shore and a top long sprinter in Massachusetts.

NAME: Josh Quinnie
SCHOOL: Hanover
GRADE: Junior
STATS: Quinnie finished second at the Div. 4 State Championship in the high jump and followed by qualifying for the New England Championships in the event with a sixth-place finish at All-States. He also fared well in other area, winning the 55 hurdles at the Patriot All-League Meet.

HINGHAM 4X200 RELAY TEAM

NAMES: Carter Brown, Jackson Stone, Bill Lumbert, Dana Lindberg
YEARS: Junior, junior, freshman, senior
SCHOOL: Hingham
STATS: Team finished eighth at the All-State Championships with a time of 1:34.28.

NAMES: Kody Crawford, Steve Sollowin, Zak Stuart, Chris Dooley
YEARS: Senior, junior, junior, senior
EVENT: 4x800 relay
STATS: These four improved each time out. They were sixth in Div. 1 Championship and ninth at the All-State Meet. Running all of their races out of the slower heat they ran alone as they worked to place. In the most impressive race at Div. 1 Meet they went from the 13th seed to finish sixth, beating out more than half the teams in the fast heat.

Spring is in the air

And practices started Monday

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

For some in these parts, it might not feel like spring is here.

Yes, the thermometer is slowly creeping into light jacket territory and the days are getting longer and brighter, but it just feels so quick.

That's to be expected when you consider that the winter sports season just ended last Tuesday with a police and fire department escort for the Div. 4 State Champion girls basketball team.

While most teams have been waiting for weeks to get started with spring practices, Cohasset has been caught up in the success of the girls.

Now its time to move on and immerse yourself in the beauty that is the spring season.

Baseball, softball, lacrosse, outdoor track and field and tennis take center stage now, and in Cohasset, that is a good thing.

The Skippers are coming off seasons of outstanding success.

Start with the softball team.

A year ago, the softball team, led by junior pitcher Kelly Naeglin, finished the season 20-4 and won the school's first ever South Sectional championship in the sport.

It wasn't just Naeglin, who transferred from Scituate before the season, but a complete team effort.

Basketball hero Meredith Kelly will return, bringing the team some power.

If there's a big change this season, it's at the helm.

Coach Rob Spofford left for personal reasons, and will be replaced by assistant Torin Sweeney, who also coaches golf and wrestling at Cohasset.

Sweeney is coming off a successful wrestling season that included hosting the Div. 3 State Meet.

On the tennis courts, both the boys and girls were strong last year.

The girls made it to the Div. 3 South Sectional Final, where they lost 3-2 to Dover-Sherborn.

In the match, junior No. 1 player Maddie Altholz was a winner along with the doubles team of Maggie McGoldrick and Jenny Magruder.

On the boys side, Cohasset made it to the semifinal round of the Div. 3 South Sectionals, where they were knocked out by an excellent Cape Cod Academy team.

The outlook is already good.

Three underclassmen were named to the South Shore League All-Star Team including senior Mike Filbey, and juniors Robbie Hill and Travers Craven.

The team is already getting in gear with several players participating in the Cohasset Tennis Club High School Tournament.

A highlight of last season was a regular season victory over Hingham, which went on to win the South Sectional title.

On the lacrosse field, both the boys and girls made the playoffs.

The boys were hoping for a shot at dethroning defending champ Scituate, but were derailed by Dover-Sherborn in the semifinal round.

Scituate went on to beat Dover-Sherborn in overtime in the state championship hame.

Cohasset should have some firepower returning.

Goalie Jack Murphy will be a senior, and a number of players are expected to return, including Thomas Flibotte, who is known as one of the best midfielders in the area.

The girls team also made it to the Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament, bowing out in the first round.

On the baseball diamond, Cohasset struggled, but has some talented returnees.

Coastal Stars take home the silver

The Coastal Stars Squirt B4 team; Patrick Barnes, Seamus Carroll, Owen Degust, Daniel Durkin, Jack Kelly, Jake Koncius, Joey Norton, Molly Norton, Kevin Prendergast, Jackson Roberts, Steven Smith, Jake Steward and Katie Talacci, traveled to Lake Placid, New York on Thursday, March 11 to participate in the CAN/AM Challenge Cup.

With the setting of the Olympic Center providing a nostalgic atmosphere, it didn't take long for the Stars to add to the excitement. Round robin play began for the Innsbruck Division on Thursday evening. The Stars played the Bridgewater Bears from Bridgewater, New Jersey.

After completion of two defensive periods the score was tied 0-0. Scoring prevailed in the third period as the Stars scored four goals led by Durkin (two goals), Roberts (two goals), Degust (two assists) and Carroll (one assist) and went on to defeat the Bridgewater Bears 4-2.

A great team effort at both ends of the ice resulted in the Stars putting twenty-four shots on net and limiting the Bears to ten shots on net.

On Friday evening, the Stars played the Methuen Rangers from Methuen, MA. In a tight game, goaltending and defense was the highlight of this contest. The Stars got on the score board in the second period with goals from Durkin and Carroll to take a 2-0 lead into the third period. The defense of M. Norton, Prendergast (one assist), Steward (one assist) and Koncius was stellar in front of goalie Smith. Strong all around forward play from Barnes, Carroll (one assist), Degust, Durkin, Kelly, J. Norton, Roberts and Talacci highlighted the overall team effort in this tight contest.

Barnes provided the defensive play of the game on a Rangers two on one offensive zone breakout by hustling back and breaking up a scoring opportunity in this tight contest. Stars goalie Smith (17 saves) made highlight save after highlight save to keep the Rangers off the board until 8:14 of the third period. With the game on the line, Smith made an incredible glove save to propel the Stars to a 2-1 victory.

The Coastal Stars Squirt B4 team, including players from Cohasset, won a silver medal in the CAN/AM Challeneg Cup at Lake Placid N.Y. last week.

After two solid games the Stars found themselves in contention to participate in the medal round with two round robin games remaining on Saturday.

On Saturday morning, the Stars played the Westchester Vipers from Elmsford, New York. The Stars came out flat in this contest and found themselves down early in the first period 1-0. The only Stars highlight in this game was a goal by Degust assisted by Talacci to tie the score 1-1.

The Vipers took control of the game and defeated the Stars 6-1. On Saturday afternoon, the Stars played against the NJ Devils from West Orange, New Jersey. After coming out flat Saturday morning the Stars needed a bounce back game to stay in contention for the gold medal.

In what was their best all around game, the Stars dominated the Devils. The defense of M. Norton, Prendergast, Steward and Koncius set the tone early by breaking up numerous Devil chances. Strong fore checking by forwards Barnes, J. Norton and Talacci provided the Stars with numerous scoring opportunities.

The Stars controlled the game putting twenty-two shots on net and limiting the Devils to nine shots on net. Goaltending by Smith (shutout) was strong as he set aside all the Devil scoring opportunities. Scoring by Durkin (one goal), Degust (two goals), Kelly (one assist), Carroll (one assist), M. Norton (one assist) and Roberts (one assist) resulted in a 3-0 Stars victory placing them in the championship game.

On Sunday morning, the Stars played the Methuen Rangers. A rematch from the round robin game in which the Stars defeated the Rangers 2-1 was the setting for the Innsbruck gold medal game. In what was an action packed game the Stars found themselves down 2-1 after the completion of the first period on a goal by Durkin. In the second period the Rangers extended their lead to 3-1. Needing a "miracle", the Stars came out and carried the play in the third period with numerous scoring opportunities.

An apparent goal was not allowed by the referee because of a quick whistle.

The Stars, refusing to give up, kept the pressure on the Rangers goalie. With time winding down the Stars pulled their goalie and the Rangers scored an empty net goal to defeat the Stars 4-1. Although the final outcome of the gold medal game wasn't the result the Stars were hoping for, the team played fantastic hockey, had fun and won the Silver Medal.

Congratulations to Patrick Barnes, Seamus Carroll, Owen Degust, Daniel Durkin, Jack Kelly, Jake Koncius, Joey Norton, Molly Norton, Kevin Prendergast, Jackson Roberts, Steven Smith, Jake Steward and Katie Talacci on their accomplishment. The players would like to thank their parents, coaches Gerard Degust, Anthony Talacci, Sean Kelly, Thomas Koncius and team representative Cheryl Norton for providing them with this great opportunity and fantastic memories.

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

It was not that long ago when the Vipers were the team to beat in the Masters Div. of the men's South Coast Hockey League.

The Vipers won back-to-back titles in the Fall of 2008 and the Winter of 2009, but they have fallen on some hard times.

Lou Sideropolous scored two goals, Bob Sideropolous, Dan White, Ron DiCecca and Pembroke's Steve DiMaio scored a goal each as the Vipers held on for their first win of the season by a 6-4 score over the Roadrunners. Bob Ward, Derek Mento, Marshfield's Sean Parrell and Ted Duggan scored the Roadrunners goals.

Ryan Murphy of Pembroke scored the only goal in the shootout as the Masters Div. leading Wolves held off Grizzlies, 4-3. Murphy, Phil Marrandette of Marshfield and Jonathan Hildebrandt of Hanover scored for the Wolves in regulation.

Joe Bevilacqua of Abington, Jim Bristol and Hanover's Jeff Ray scored the Grizzlies goals.

Craig Solari, Paul Beatty and Marshfield's Tom Godfrey scored a goal each as the Aeros built a 3-0 lead and hung on for a 3-2 Masters Div. win over the Thunder.

Hanover's Mike Maguire and Tom Maguire scored the goals for the Thunder.

Rangers goalie Greg Smith of Hanover stopped 20 shots and Jim O'Toole of Rockland scored two goals, Marshfield's Tom Smith and Joe O'Connell scored a goal each as they defeated the Bruins, 4-0 in a Classics Div. win.

Sean Malloy scored two goals, Mike Bartlett of Pembroke and Mike Maher of Marshfield had a goal each as the Maple Leafs remain undefeated with a 4-1 Classics Div. win over the Red Wings. Ken Wingate of Pembroke scored the Red Wings goal.

Marshfield's Tim McCrystal scored two goals, Ron Read and Tom Lema both of Marshfield, Kirk Souza of Pembroke and John Davey had a goal each as the Canadiens pulled out a 6-2 Classics Div. win over the Black Hawks.

Pembroke's Paul Lyons and Kevin Ryan scored the Black Hawks goals.

Tom Shaughnessy of Hanover scored for the Saints and Scituate's Steve Concannon scored for the Whalers in their 1-1 Legends Div. tie.

Digger Hurley of Norwell scored two goals, James Ward also of Norwell, Peter Cleary of Pembroke, Ray Degaust and Brian Murphy of Duxbury had a goal each as the Toros pulled out a 6-4 win over the Stingers in a Legends Div, matchup.

John Scag scored two goals, Kevin Coyne of Marshfield and Steve Buckus had a goal each for the Stingers.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

THAT'S THE "NATURE" OF SUMMER CAMPS

BY BETTE BUSSEL – EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, AMERICAN CAMP ASSOCIATION, NEW ENGLAND

Unplugged from the constant buzz of computers, television, video games, and cell phones, children find themselves at camp - making genuine connections with other children, rediscovering the fun in physical fitness, learning their own strengths, and finding their own voices.

The world today is completely technology-centric; and children frequently spend as much solitary time "plugged in" to various forms of technology per day as they spend in school. Summer camps offer a refreshing and unique break from that routine.

Camps foster the development of social skills. Campers learn how to engage in-person with peers and adults as they pursue fun and interesting activities and build skills. And research shows that what campers learn can be extremely useful back at school and even at home. Kids connect with other kids throughout the camp day- during activities, between activities, after activities.

Campers also have many opportunities to interact with those role models and caring adults. It's this person to person opportunity for interaction that helps create "community" at camp, that gives kids the sense that camp is where they belong. Camp offers social networking at its best -- face to face!

Fresh Start Part 7: DON'T STOP

I enjoyed reading your series and it gave me inspiration to start exercising and watch my diet, but I have since stopped and can't seem to start again. What might help me to get back on track?

Most people who start an exercise program quit very quickly – so you are not alone. First identify what is keeping you from staying on track – other commitments, too tired, too much work, dislike exercise, etc. Then focus on what you can do. Be creative. Very often when people get that inspiration to "get healthy", they bite off more than they can chew. Avoid this mistake and choose a plan that does not overwhelm you and is sustainable. Start today – each day offers a new chance.

I have been exercising regularly and watching my diet for over a month now and I have only lost a pound or two and I don't look any better. What is wrong?

People tend to overestimate the calories burned by exercise and underestimate the amount of calories they are eating, I encourage all my clients who wish to lose weight to keep a food and exercise journal and add up calories in and calories out (burned.) The overall intake must be controlled to lose weight. You need to get an estimate of your calorie needs – see www.mypyramid.gov. Then you need to find a way to track the calories and see how much you really eat. It is often useful to measure food and beverages to get a handle on actual intake. One box of pasta has 8 servings at 200 calories each (without sauce) and I know very few people who actually eat one serving. An average hour of fast walking will at best burn 400 calories. So if you eat an extra serving or two of pasta, you have eaten as many calories as you burned on your walk. Remember to lose one pound, you must eat 3,500 calories less, burn that much more by activity, or a combination of both.

I am close to ideal weight – female, 5'3", 125 lbs and age 50. I have been exercising for two months - regular cardio, strength training and stretching, just as you said, but I am still flabby. What am I doing wrong?

You are doing everything right – keep going. Building muscle, which tends to make people look lean and trim, takes time. While many women are "terrified" of getting "big" by strength training, it is unlikely for most. We are just not made to build muscle easily. So adding enough muscle to look trim will take time – perhaps a number of years to get the look you want. Remember it is likely that the flab took decades to develop.

I've been exercising but an old knee injury is hurting me and I've had to stop. I went to my doctor who referred me to a physical therapist. Isn't this the same as seeing a personal trainer?

No. Physical therapists are medical professionals who provide rehabilitative care. Once you have completed therapy and have been cleared to exercise you might consider seeing a personal trainer to take the next step.

I exercise regularly, but can't seem to stop eating too much. What should I do?

Those of us who are overweight, especially if by a large amount, are used to eating too much, often by a considerable amount. Most people do best by slowly reducing intake. This may have to occur over a longer period and involve a number of phases of reduction. It is not unusual for me to see clients who eat double what they need to maintain a healthy weight. Some people may have binge eating disorder and may need the help of therapist knowledgeable in this area. Remember even if you having difficulty reducing your intake, your exercise is still invaluable in keeping you healthy.

I feel great. I am exercising and watching what I eat. I have lost twenty pounds and am at a healthy weight. What is next?

Now you need to maintain your weight loss. While it is not as exciting as losing weight, it is as important. Try to continue your new positive habits and make them habitual by making these changes part of your daily life. And enjoy your success.

I now exercise regularly, but it bores me to tears. Any suggestions?

Keep trying new things until you find something you like. Try listening to music, reading, coming up with new challenges for yourself - whatever it takes. Try a class – spin, zumba, pilates, step aerobics, or join an adult swim team or train and enter a local running race such as a 5K (3.1 miles).

Does exercise and diet really matter that much? Is all this effort really worth it? How clear is the scientific evidence about this?

Thousands of research studies show the connection between diet, exercise and health. Eating lots of saturated fat and being inactive will result in a large increase in the likelihood of cardiovascular disease and early death and disability. Other studies have linked poor diet and lack of activity to an increase in the likelihood of many types of cancer, diabetes, stroke, etc. - the list is long. Studies these days actually show increased health and longevity with each incremental increase in exercise. Eating right is the difference between getting many types of cancer or not. For many of us, exercise can provide relief from stress, depression, and insomnia, sometimes as well or better than medication. A healthy diet and exercise cannot protect us from all disease. Sometimes it is just the luck of the draw, but by exercising regularly and eating right you are shifting the odds in your favor by huge amounts

So keep going. The inspiration to begin an exercise/diet shift doesn't come along every day – grab the opportunity. Don't wait until the odds are so heavily weighted against you that it seems insurmountable. Carpe diem – seize the day.

Bruins Alumni headed to Hingham

Team to play game for Rett Syndrome awareness

The Boston Bruins Alumni hockey team will be in Hingham Saturday night to play a benefit game against the International Rett Syndrome Foundation All-Stars.

The game is both a fundraiser and a venue to promote awareness for the disease.

Rett syndrome is a devastating neurological disorder seen almost exclusively in females. It is marked by severe developmental disabilities, including loss of communication skills and purposeful hand function. Many experience all or some of the following: seizures, anxiety, apraxia, dystonia, orthopedic problems, impaired cardiac, circulatory and digestive functions, autonomic instability and sleep disturbances…the list goes on. Currently there are no effective treatments for Rett Syndrome. Most survive into adulthood, requiring total, 24 hour a day care.

The game will be the second for the two teams and should provide a memorable experience.

Among the Bruins players expected to play are Cleon Daskalakis, Brad Park, Tim Sweeney, Andy Brickley, John Carter, Torn Songin, Frank Simonetti and Reggie Lemelin, who was a goalie with the Bruins, but skates out now.

The locals have some star power as well.

Former NHL stars Brian Leech and Marty McInnis will be suiting up for the IRSF All-Stars and the Pilgrim Arena based squad is also expecting Hingham High School hockey coach Tony Messina to play.

Chuck Curley is a former Executive Director of the IRSF.

His 14-year old daughter Caroline has Rett Syndrome.

He'll be playing, as will Hingham's Mike Joyce, who also has a 10-year old daughter named Caroline who has Rett Syndrome.

"It's going to be a competitive game," Curley said. "The Bruins want to win. We have a really good team too. Brian Leech is on our team and Marty McInnis is on our team.We have guys with some experience. The Bruins can still move. Their passing is phenomenal."

Along with raising awareness, the big draw for the game is fun for both players and fans.

"It's a good time," Curley said. "Last year we lost 8-7. The great thing about this is the kids. The Bruins spend so much time with them. We promote the game through the Hingham and Norwood Youth Hockey Programs. The kids come out. They don't know who all the players are, but they know they're Bruins. They have their programs and miniature sticks and the Bruins sign each one of them. It's a great experience for the kids."

Curley and Joyce host a Food and Wine Festival annually in Boston as a fundraiser.

Through that and a friendship with Curley, the game's organizer, Tom Guidi, who will be at the rink at 9 a.m. selling tickets, started the hockey game.

Guidi said there is hope for a cure.

"I do believe in a cure," Guidi said. "I meet the girls and they're happy, beautiful children. The Bruins have been wonderful. They go above and beyond. They're a great organization."

Proceeds from the game go to the IRSF.

"There has been a tremendous amount of research," Curley said. "Children's Hospital in Boston has a Rett Syndrome Clinic. They're just starting clinical trials to eliminate symptoms of the disorder."

Rett Syndrome, according to Curley, is among the autism spectrum disorders and affects one in 15,000 births.

As far as understanding the disorder and general awareness though, it isn't as well known as other conditions, partially because it wasn't diagnosed until 1983 in the United States.

Since then, there have been major strides.

The game starts at 7 p.m. and tickets are available at the door.

Guidi will be at the rink from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m. selling tickets.

"The tickets are real nice," he said. "They look like real tickets (to major sporting events). They say Bruins Alumni vs. IRSF All-Stars."

Tickets are $5 for children, $10 for adults.

Spelling bee timekeeper Meg O'Hara, far left, keeps the spellers on time and judges Paul Schubert, Jennifer deChiara and Suzi Corkhum hold their signs saying a team answered correctly.

CEF spelling bee winners

Amby Tierney, left, and Jerome Vainisi hope they spelled "isthmus" right. They did, giving "The Order of the Fang," which also included T.J. Coffey, first place in grade four.

Veronica Galvin, Madeline Ronzoni and Amanda Vitello of "Buzzing Bees" wonder if they spelled "panic" correctly.

"The King Bees" members Patrick Slater, Quentin Hill and Conor Murphy want to make sure they have the correct spelling of their word. The team finished second for fifth grade.

The third annual Cohasset Education Foundation Children's Spelling Bee March 14 raised more than $6,000 for the Cohasset Public Schools. Spellers in grades two through five participated in this event at Cohasset Middle High School. The auditorium was abuzz with excitement as 250 spellers awaited their chance to go on stage with teammates and test their skills. Parents, community members and school faculty came out to support the foundation's efforts.

Grade two

First place: "Buzzer Beaters" — James Devaney, Shane Murphy, Gray Thomas and Scott Witkos. Winning word, "horizon."

Second place: "Ray-Bees" — Luke Adams, Ian Appleby, Will Norton and Ryan Gentile.

Third place: "Killer Bees" — J.C. Centeio, Sam Fox and Declan McHugh.

Grade three

First place: "Thunder Bees" — Claire LaLiberte, Mia MacGreagor and Isabella Russell. Winning word, "symmetry."

Second place: "Buddy Bees" — Gabriella Finocchio and Martha Miskanic.

Third place: "The Bee-Wares" — Aiden Gildea, Michael Hill and Nick Simone.

Grade four

First place: "The Order of the Fang" — T.J. Coffey, Amby Tierney and Jerome Vainisi. Winning word, "isthmus."

Second place: "The A Bee C's" — Caitlin Conrad, Leanne Hayden, Emily Moy and Margaret Norton.

Third place: "The Spellcasters" — Isabel Buckley, Mary Tarpey and Jane Wrenn.

Grade five

First place: "The Bee 52s" — Emma Humphrey, Marina Longo, Margot Robbins and Abby Thomas. Winning word, "luggage."

Second place: "The King Bees" — Quentin Hill, Conor Murphy and Patrick Slater.

Cohasset Education Foundation expresses its appreciation to the spelling bee committee, parent volunteers, school department employees and community members who volunteered as emcees, judges and timekeepers.

That's Mr. Skipper to you

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

WARNING: You have stumbled upon what may be one of the most egotistical articles ever in the Cohasset Mariner. Try not to be offended. It is not your fault that you are inferior.

Oh, hello. Fun story. I had quite the confidence booster this past Friday when I won Mr. Skipper. Nope, your eyes do not deceive you. I won Mr. Skipper. By a landslide? Well, that remains to be unseen, as my fellow seniors Nick Lieberman, Ian Porter, Kevin O'Connell and James Earle also put on a show … just not as good of a show as me. If you came out to witness the phenomenal me win Mr. Skipper, then you know exactly what I am talking about. If you didn't come out, then you missed out … big time.

On Monday, we had a nice little code blue at 9 a.m. in the morning to simulate a situation of emergency. The code blue would be used if there was a bank robbery in town and the bank robber was still at large and in the area. They are worried that the bank robber might come to school to try and steal all of the Mr. Skipper prize money that I won.

Speaking of Mr. Skipper (again), Monday on the morning announcements, it was announced to the school that Sean MacCarthy is now to be referred to as Sean "Mr. Skipper" MacCarthy.

Also on the announcements this week, it was announced to the school that the one-act play "Check, Please" was eliminated in the MHSDG semifinals. We didn't go home empty-handed, as Ian Porter, Natalie Dignam and Tara Goodwin all won acting awards. Wait a second … wasn't there a fourth actor who won an award? Oh yeah … Sean "Mr. Skipper" MacCarthy. By the way, it is now Sean "Mr. Skipper and Award-Winning Actor" MacCarthy.

This week marked the beginning of spring sports. Baseball, softball, lacrosse, tennis and track all started. There were those who were happy, and there were those who were out of shape and whining about their muscles hurting because they haven't run in the last six months. All in all, spring sports will probably be just as successful as the fall and winter seasons because Cohasset Athletics rule. This week also marked the beginning of the Sean "Mr. Skipper and Award-Winning Actor" MacCarthy era.

The first couple days were marked by flood — kind of like how the stage was marked by the flood of talent that I brought with me. There was a ridiculous amount of rain, and I even saw ducks swimming in my neighbor's yard. Yeah, that is not a typo. There were actually ducks swimming in my neighbor's yard. By midweek, though, it was actually the nicest day we have seen in a long time. The sun was out and it was the perfect temperature. I can't wait to get to the beach.

Friday night is the big March Madness game pitting CHS faculty versus CHS student all-stars in a basketball game. The money all goes to the music department's field trip to Philadelphia, so be sure to attend. Who wouldn't want to see Mr. Fish alley-oop Mr. McCabe or Coach A. stuff someone half of his size? It is going to be very entertaining and for a great cause, so GO! And if that doesn't make you want to go, you get to hear the elegant and magical voice of Sean "Mr. Skipper and Award-Winning Actor" MacCarthy. I can do it all.

Well, that's about all I have for you this week. Consider yourself lucky that you just read that. Those are words from a champion, a Mr. Skipper champion. See you next week if you are lucky!

Sean MacCarthy really hopes people don't take all of the egotism in this article seriously. He's just pulling your legs.

Kindergarten registration is under way

Kindergarten registration for the 2010-2011 school year is under way. Registration will be at the Osgood School, daily, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Parents registering children for kindergarten will be asked to indicate interest in full-day kindergarten or half-day kindergarten at the time of registration, but do not have to commit at this time. Parents are encouraged to register early to facilitate planning for programs. A birth certificate and proof of residency are required for kindergarteners in order to register. Call the school office at 781-383-6117 for more information.

Rotary rewards leaders

By Linda Fechter
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

"If we worked on the assumption that what is accepted as true really is true, then there would be little hope for advance."
— Orville Wright, aeronautical designer, inventor

Leading is a skill. Not a gift. It must be learned and nurtured. Orville Wright grew up in a family that recognized that. A quote from him says he "grew up in an environment where there was always much encouragement to pursue intellectual interests; to investigate what aroused curiosity." Orville Wright was a leader and a Rotarian.

On May 21 to 23, the Boston South Shore District of Rotary International is hosting a Rotary Youth Leadership Awards Conference at Cape Cod Sea Camps in Brewster. The district includes Rotary clubs from Quincy to Providence. For the first time, the Cohasset Rotary is pleased to be sponsoring two Cohasset students to be "leaders of tomorrow." The selected students will attend the conference and hopefully be inspired by this unique opportunity. Sponsorship includes: room, board and program fees.

"The Cohasset Rotary Club is delighted to offer scholarships for this incredible weekend of leadership training," says Rich Fitzpatrick, who along with Ron Goodwin, are the co-chairs of the Youth Leadership Committee. "A child in school may learn many things about many different subjects. However, the tools needed to identify and recognize what is needed to be a great leader is much different than day-to-day learning. This conference brings about the best of these kids."

Candidates must currently be in the 10th or 11th grade and must be Cohasset residents. The students will learn the fundamentals of leadership, ethics of positive leadership, importance of communication skills in effective leadership, problem-solving and conflict management, Rotary's purpose and service to the community, building self confidence and self-esteem and the elements of community and global citizenship.

The feedback from the students who went last year was very positive and last year's students will be facilitators this year. In addition, two of last year's participants have been selected to go to the 2010 Rotary International Conference in Montreal.

"What we're looking for is potential leaders," said Goodwin. "Great leaders aren't born, they're encouraged and taught the necessary skills."

The Youth Leadership Awards are just one example of how the Cohasset Rotary Club gives back to the community. For more than 60 years, the local club has contributed thousands of hours of community service and hundreds of thousands of dollars to support local and international humanitarian projects.

All eligible students are encouraged to apply. Visit cohassetrotary.org to download an application. All applications must be submitted by March 31. They should be mailed to Cohasset Rotary Club, PO Box 36, Cohasset, MA 02025. Questions can be emailed to rotarycohasset@gmail.com.

The best times to prune

GREEN THUMBS UP

SUZANNE MAHLER

Following a weekend of memorable stormy weather, I donned my English gardening boots and slicker on a damp, dreary morning and ventured forth into my flooded landscape to assess the damage from the ongoing nor'easter. Only a few days ago, I spent hours gathering heaps of twigs and branches from my lawn and gardens. As I waded through the expansive puddles in nearly every part of my yard, it became evident that this cleanup will begin anew, since drenching rains and fierce winds have delivered a substantial collection of additional branches as Mother Nature continues to perform her annual pruning.

There is an old adage that suggests that one should prune whenever the pruning shears is sharp. Although light pruning in any season is unlikely to cause permanent harm to an established tree or shrub, the timing and magnitude of the pruning process will greatly influence the growth and flowering of most plants.

Our plants store food reserves in their roots and stems during the fall season to help them to survive the winter months and initiate growth in spring. Reducing the number of branches and buds in late winter leaves more energy for the remaining shoots. Depending on the plant, pruning may stimulate increased branching, larger leaves, bigger flowers or more prolific blooms. For fruiting trees, shrubs or vines, if the number of stems and flower buds is decreased, the plants may produce fewer fruits, but those remaining fruits are usually larger and sweeter, and fruit production will likely be more consistent from year to year rather than bountiful in one year and sparse the next.

Trees and shrubs that bloom in spring generally bloom on the previous year's growth, known as "old wood." Substantial pruning, just before new growth begins, will significantly reduce their flowering, but I am often willing to sacrifice those fleeting blossoms to rejuvenate overgrown trees or shrubs, since it is considerably easier to view their architecture when the plants are dormant. March pruning enables easy access to the woody plants that grow in and around my gardens, reducing the potential for damaging emerging plants and allowing for a quicker cleanup.

I adore the glorious blooms of crabapple trees, but their vigorous growth requires annual pruning to thin out interior branches and sucker growth. Since they bloom so prolifically, I generally prune them while they are dormant. Shadbush (Amelanchier), flowering plums and cherries, dogwoods, magnolias, forsythia, quince, lilacs, ninebark, azaleas and rhododendrons also bloom on the previous season's growth. If you do not wish to sacrifice the lovely blossoms, prune these spring bloomers immediately after they finish flowering. Large, established magnolias tend to resent major pruning and are best pruned in midsummer only if necessary.

Forsythia blooms on the previous season's growth. If you do not wish to sacrifice the lovely blossoms, prune these spring bloomers immediately after they finish flowering.

Trees and shrubs that flower in late June or after tend to bloom on "new wood." Pruning during late April or May will stimulate vigorous new growth and greater flower production for butterfly bush, sweet pepperbush (Clethra), Rose of Sharon and blue-mist shrub (Caryopteris). Butterfly bushes, in particular, become leggy and unattractive when allowed to grow unrestrained. Cut back these vigorous shrubs to 12 to 18 inches tall in May after all danger of hard frosts. This ruthless pruning will promote glorious quantities of fragrant blooms later in the summer.

Many suckering, overgrown shrubs will benefit from a process known as renewal pruning. Forsythia, lilac, quince, Spiraea, Potentilla, Viburnum, Ninebark (Physocarpus) and Weigela are just a few of the shrubs that tend to become dense and overcrowded. These shrubs will look their best given an annual pruning, including lopping the oldest stems to within one foot of the ground. Prune during late winter or immediately after flowering.

Some ornamental shrubs, especially those grown for their variegated or tinted foliage or their colorful twigs, will produce better color and larger leaves on new growth. Red and yellow twigged dogwoods, purple or gold smokebushes, ninebarks and weigelas should be drastically pruned as their leaf buds swell and may even be cut down to the ground to promote vigorous new brightly colored stems or leaves. While spring flowers may be sacrificed, the substantially larger leaves will offer spectacular color throughout the growing season.

The family of Spireas includes many popular varieties, some of which bloom on old wood including the early blooming, gold-leafed "Ogon" and the bridal wreath types; prune these vigorous shrubs after blooming for best flowering. Summer-blooming cultivars such as "Gold Mound" and "Gold Flame" can be drastically pruned in spring to produce bountiful blooms and compact growth.

The hydrangea family generates the greatest number of inquiries at local nurseries regarding flowering and pruning. Drastic spring pruning of the lovely snowball hydrangea "Annabelle" will produce spectacular, massive, white spherical trusses beginning in July. The Pee Gee (paniculata) hydrangeas, including the delightful "Limelight," also respond to spring pruning, which promotes greater flower production in mid-to-late summer. Oak-leaf hydrangeas and the popular blue and pink mophead hydrangeas are exceptions to general pruning practices. Although these deciduous shrubs produce their spectacular blossoms later in the season, their flower buds are formed on old wood at or near the end of the branches. Substantial fall or spring pruning of the stems will eliminate a majority of the flowers. Thin out stems of older shrubs to allow light and air to reach the interior of the plant and remove dead tips or branches as these plants begins to develop their new leaves and flower buds.

The American Horticultural Society's pruning and training manual is a worthy addition to any homeowner's library, as it offers recommendations for how and when to prune specific varieties of trees and shrubs.

Patrick visits supporters, inspects seawalls

By Benjamin Brown
BBROWN@CNC.COM

Speaking with Scituate residents and supporters at Oro restaurant on Front Street March 14, Gov. Deval Patrick addressed everything from green technology to seawalls, highlighting the state's fight against $9 billion in budget gaps.

"As hard as the economy has been, and it's been hard, it's not our only reality," he said.

According to Patrick, the state has seized on low interest rates, investing accordingly to move the state forward.

"We're investing more money to fix what's broken than we've ever done in the past," said Patrick. "It's not glamorous, but it builds a strong foundation."

Patrick highlighted several issues he felt particularly proud of from his first term as governor, including tightened ethics and lobbying rules, addressing educational achievement gaps and introducing competition into the auto insurance industry.

"And by the way, you can marry anybody you love in the commonwealth," said Patrick. "And I'm proud of that."

But Patrick said he wasn't there to boast, that he disliked that aspect of campaigning. And while he said real progress has been made, more remains to be done.

"I'm not seeking a second term as a reward," said Patrick. "We're not done. We've done so much good work, but there are still so many people out of work. We have work to do, and to do that, I'm here to ask for your help."

To help him, Patrick asked those listening to do three things, the first of which is to be informed.

"It's incredibly difficult to be heard over the din of hate radio," he said, encouraging people to ask questions and seek answers.

Second, he asked them to "make it personal," to talk to somebody about issues important to them. More importantly, he said, "talk to somebody who doesn't agree with us."

Finally, Patrick asked people to believe. Referencing newly elected U.S. Sen. Scott Brown, Patrick encouraged supporters to rally behind their values in the face of a recent Republican victory.

"Do our values really depend on the economic climate?" said Patrick. "Our job in our time is to make it better for generations to come. I'm asking you to believe in the best, brightest values. Nothing persuades like conviction —nothing."

Patrick also addressed concerns specific to small business owners, including the cost of health care.

"What I see and what I hear from local businesses — and families — is they're dealing with double-digit increases every year in their health insurance costs," he said. "A small law firm in Worcester (was) going to add two lawyers and a part-time receptionist. They got a 24 percent increase in their health insurance premium. They can't see how to do that. These stories are repeated over and over."

With small businesses being the majority in Massachusetts, Patrick stressed the need to overcome the crisis.

"Small businesses are 85 percent of the businesses in this commonwealth," he said. "If they don't start hiring, we don't get a recovery. So we're trying to respond to their needs by saying enough is enough."

To help deal with the problem, Patrick has proposed capping premium increases at the rate of medical inflation, which right now is 3.2-percent.

"Insurers and hospitals, none of them have been able to explain to us why they've had to go to 19, 20, 30, 40 percent year after year after year," he said. "So there are some very good ideas about how to fix this over the long term, but these small businesses need help right now."

Regarding the growth of green technology over the next several years, Patrick said he'd like to see more businesses and residents adopting it.

"I'd like to see solar installations — and wind where appropriate — and efficiency measures in every home and public building," he said.

Patrick said he has been working with utility companies to provide a break for those looking to implement these types of technologies, which will be reflected in residents' electric bills.

"We've worked out with the utilities over $2 billion in contributions over three years' time, which we think will generate about $6 billion in savings for Massachusetts residents," he said.

For specific information, Patrick suggested residents contact their local utility companies.

"I think as we do that, and we create that demand, that what we'll also generate is the jobs here in Massachusetts to manufacture those solar panels, to install those wind turbines," he said.

Gov. Deval Patrick looks at the seawall from Old Scituate Light keeper Bob Gallagher's window.

Owner and chef Robin King of Scituate's soon-to-open Oro restaurant, gives Gov. Deval Patrick a tour of his new kitchen. At left is Adam Fuller of Norwell, the restaurant's pastry chef.

Restaurant owner Robin King, who knew Patrick from his previous job at Stella (a restaurant in Boston), extended the governor an invite after learning he'd be marching in the Scituate St. Patrick's Day parade, and Patrick decided to come even after the event was postponed until March 21.

"We just reached out," said King. "We invited him to come see what we've been up to. It's always a pleasure. We wanted to help out anyway we could."

After meeting with supporters at Oro, the governor ventured a few minutes to the coast, where Scituate officials showed him the deteriorating seawalls.

"The weather was horrible," said Scituate Selectman Rick Murray, also an oceanographer. "It was really windy and the water was really flying around. It really made an impression on the governor on the state of affairs up and down the shore."

Murray, together with Town Engineer Kevin Cafferty, explained how old the Scituate seawalls are, and that many had been built in the early 20th century, making them old walls with serious problems

"The fundamental infrastructure is crumbling," said Murray. "I said, 'You're talking tens of millions of dollars to repair them.'"

Broadening the issue to the surrounding area, Murray pointed out that other coastal towns are dealing with the same problem with their seawalls.

"For all these towns up and down here, these things are just crumbling and there's no way a small town will be able to afford that," he said.

Without the seawalls, Scituate would be very vulnerable, said Murray.

"Of course, the private homes are very, very important, but what gets less attention is the impact on infrastructure," he said. "Lighthouse Point basically protects the whole town. If the seawalls go between First and Second Cliff, the boat yard's gone. It's visual, but the non-visual stuff is the nuts and bolds that make the town run."

Murray also discussed global warming, and how he said it's causing the sea level to rise an average of one centimeter a year, or about a foot in 24 years. And while the discussions were not intended to get promises of money from the governor, Murray was pleased with Patrick's genuine concern.

"He wasn't writing checks on the spot, but he did seem genuinely interested," Murray said. "He looked out of the windows, asked a lot of questions, and his staff wasn't in a hurry to get him out of there. This wasn't a blast in, kiss a few babies and shake a few hands and blast out, looking at the watch the whole time. It was nice."

Cafferty was also pleased with the visit.

"Overall, it was positive," he said. "He saw the damage and we basically discussed funding. He said he would keep an eye on it, and he was made aware of it. It was nice that he came out."

Positive, forward-thinking visits like this might encourage Patrick to return to Scituate, said Murray.

"It was very meaningful that the governor took time out of his day to come down to the town," he said. "He's certainly in the middle of a campaign — and that's high on his priorities — but with the parade postponement, he still came to the town and seemed genuinely interested in what we were talking about. I think he left with a very positive feel for Scituate. I think he knows more about the town than he did two days ago. It was great, and maybe he'll be more inclined to visit the South Shore in the future."

St. Politics Day

Brown, Baker headline Republican breakfast

By Bill Fonda
BFONDA@CNC.COM

At 89 years old, Mildred Anderson of Braintree is no starry-eyed teenager, but she was still pretty excited to meet the Republican Party's reigning rock star, U.S. Sen. Scott Brown, in Scituate on Sunday.

"It was great to meet him. I'm so proud of him," she said. "He's amazing. I never thought I'd meet him in person."

Brown was at Scituate Country Club Sunday morning for the St. Patrick's Day breakfast sponsored by the Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth town Republican committees. Before speaking and heading off to the St. Patrick's Day festivities in Boston, Brown posed for pictures, signed autographs and was every bit the star of the proceedings.

Brown said he has enjoyed representing the people of Massachusetts in the U.S. Senate, and that he wanted to come to Scituate to thank people for their hugs, kisses and work on his behalf.

"It was really just amazing," he said.

Plymouth County Sheriff Joseph McDonald said he was happy to see Brown at the event and proud he played a part in electing him.

"He is such a great human being," he said.

Perhaps buoyed by Brown's win over Democratic Attorney General Martha Coakley in the Jan. 19 special election, the Republicans at the event were confident of success in this year's elections. Candidates at the event included gubernatorial candidate Charlie Baker, state Senate minority leader and lieutenant governor candidate Richard Tisei, Congressional hopefuls Joe Malone of Scituate, state Rep. Jeff Perry of Sandwich and Ray Kasperowicz of Cohasset; state auditor candidate Mary Connaughton of Framingham; and state Rep. Karyn Polito of Shrewsbury, who is running for state treasurer.

"This is a hotbed of Republican activity," Marshfield Town Republican Committee Chairman Ed O'Connell said. "Everyone who comes here is going to be a winner in the fall. They're here because they have a powerful constituency on the South Shore."

Baker said he passed on the Boston St. Patrick's Day events to come to Scituate because of all the people who said they would help him in the race for governor before Brown made being a Republican cool.

"Many of them, frankly, are sitting in this room," he said. "I wanted to be here today to say thank you for all your help."

Some of the speakers stuck strictly to politics. Connaughton, for example, talked about going to Beacon Hill during her days on the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority.

"I have to tell you, I didn't like what I saw," she said.

And Polito asked if people were ready for a change.

"I think it's time we prepare balanced budgets on Beacon Hill," she said. "It's time for lower taxes. It's time we live within our means on Beacon Hill."

Others, however, mixed humor with their politics. Malone, who served as master of ceremonies, started reading the biography for state Rep. Daniel Webster of Hanson…only it was the Daniel Webster of Marshfield who gained fame as a U.S. Senator and statesman.

When Webster did get up to speak, one of his first lines was, "Whoever thought a WASP like Daniel Webster would be at a St. Patrick's Day breakfast" before saying it was time to bring government back to the people.

Talking about the time he has spent with state Sen. Robert Hedlund of Weymouth, Malone—who responded "I'm in" when Kasperowicz asked if was in the race to replace the retiring U.S. Rep. William Delahunt—said that when people work together in politics, some become friends, some stay acquaintances, and "In the case of Bob, he'll always be an acquaintance."

"He's a handsome devil," Malone said. "He'll tell you himself."

Hedlund replied, "The problem is, I was sitting next to Scott Brown for four years in the Senate, but now …. I'm glad Charlie Baker isn't emceeing this thing."

After joking that U.S. Sen. John Kerry needed extra Secret Service protection because his constant flip-flops have angered twice as many people, Hedlund noted that former Massachusetts Gov. Mitt Romney's book "No Apology: The Case for American Greatness" was a best-seller.

"I read his first book (Turnaround: Crisis, Leadership and the Olympic Games), about how he turned around the Olympics, how he captained the hockey team, drove the luge," Hedlund said.

However, Hedlund said that before he reads Romney's book, he had to finish Perry's, "My GOP," which he figured would happen in about 2017.

"Are the words too big?" Perry asked.

"There aren't enough pictures," Hedlund shot back.

When it was his turn to speak, Perry said that even Patrick was inspired by Brown's campaign and his pickup truck.

"Gov. Patrick is trying to replicate that — 'I'm Gov. Deval Patrick, and this is my Cadillac,'" he said.

Perry also said the state budget was so out of control, that he saw it pass a Toyota Prius on the way to the event.

Comedian Steve Sweeney said, "Scituate is an Indian name meaning, 'You almost made it to the Cape," and that illegal immigration was "people coming from Marshfield to Scituate."

Sweeney said he worked for Brown's election, and that he always supported Romney.

"It was always just me and Mitt," he said. "I thought I was a Mormon. My father always said, 'You're a moron!' I'd say, 'Am I a Mormon?' 'No, you're a moron!'"

The unenviable task of following Sweeney fell to Plymouth County District Attorney Tim Cruz.

"I had some really good stuff," he said. "Sweeney stole every one of them."

Cruz did try one joke, however, telling a story about the governor walking across a street and coming across a little girl with kittens. When the governor asked if the kittens were Democratic or Republican, the girl said Democrat, but when the governor ran into her again, this time with the lieutenant governor in tow, she said the kittens were Republican, much to the governor's surprise.

"She says, 'That's right, but now their eyes are open,'" Cruz said.

Kasperowicz took a jab at Malone — whose formal campaign kickoff is Sunday, March 21, at 1 p.m. at Plimoth Plantation — for talking about all the pledges of support he has received.

"I don't need no stinkin' pledges," he said. "I'm a finalist in the Publisher's Clearinghouse sweepstakes."

Turning to Hedlund, who recently announced he would not run for Congress, Kasperowicz joked about all the attention he had received.

"I've never seen anyone since Generalissimo Franco get so much attention for not moving," he said.

Don Hussey of Hingham was planning to run for Congress, but will not be seeking the seat because is son was about to be sent to Afghanistan and his family needs him.

"Life is often about making tough decisions, and this is a tough one for me," he said.

Instead, Hussey said he would support whoever won the Democratic primary.

"We need to take back America," he said.

U.S. Sen. Scott Brown shakes hands with supporters.

Baker said he learned about checks and balances and competition from having one Republican parent and one Democratic parent, and that Patrick lacks the "focus, follow-through and energy" to deal with the state's problems.

"Is Beacon Hill tightening its belt?" he said. "They raised taxes two years in a row and they cut local aid. They pushed their problems on taxpayers and local cities and towns."

To change the way Massachusetts is run, Baker said a commitment to reform is required.

"I got into this race because I have three kids that I want to see live in Massachusetts," he said. "This will be an enormously competitive year, and for the first time, the challengers are going to get a serious look."

The breakfast was the same day as the scheduled St. Patrick's Day parade in Scituate, which was postponed to March 21 due to the weather. O'Connell joked that he knew their event was in trouble when NECN meteorologist Tim Kelley, husband of Scituate Republican Committee Chairwoman Janet Fogarty Kelley, predicted sunny weather and highs in the 70s. Even though the parade was delayed, proceeds from the breakfast will go to support the parade.

SALOME'S STARS
FOR RELEASE WEEK OF
MARCH 29, 2010

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) An unexpected problem should be handled as quickly as possible so that it doesn't cause too much of a delay. Someone who knows what you're facing could provide needed advice.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An unsettling situation seems to be taking forever to be resolved. Fortunately, your Bovine aptitude for patience is strong this week, so you'll be more than able to wait it out.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Taking a stand against an uncalled-for situation involving a friend or co-worker isn't easy, but somehow you'll rise to the challenge and do it. Rely on advice from someone you trust.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) There are still some questions on all sides that need to be dealt with in order to allow hurt feelings to heal. Get your workplace tasks done early so that you can devote more time to loved ones.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Consider a new spring makeover that will show all you Leos and Leonas in your best light. A new hairdo and some fashionable new clothes can help put a fresh glow on your image.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Some stormy, emotional weather can blow up in the workplace when an irate co-worker has strong words for you. But if you believe right is on your side, you'll be able to ride it out.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Creating more balance in your life is especially important now so that you're not distracted when you get into projects that will make demands on both your physical and mental energies.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) As much as you enjoy being right when others are not, show your generous side by offering to use what you know to everyone's benefit. This way, you gain admirers and avoid resentment.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good week for the Archer to aim at healing relationships. Whether it's at home, at work or among your friends, get everyone to set things straight and make a fresh start.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Although you like things done your way, this is a good time to listen to ideas from others. You might even find yourself agreeing with one or more of their suggestions.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Aspects favor positive action to reclaim your ideas from someone who might want the glory without doing any of the work. Expect to find many people rallying to support you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You might feel uneasy about taking that step forward at work or in your private life. But who knows better than you that while treading water keeps you afloat, it doesn't get you anywhere.

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

AFTERGLOW

I'd like the memory of me to be a happy one, I'd like to leave an afterglow of smiles
when day is gone.
I'd like to leave an echo
whispering softly down the ways, of happy times, and laughing times, and bright
and sunny days.
I'd like the tears of those who
grieve to dry before the sun,
Of happy memories that I
leave when life is done.

William J. Morgan

William J. Morgan

COHASSET – William "Billy" Jeremiah Morgan of Cohasset, died March 5th, 2010 at Brigham and Women's Hospital after a brief but intense battle with cancer. He was 76.

William was born May 26th, 1933 in Boston. At the age of nine, William moved from Allston to Cohasset, and remained a life-long resident. While at Cohasset High School, William was an outstanding athlete, lettering in both Baseball and Basketball.

As a CHS Skipper, William was named three times to the Massachusetts All-Scholastic Basketball Team. William was the first Skipper to score over 1,000 points in a single career. He also set two high school tournament scoring records by netting 44 and 55 points in consecutive years. A tremendous baseball player, he batted .470 for his high school career. In addition to his athletic achievements, William excelled academically. He was salutatorian of the 1951 graduating class of Cohasset High School, and was voted Most Studious and Best Athlete by his classmates.

Although he was accepted on full scholarship to Harvard University, he chose to matriculate to Holy Cross College in Worcester, MA. While at Holy Cross he majored in economics and history. During the summers between his college years, he was a lifeguard at Nantasket and Sandy Beaches, even once rescuing a five-year-old child from drowning.

After graduation from Holy Cross, William moved to New York City to pursue a career in the theater. While in New York he studied voice with John Mace. To make ends meet while pursuing his acting career, William modeled and worked as an NBC Page. Upon his return to Boston, William worked in Radio at various stations, including WMEX and WORL, in marketing and advertising capacities.

He entered the fund-raising industry in the late 1970s. William started his own fund-raising company in the early 80s, which he operated until his retirement in 2004. During this period, William maintained his connection to the stage by performing in countless local theater productions including: Man of La Mancha, Carousel, Guys and Dolls, Oliver!, Not Now Darling, Cat On a Hot Tin Roof, A Funny Thing Happened On The Way To The Forum, Dracula and many others.

William also had a passion for travel. During his lifetime he traveled to England, Italy, Jamaica, Mexico, Barbados, Bermuda, the Bahamas, St. Maarten, and all 48 of the continental United States. With his wife Kathryn, William drove across the United States twice, visiting the Grand Canyon, Zion National Park, and countless other places.

William is survived by his wife Kathryn and his two sons, William Jr. of Providence, RI and Anthony of Los Angeles, CA. He is also survived by his brother Hugh of Huntington Beach, CA, formerly of Scituate.

A Funeral Service was held at the Morgan Home. Interment Private.

Cohasset Dramatic Club cuts loose in 'Footloose'

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

If you were near an FM radio or a movie theater in 1984, then you probably know "Footloose" as a Kenny Loggins hit song or a film about a small town's ban on all rock music and dancing that is challenged when a dance-crazed, spiky-haired high school boy moves to the rural community from big city Chicago. The feature, starring Kevin Bacon as the teenager trying to bring music and dance back to the prom, and John Lithgow as the preacher who blames rock n' roll's influence for the death of his first child, was turned into a stage musical that had a respectable if undistinguished Broadway run a decade ago.

This month, the Cohasset Dramatic Club takes on the stage show that moves hit songs like "Holding Out for a Hero," Almost Paradise," Let's Hear it for the Boy," and, of course, "Footloose" from soundtrack to score with a large cast of local performers in a production directed by Cohasset's Lisa Pratt and choreographed by Caroline Maus of Quincy.

Pratt was enjoying a rare sunny afternoon outside Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium last week when she made time for a talk with Town Commons.

Town Commons: What attracted you to "Footloose?"

Lisa Pratt: We had done "Lend Me a Tenor" last fall and so we were looking for something completely different and very dynamic for our spring show. We decided that "Footloose" was the show for us, because of its strong, physical choreography and good musical base.

TC: Did a lot of fans of the film turn up to audition?

LP: We look at all kinds of actors and performers, almost all of who really wanted the opportunity to do this particular show. We have 30 people in our cast, which is big for us, and they come from Cohasset, of course, but also Hingham, Hanover, Scituate, Plymouth, Randolph, East Bridgewater, and Boston. They're a very talented company with tremendous energy and enthusiasm.

TC: Was watching the film part of the rehearsal process?

LP: I left it open as an option, but I didn't encourage the actors to watch the movie because it is so different from what we're doing. In the film, of course, all the iconic 1980s music is in the background. In the show, all those great hit songs are used to move the story along and are performed in character by the cast.

TC: Is it true that you had your actors play a trivia game associated with a certain "Footloose" film star?

LP: Yes, we did our own Cohasset Dramatic Club version of "Six Degrees of Kevin Bacon." Instead of the customary first read-through, since everyone knew the storyline of the show already, we gave the cast a chance to find what links there were between them in order to get to know each other and create personal relationships prior to creating the relationships between their characters.

TC: Did you discover any degrees of separation actually involving Kevin Bacon?

LP: I probably came the closest. In the summertime, I work as head usher at the South Shore Music Circus in Cohasset where I briefly met Kenny Loggins a few summers ago when he was one of our headliners. I guess that would be about two degrees of separation from Kevin Bacon.

TC: How did you get the cast, especially the younger performers, in touch with the 1980s setting of the show?

LP: We did all kinds of research on that time period which, of course, some of us remember more clearly than others. Getting the younger women in our cast to wear their jeans at the waist and not at their hips has been an ordeal, but we've prevailed and now we've got them willingly crimping their hair and wearing leg warmers. Our costume designer, Brianna Plummer of Hanover, has done a wonderful job recreating the period. Brianna had a very hard time tracking down Members Only jackets, but one of our cast members provided his own. Brianna has worked plenty of the era's big hair into the show. And we're using a lot of Aqua-net to make sure it stays big.

The Cohasset Dramatic Club will present "Footloose," at Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, through March 28. CITIZEN OF THE YEAR

A MAN FOR ALL SEASONS

Dick Avery's continued community service on so many levels over time led to his being selected as the 17th annual Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year.

Avery is 'model' Citizen of the Year

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

One of the best things that may have happened to Cohasset is the fact that Richard J. "Dick" Avery took an early retirement in the mid-1990s.

While he either had served or was serving on town government committees such as the Advisory Committee and Capital Budget Committee at the time – his "retirement" set in motion a host of community service activities that are almost too numerous to mention.

Whether serving as chairman or on the board of several non-profit organizations, helping with the Boy Scouts or picking up trash during his morning runs around town – Dick is doing his part to contribute to his adopted hometown.

It is Dick's continued community service on so many levels over time that led to his being selected as the 17th annual Cohasset Mariner Citizen of the Year. The Citizen of the Year is a community award: the Mariner is the means by which Cohasset is able to recognize, thank and honor those who make the quiet, generous contributions that make Cohasset a wonderful place to call home.

Merle Brown, himself a past Citizen of the Year, wrote in his nomination of Dick, that he is a hard-working volunteer that never seems to give up.

"He is a person who does not know how to say 'no,'" Brown wrote. "If asked he is ready and willing to help."

The Citizen of the Year selection committee consisting of Karen Quigley, Jane Henderson, Bill Burnett and Joe McElroy, all of Cohasset, joined editor Mary Ford at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday afternoon to pore over the 12 nominations submitted by dozens of individuals. The Citizen of the Year is an annual award started by the Cohasset Mariner in 1993; the Mariner solicits nominations through a form printed in the paper over six weeks every winter.

Cohasset is indeed fortunate that Dick decided working to better his community was more rewarding that an actual paycheck.

"I stopped working for pay 15 years ago," jokes Dick, whose career was in the paper manufacturing industry. Avery recalls before deciding to retire looking at the "want ads" in the newspaper and looking up to see birds flying in and out of his back yard on Surry Drive. "I decided I would rather work for no pay."

He had just read the best seller "Your Money or Your Life" that motivated him and his wife Sally, to take stock. The Averys – who in 2010 have been married 30 years — realized with careful planning, Dick would not have to go back to work.

While some people may view a retirement as the chance to move to Florida and play tons of golf – the Averys have stayed put.

In fact, when asked what his favorite thing about Cohasset is he does not reply, the incredible ocean vistas, but

Tackling water troubles

Planning Group has first meeting

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The Water Planning Group has its work cut out for it.

The water department is expecting a $680,000 shortfall in this fiscal year's budget and an over million-dollar shortfall next year. Water users are unhappy with the water quality and capital improvement, which could cost in the millions, need to be done in the next few years to ensure the plant meets tougher federal water quality guidelines.

While some of the issues facing the water department are long-term problems, the projected shortfalls – and how the department and the town will deal with them – are very near term issues.

In its inaugural meeting on Wednesday night the 10-person representative committee could best be described as a conversation as its members tried to get up to speed on the water department. Each member was given a three-inch binder of information about the water department.

The group is charged at looking in-depth at the water department – budget, operation, pricing – and figuring out

TOWN MEETING

Town Meeting is Saturday

Little Harbor 50/50 sharing of cost is hot topic

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

On Saturday, the wisdom of Town Meeting will speak on town issues that will affect taxpayers for the coming year and, in some cases, beyond.

At 9a.m. at the high school gymnasium citizens will gather to discuss the operating budget, paying for the Little Harbor sewer project, and 10 community preservation spending proposals and a score of other items.

A total of 23 articles, or items of business, will be discussed once a quorum of 100 registered voters arrives at the high school.

With the intended indefinite postponement of the water department's articles, which included requests for a water rate increase and money for capital projects, town officials are not expecting the high controversy that would have accompanied the discussion of those articles. In addition, the water department's budget is not intended to be voted on at Town Meeting. (A special town meeting will be called in June to discuss and approve the water department's budget and any other issues.)

"Without the water department articles, there's nothing really controversial," said Advisory Committee chair Sam Wakeman. "My guess is the hottest topic, unless something unusual happens, will be the request for the 50/50 split for the Little Harbor sewer project."

"My guess is the hottest topic, unless something unusual happens, will be the request for the 50/50 split for the Little Harbor sewer project."

— Sam Wakeman, Advisory Committee

Article 23, submitted on a citizen's petition, asks Town Meeting to consider splitting the cost of the sewer project 50/50 between the benefiting residents and the whole town property tax base. A similar payment structure was followed for the previous sewer expansion projects for North and Central Cohasset. Approval of the article would be the first step in the process – a ballot vote would be required to approve a debt exclusion override.

Both the Board of Selectmen and Advisory Committee recommended the article in a majority vote.

In the absence of a "highly controversial" article or articles, some town officials are concerned citizens will not be inspired to come to Town Meeting, despite the important issues still on the warrant.

"More and more it appears that people are not invested in their town government and unless there is a specific issue that affects them personally, they don't take the time to attend town meeting and then only long enough to vote for their specific article," said Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley.

Selectmen chairman Paul Carlson said Town Meeting is "critical" to the governance of Cohasset.

"If we have a bare quorum of 100 participants, less that 2 percent of the registered voters of Cohasset will make decisions affecting everybody," Carlson said. "I do not pretend to know the reasons for this lack of civic engagement, but in the past busy people managed to find time to participate. I urge all to come to the High School gym on Saturday."

For Quigley, part of the interest in Town Meeting is hearing new and fresh points of view.

"I'm always surprised at what issues town meeting deems important, what funding it questions and I'm always interested in individual viewpoints on all issues," Quigley said.

Town officials do expect the business to conclude in a single session (if needed, town meeting could adjourn until Monday night). But, the length of each article's debate is really up to the citizens.

Search ends in St. Stephen's courtyard

Citizens warned through reverse 9-1-1 about manhunt

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A police manhunt for a homeless man who allegedly broke into his grandparents' home on Gammons Road, resisted arrest and fought with police ended Sunday evening (March 21) on Highland Avenue by St. Stephen's Church.

Police have arrested Erik Replogle, 27, whose last known address is 50 Lambert Ave., Weymouth, following a 12-hour search that included alerting Cohasset residents within in a one-mile area of the incident through the reverse 9-1-1 telephone system to be on the lookout and to be aware that the suspect was considered dangerous. The phone messages included a description of the suspect.

An uncle, who is taking care of the home, called 9-1-1 at 6:45 a.m. on Sunday (March 21) after being startled by Replogle's presence. Police said the uncle, who was unaware that the suspect has apparently been staying at a carriage house on the property, heard movement and called police.

Cohasset police responded to the Gammons Road home and encountered the suspect inside the home. Police said he refused to obey commands from officers and a violent fight ensued. During the fight, a Cohasset police officer and Replogle fell down a flight of approximately 16 stairs. Replogle, who was dressed in jeans and was not wearing a shirt or shoes, also grabbed another officer around the neck, police said.

Police suspected that Replogle was either high on drugs, drunk or both, Chief Mark DeLuca said. "He was under the influence to some degree," DeLuca said. Police said he was not armed. At the time, police did not know Replogle was wanted on charges in Virginia and was a fugitive from justice.

After the altercation with the officers, the suspect fled the home. Police said he swam across Little Harbor from Gammons Road to Beach Street, left the water and he entered a wooded area off of Beach Street.

DeLuca said a resident saw the suspect get out of the water and called police who flooded the area. Police officers from Cohasset, assisted by K-9 officers from Hingham, Hull, Scituate, Duxbury, Weymouth, and Quincy Police launched an extensive search for the suspect but were unable to locate him.

The brush in the woods was so thick that the dogs could not track the suspect. Police from area towns were sent home around 1:30 p.m., DeLuca said.

Later police discovered the suspect apparently went through an open garage door on Beach Street and climbed into the trunk of a vehicle where he likely passed out. He found a shirt, which the vehicle owner used to check the oil, in the trunk and put it on.

At about 4:50 p.m., Replogle banged on the door of a Beach Street home and asked to use the phone. The homeowner told him there were phones in the village and called police. Officers then set up a new perimeter in the hope of trapping the suspect, DeLuca said.

Police said Replogle flagged down a car and asked for a ride to the train station. The motorist was giving him a lift when a Cohasset officer spotted the car with the suspect, who had a tattoo on the left side of his neck. The officer stopped the car and took the suspect out at gunpoint but he took off on foot again. Police pursued him through yards and ended up nabbing him in the courtyard of St. Stephen's off Highland Avenue. They used pepper spray to subdue him.

Replogle was arraigned Monday (March 22) the following charges: two counts of assault and battery on a police officer; unarmed burglary; two counts of resisting arrest; disorderly conduct; breaking and entering a motor vehicle; and being a fugitive from justice. Replogle is wanted by the Spotsylania, Virginia Police Department for narcotics violations and grand larceny, police said. DeLuca said Replogle also faces extradition to Virginia.

The police officer, who was injured in the fight, was treated at a Boston hospital for minor injuries and will not miss any work, DeLuca said.

DeLuca praised his officers and the units from area towns.

"The officers handled the incident in an extremely professional manner," DeLuca said. "They did a great job."

DeLuca also thanked the residents who called police with information.

He explained that when a manhunt takes place, often the suspect is forced into a hiding position during the initial search and that is what occurred in this case.

Gun dropped due to defective holster

The gun belonging to a Cohasset police officer, who was involved in the foot pursuit of the suspect in Sunday's manhunt, fell out of its holster when the snap to the holster's hood failed, police said.

The holster is carried on an officer's equipment belt. The entire equipment belt, which generally holds two pairs of handcuffs, a portable radio, a collapsible baton, two extra ammunition magazines, pepper spray, and holster and firearm, weighs about 20 pounds.

The firearm is seated inside of his holster, which is made of leather and some plastic. To ensure the firearm is secure, a hood mechanism covers the top of the firearm. In this case, the snap and the hood were defective and failed when the officer was chasing the suspect, police said.

"This was an accident due to defective equipment," Chief Mark DeLuca said. "This should not over shadow the phenomenal police work that the young officer did in apprehending the suspect."

Police said the officer pulled his gun out and ordered the suspect to the ground after pulling over the car that was giving the suspect, Erik Replogle, a ride to the MBTA station.

Replogle did not follow the officer's command and fled, resulting in a foot pursuit. The officer secured his gun and pursued the suspect, catching him in the St. Stephen's courtyard where he sprayed him with pepper spray. The officer then realized that his gun had fallen out of his holster. He retraced his steps and found the gun in the Town Hall parking lot where a civilian was guarding it.

Chief DeLuca said as a result of the accident, police have conducted an inspection of all the equipment belts, several of which may have the same problem.

"We are ordering new ones for the entire department," he said. "As scary as it was, this incident may well have prevented a more serious happening in the future."

DeLuca said he appreciated the citizen who stood guard over the gun until the officer retrieved it.

Weymouth man faces third OUI charge

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

A 41-year-old Weymouth man is facing drunk driving charges following a traffic stop at about 1 a.m. on Saturday (March 20). Police said an officer, who was on patrol on Route 3A by lower King Street, observed the 2000 Ford pickup truck weaving and stopped the truck on King Street near Sunrise Assisted Living.

The operator failed several field sobriety tests and was arrested for operating under the influence of alcohol (third offense). He was held on $5,000 cash bail and spent the weekend in the lockup at the police station. Police also found a nearly empty 1.75 liter bottle of vodka in the vehicle.

Arrest/PC

A 39-year-old Scituate man was stopped for speeding on 3A near Sohier Street at about 9:30 p.m. on Friday (March 19). Radar clocked the car as traveling 67 in a 50 mph zone, police said. A computer check revealed the Scituate man had a suspended license and he was placed under arrest. Because his passenger, a 53-year-old Scituate woman, was clearly intoxicated, she was taken into protective custody. The vehicle was towed.

Road rage

Police sent out a reverse 9-1-1 call last week after a 22-year-old Cohasset woman was harassed by a man who stepped out of his vehicle and hit hers with his fists. Police said the 22-year-old may have been following too closely. The report came in at 12:19 a.m. on Wednesday (March 17).

She was stopped behind him on Cushing Street at its intersection with Main Street in Hingham when he got out of his car. A similar incident occurred the lights at Route 228 and Route 3A, but this time the woman drove around him to avoid further contact. He was described as in his early 30s and about 5 feet, 10 inches tall with dark hair. He was driving a silver sedan with roof racks, no plate number was provided.

MV crashes

• At 10:47 a.m. on Wednesday (March 17), there was a four-vehicle, chain-reaction crash on King Street (3A) by Stop and Shop. Police said the first three vehicles were either stopped or slowing to stop when the motorist of the fourth vehicle was momentarily distracted and hit vehicle three, sending that car into the second vehicle that then hit the first vehicle.

The operator of the fourth vehicle, a 64-year-old Cohasset man, who was driving a Ford Ranger pickup truck, was cited for failure to use caution.

The third vehicle was a 2009 VW operated by a 61-year-old Cohasset woman; the second was a 1995 Saab driven by a 47-year-old Cohasset woman and the first was at 2007 Toyota Highlander, operated by a 42-year-old Cohasset woman. The only vehicle that was not towed was the Highlander, police said. There were no apparent injuries.

• At 2:47 p.m. on Saturday (March 20), a 21-year-old Duxbury man driving a 2005 Toyota 4-Runner that was headed south pulled into the breakdown lane between the Golden Living Center and the MBTA parking lot on Route 3A in order to make a u-turn, police said. The Toyota then struck a 2008 Chevy Tahoe, operated by a 46-year-old woman from Auburn, N.Y., police said. The Chevy had begun to pass the Toyota when the collision occurred.

The Duxbury man was cited to failure to stay in marked lanes and having no license in his possession. There were no apparent injuries, police said. The Toyota was towed.

Intoxicated

A 50-year-old Vineyard Haven man, who was visiting a friend in Cohasset who received the reverse 9-1-1 on March 17 about the road rage incident, was apparently intoxicated and causing a disturbance in front of police headquarters after the call was sent out. Police said he became verbally confrontational with an officer on patrol in the square alleging the police were harassing his friend who received the reverse 9-1-1 call. The man "misinterpreted" the message and thought it was accusing his friend of criminal behavior.

A computer check revealed the Vineyard Haven man was wanted on a warrant out of Edgartown District Court and he was placed under arrest. Police said he had apparently been partying with his friend when the reverse 9-1-1 call came in.

Machete

A machete-type knife that, police believe, fell off a landscaping truck was located by a passerby on South Main Street last Thursday (March 18) and brought to headquarters where police took custody of the knife. Police said knife looks as though is used for clearing brush.

Items stolen

A 20-year-old Cohasset woman reported on Friday (March 19) that her house had been entered and a laptop and camera were missing. The woman believes the incident occurred between 5:30 and 9:30 a.m. and the thief may have entered through an unlocked side door. The laptop and digital camera had been left on a table, she said.

Tailgated

A 52-year-old Cohasset woman reported on Friday (March 19) that the night before around 9:30 p.m., a light-colored car with roof racks and with its high beams on had tailgated her. She initially thought it was a police car but then realized it was not. The car followed her from Route 228 over Route 3A into Cohasset and onto Hull Street until she turned onto Jerusalem Road.

Summons

A 24-year-old Hull man, who was stopped for speeding on Forest Avenue (traveling 50 in a 30 mph zone) is being summonsed to court for not having his registration in his possession and having a non-renewable expired license due to not paying his excise tax. The traffic stop was made at 9:29 a.m. on Friday (March 19).

Expired license

A 48-yar-old Cohasset man is being summonsed to court for operating on an expired license after he was stopped for speeding on Sohier Street last Saturday at about 2:24 p.m. Police said radar clocked his car as traveling 44 in a 30 mph zone. A computer check showed his license had expired in December.

Broken door

Police diverted a couple of officers from the manhunt Sunday afternoon when a Norfolk Road caller reporting hearing a woman yelling "please don't kill me". Police checked every house in the vicinity and had to break down the door to one house when they forced their way in. Police said they would replace the door.

Red Lion Inn under scrutiny

Selectmen will hear possible liquor license violations

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the burden is on the police department to make the case that there was a violation of the Red Lion Inn's liquor license.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Over the course of the last month, three incidents have required police attention at or related to the Red Lion Inn. In April, the Board of Selectmen will consider whether the Red Lion Inn violated the terms of its liquor license in any of the instances.

The exact date of the hearing is to be determined.

This is not the first time the Red Lion Inn has been brought before the Selectmen for a liquor license hearing. In January 2008, the Selectmen issued a letter of warning to Red Lion Inn management after they found truth in police allegations of patrons drinking outside the premises and serving alcohol after 1a.m.

At the time Red Lion Inn management said changes would be made to prevent further violations, including closing the basement nightclub "The Cave," hiring a second manager to close the bar in the evening and submitted a written plan to the Selectmen.

Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer was the only selectman hesitant to move forward to a public hearing.

"These incidents are of a different character than we had previously," Dormitzer said, explaining he felt the past violations were more clear-cut. "I'm not sure there is a clear enough case for this board to hear it."

Town Manager Bill Griffin said the burden is on the police department to make the case that there was a violation of the Red Lion Inn's liquor license.

Selectmen chair Paul Carlson said he'd like to give the police a chance to present their case.

Dormitzer abstained from the vote, which was 4-0 in favor of holding a public hearing.

In brief, the three incidents include:

• On Feb. 28 a 9-1-1 call was made from a cell phone reporting a fight at the Red Lion Inn. Police responded and allegedly found five intoxicated people standing in the entranceway and the night manager locking the door behind them. As a result, one 48-year-old man was driven home due to his level of intoxication, police said. Police believe there may have been a liquor license violation in serving an intoxicated person.

• On March 3, police responded to a reported disturbance between a mother and daughter who reside at the Inn. The daughter, who is 20-years-old, was inside the licensed premised and intoxicated. Police allege liquor license violations include serving alcohol to an underage person, and serving to an intoxicated person.

• On March 11, around 1:30a.m., police arrested a 24-year-old for drunk driving after the vehicle was involved in a single car crash on South Main Street. In the police report, police state the woman said she was a bartender at the Red Lion Inn and had drank a shot and a beer after her shift and had been drinking throughout her shift. Police said she failed several sobriety tests and failed a breathalyzer with a blood alcohol level of 0.17. The legal limit is 0.08. Police allege there is probable cause to show that the bartender left the Red Lion Inn intoxicated and consumed liquor while on duty as a bartender.

Briefly

Sailing team is a go

Cohasset High School students will have the opportunity to participate on a regional sailing team this year. The School Committee voted to add the varsity sport at its meeting March 17.

The team will include sailors from Hull High and the South Shore Charter School, as well as Cohasset High.

"We are ready to set sail," said Sarah Murphy, the coordinator for the Cohasset side of the program. Kevin Broome, a collegiate sailor and coach, has signed on to head up the team.

The new sport will not need any financial support from the school and will rely on athletic fees and donations. Athletic Director Ron Ford will provide logistical support. Participants must already know how to sail and Ford expects four to six Cohasset High students to participate.

Two resignations

The School Committee approved the resignations of two employees and well-known faces at the Cohasset Public Schools last Wednesday (March 17).

Director of Curriculum and Professional Development Nancy Mrzyglod is retiring from public education at the end of the school year; she has held her position for five years. The committee spoke highly of Mrzyglod and the work she did at the Cohasset Public Schools. Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh said Mrzyglod has provided "true leadership" to the schools.

Long-time Deer Hill school nurse Karen Murphy is retiring from her position at the end of the school year. She has been in the position since 1987.

"You cannot measure the impact she has had on students throughout the years," Walsh said.

The committee thanked both employees for their hard work and dedication.

Home Instead SENIOR CARE

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison
A DRIVING FORCE
Each year, more than one million Americans aged 70 and older stop driving. As our population ages, that number is rapidly increasing. This situation poses a unique problem for those seniors who are living at home and have forever set aside their car keys. Today, people remain independent and active, and often, they may outlive their decision to curtail driving by as much as a decade. Home healthcare services can arrange to give at-home seniors a means of safe transportation, improving the quality of life for those who no longer drive. They can schedule home healthcare aides to provide door-to-door transportation services, thus allowing seniors to remain connected to their family, friends, and community.
It's hard enough to play chauffeur for the kids, running from soccer practice to work and back. If you have to start driving your parents, too, it's easy to get completely overwhelmed. We want you to know that you don't have to do it alone. Our home healthcare aides help keep seniors independent in a myriad of ways, from assisting with meals and bathing to running errands and providing daily transportation. Our services are flexible, to match your needs, which means we can offer 24-hour long-term care, or temporary respite care for overnight. Call 781-878-2994 to learn what we can do for you. Our address is 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

Evaluating the process

Superintendent contract renewed before performance review

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Last year the Superintendent of Schools contract was renewed for one year beginning on July 1. The renewal was two months before the School Committee completed her annual performance evaluation.

It is a violation of the superintendent's contract and some parents said last Wednesday night (March 17) it was also a process that was "completely backwards."

The issue came before the School Committee because chairman Adrienne MacCarthy said some parents had questions – and concerns – on the evaluation process of the superintendent, which prompted her to put the topic on the agenda. In addition, new Open Meeting Law regulations took effect earlier this year and will change the way school committees across the state have to approach superintendent evaluations (see sidebar).

The issue is significant because the Superintendent of Schools Denise Walsh is the highest paid town official. In the current fiscal year, which began in July 2009, her annual salary is $163,416.

According to the superintendent's current contract there is a stipulation that the contract automatically rolls over for an additional year, unless the School Committee notifies the superintendent in writing before July 1 each year. Further, the contract stipulates the Superintendent Walsh is entitled to at least one year's notice if the committee decides not to renew her contract.

Last year at a meeting on June 17 the School Committee, during an executive session, reached consensus to allow the contract to extend another year.

"The School Committee reached consensus that the path the superintendent and the schools were on was a good path. [District] goals were being met," MacCarthy said.

Approximately two months later, at the School Committee meeting of August 26, MacCarthy read and presented a composite evaluation compiled from all five committee members' individual evaluations.

MacCarthy said during the process last year she was focused on the "automatic extension" portion of the contract and did not focus on the contract language that stipulates there must be an annual evaluation before the renewal is triggered at the end of June.

The new evaluation process

In the past Cohasset School Committee's annual evaluation of the Superintendent of Schools began with a self-evaluation by the superintendent. That self-evaluation was then distributed to all members of the committee to aid in the development of their own evaluation of the superintendent's job performance. The self-evaluation covered key areas such as instructional leadership, organizational leadership, administration and management, promotion of equity and appreciation of diversity, and community and professional responsibility.

The committee members as individuals wrote evaluations and submitted them to the School Committee chair. From those written evaluations, the chairman then wrote a "composite" evaluation from the key points and read and presented it in open session at a School Committee meeting.

The Supreme Judicial Court recently ruled that the exchange of written materials, like the evaluation documents, was a form of "deliberation" and violated the Open Meeting Law. The process was under scrutiny for the School Committee in Wayland, Mass.

The Court ruled in December the correct procedure would be for the school committee to discuss the superintendent's professional competence in open session, and then it should have voted to adjourn to executive session for the purpose of drafting the written evaluation. An executive session would be allowed under the Open Meeting Law because the written evaluation is exempt under the public records law.

"I take responsibility on that…and for that I do apologize," MacCarthy said.

A letter from the school department's legal counsel said that in 2008 a similar process was followed: the contract renewed on July 1 and then her evaluation was completed in September 2008.

According to the superintendent's contract, the committee is to meet with the superintendent at least once each year, at least 30 days prior to the anniversary date for the purposes of presenting a written review of her performance as well as discussing her job description, performance and working relationship between the committee and the superintendent.

School Committee member Alfred Slanetz said revisions to the superintendent evaluation policy could be looked at, but said the fact of the matter is the committee was satisfied with Walsh's performance.

"We've reviewed her [six times] and we are extremely satisfied with what she is doing. I would say on balance this district is completely transformed [under Walsh's leadership]," Slanetz said. "The truth of the matter is the committee has given her a good review."

There was some discussion about adding additional policies for the School Committee when it came to superintendent evaluation. Policies such as requiring a board member to be on the committee for at least six months before completing an evaluation, changing the time period where the evaluation needs to be completed, or not allowing members who miss a certain percentage of meetings to complete an evaluation.

MacCarthy suggested the policy and standards sub-committee convene to discuss the possibilities, adding she would like to see the committee be supported by legal counsel, the Massachusetts Association of School Committees (MASC) and the superintendent.

"The language is significant not just with this superintendent, but future superintendents," MacCarthy said.

Committee member Helene Lieb was ready to move forward.

"Hopefully this will never happen this way again. [Going forward] we will do the evaluation before renewing the contract," Lieb said. "We apologize for the process and the town and everybody in it."

Superintendent Walsh said in her experience she had seen committees evaluate the superintendent before elections. She added, "there's no need to apologize."

Although the time was late, the discussion began around 11p.m., and followed a marathon discussion about course leveling, about 30 residents remained in the audience.

The first parent to speak was Howie Altholtz of Cedar Ledge Lane.

"The way [the superintendent's contract renewal and evaluation] was conducted was a breach of contract," said Altholtz. "You might say process smocess, but that is important to some people…it's like giving a grade before giving the test."

Altholtz said more than a handful of parents requested MacCarthy to explain the evaluation process through e-mail requests. Instead of replying in an e-mail, MacCarthy said (in an e-mail sent to those parents, as well as the Mariner) she would talk to parents by phone and put the topic on a School Committee agenda. MacCarthy also sought an opinion from school legal counsel on the past superintendent evaluation process and the new regulations.

In a heated exchange between Altholtz and committee vice chair Alfred Slanetz, Slanetz accused Altholtz, who is a lawyer, of "making it [his] legal practice to challenge the school committee."

"It's not us that's costing the town legal fees, it's you," Slanetz said. Altholtz has made numerous public records requests over the past two years and filed an Open Meeting Law violation complaint in 2008, which was upheld by the District Attorney's Office.

Parent Virginia Brophy said this issue was evidence of a larger one facing the School Committee and the town.

"We've heard several time tonight that members of the community need to work with and respect the board, but that goes both ways. I have spent more time [at School Committee meetings] in the last couple of months than I ever have. It's evident the people that you represent aren't all that happy," Brophy said.

MacCarthy apologized again for the past process and said the committee must move forward and use this as "growing point".

TOWN MEETING

Little Harbor 50/50 sharing of cost is hot topic

"You never know how long it will take and it's always the articles you think will breeze through that generate the most discussion," Quigley said, adding at Town Meeting everyone can have a voice.

"Many people feel disenfranchised so they don't attend only ensuring that their voice will not be heard," Quigley said. "You can't win if you don't play,"

Anticipated Town Meeting highlights

- Article 3: Town Manager Bill Griffin will present a balanced operating budget. The School Committee, as well, certified a balanced, no override budget. The budget to be voted on will not include the water department budget.
- Article 8: Community preservation items have historically generated lively debates on the floor of town meeting. This year's funding requests include $50,000 for a boiler for the Paul Pratt Building (Cohasset Historical Society headquarters), $40,000 to address lighting and electrical deficiencies at 60 Elm St. apartments, $250,000 to support the purchase of open space adjacent to Great Brewster Woods, $250,000 for Meeting House pond restoration, and $24,805 for exterior work on the Hagerty House, currently being used as the headquarters of the Center for Student Coastal Research.
- Article 21: The Board of Health is proposing a General Bylaw Amendment to the dog regulations. If approved, any dog owner (or walker) must pick up after their dog defecates. Fines are attached to the violations: for the first offense, the fine is $25; for a second, $35; and for a third and subsequent, $50. The purpose is to abate potential health dangers in public places of fecal material from dogs and to help reduce stormwater pollution.

April Veterans' Agent visiting hours

Cohasset Director of Veterans' Services will be at Paul Pratt Library, Room 2B, as follows: Saturday, April 3, 6 to 7:45 p.m.; Monday, April 5, 10 a.m. to noon; and Wednesday, April 7, 10 a.m. to noon. People can drop in or call ahead if they prefer. Visiting hours are not only for veterans, but also for spouses/surviving spouses and those concerned with aging parents (veterans/spouses) as well as for general advice.

If the aforementioned schedule does not meet one's needs, the veterans' agent will meet people at a convenient location and time, i.e., the library, his home, people's homes. The Cohasset Veterans Agent is Joe McElroy. For more information, call him at 781-383-0505 or email cohjoe@aol.com.

'Footloose' final weekend at Town Hall

AROUND TOWN

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

WET WEATHER

Hello Cohasset. How is everyone doing on this last weekend of March? I wonder if all of this wet weather in March is replacing the "April Showers" theory? Probably not but it is definitely worth hoping for!

I wanted to send out a message from me as I am writing this week's column feeling a bit sad and even a bit angry. I was speaking with a mom from town who has a child with some learning issues and challenges. As we were talking, I looked in her eyes and saw such love for her child and such heart-felt emotion as she said how hard it has been for her to try and accept the fact that people actually turn their backs on her child as well as her family in terms of support, acceptance and compassion. She continued to say that she was on the playground and witnessed parents taking their children and not letting them talk or play with her daughter and why? Who are any of us to turn our backs on a family and a child just because they are different or challenged in some way? I was horrified that this happened and so, so sad. As I have learned over the last couple of years as an adult with a medical issue, it is very hard always thinking how different you feel, almost out of place but I am an adult. I cannot even think what it must feel like for a child or parent who is watching the actions that are happening around her child. It certainly opened my eyes! Not trying to preach, just trying to remind everyone that everyone has issues and challenges and no matter what they may be or how big they are, each and every one of us are special in our own way.

INDOOR ROWING

A huge congratulations goes out to Jackson Dean, James Earle and Tara Goodwin for their participation in the C.R.A.S.H.-B Sprints(Charles River All Star Has Been-Sprints) held at BU's Agganis Arena on Feb. 14th. The C.R.A.S.H.-B Sprints is an annual international indoor rowing competition where athletes row on ergs for 2000 meters as fast as they can. James, Tara and Jackson competed within their individual categories and placed respectfully for this being their first time. Thank you John Liffmann for being there to help urge the kids on and thank you Karen Shusterman for helping the kids train for this amazing event. Nice work to Jackson, James and Tara and we know that your family and friends are all so proud of these accomplishments!

Food allergies eat at father

Cohasset man launches Web site

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

"I wish there was a darn guide."

On a fateful night a few years back, Cohasset resident Paul Antico drove around for two hours looking for a place to take his two boys for dinner. It was a Saturday night and there were waits everywhere — and he had the complicating factor of his two boys had food allergies.

He needed a guide to tell him a restaurant in the area that had proven itself to be allergy-friendly.

Flash forward to today. Antico, a former Fidelity financial analyst and portfolio manager, is the entrepreneur behind a new Web site, AllergyEats (allergyeats.com). It is that "darn guide" Antico was wishing for.

The Web site lists more than 600,000 restaurants in the United States and depends on peer-to-peer ratings of how "friendly" a restaurant is in catering to people with food allergies and other food intolerances, like Celiac disease (gluten intolerance). It establishes a star rating and provides space for a written comment.

The information is searchable by geographic location, provides maps and driving directions, lists phone numbers and includes menus, industry certifications and other information of interest to food allergy sufferers when available.

"So many more people out there are being diagnosed with these allergies and (the restaurant industry) is beginning to understand they need to know how to deal with this," Antico said, who envisions people using the Web site in their neighborhood and while in more unknown territory on vacation.

According the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America Web site, food allergy is more common among children than adults. Ninety percent of all food allergy reactions are caused by eight foods: milk, soy, eggs, wheat, peanuts, tree nuts, fish and shellfish. AllergyEats allows users to search specific to each of those allergies.

COURTESY PHOTO

Paul Antico, father of two boys with food allergies, has launched a Web site to help fellow parents and people with food allergies find allergy-friendly places to eat. Antico is pictured with his son Tucker, 12, who has a tree nut allergy, and Keegan, 7, who has allergies to tree nuts, peanuts, sesame, dairy, eggs and fish.

"So many more people out there are being diagnosed with these allergies and (the restaurant industry) is beginning to understand they need to know how to deal with this."

— Paul Antico

"Too many people are being diagnosed with food allergies, and it is especially prevalent in young children. As a parent with a child who has food allergies it's a really scary thing," Antico said. "But people shouldn't be scared to eat out, and this gives them a good starting point."

As the father of five children, aged 12 to four months, two of whom have food allergies, Antico has an understanding of what a parent of a child with food allergies goes through.

"It's really hard when you first send your child to a birthday party with his own cupcake," Antico said, which is one of the main reasons he wanted to design this resource for parents and food allergy sufferers — to take some of the fear out of dining out with food allergies.

Antico describes the site as "dynamic" because of its reliance on user input.

"The database underneath the Web site is constantly changing," he said.

Visitors are asked to rate restaurants where they have had a dining experience and have specifically told the restaurant about their food allergies. They answer three questions about their dining experience, which is then used to develop a star rating for the eatery.

"I wanted a way to really quantify the information," Antico said of the star rating.

There is also a space for written comments where he hopes users share their experience and whether the food was fantastic (or not).

The initial response after the Web site's debut three weeks ago is good, Antico said. Ratings for restaurants in the greater Boston area have risen from a handful to around 80 restaurants, and there are pockets throughout the United States where word has spread about the Web site.

"People who have allergies and parents of kids with allergies have a bond, and with this Web site they are all trying to help each other," Antico said, adding he expects AllergyEats to have value for more than just those with food allergies. "Everyone knows at least one person with a food allergy and they can be the veto vote (for a restaurant)."

By providing practical information, in addition to ratings related to a restaurant's approach to food allergies, Antico hopes food allergy sufferers and others will return to the site again and again. In order for the site to be useful, users need to visit and rate restaurants. In order for users to come to the site, they need to find useful information there.

"I know it's a chicken and egg problem," Antico said. "The more we help each other, the more everyone is going to benefit."

Antico is spending the next few months promoting his product and striving to reach that critical mass of users. He has earned endorsements for AllergyEats from the Massachusetts Restaurant Association and the Asthma and Allergy Foundation of America and is working on other partnerships. He is writing a biweekly blog and has useful information and links about food allergies and how to deal with them.

And he has plenty of ideas for the future, but is looking primarily to the users to direct the evolution of the site.

"I know I'm doing something good here," Antico said. "I'm going to do what I need to do to make this succeed."

GIMME SHELTER

Lily wants to be loved

Lily, who is two and on the quiet side, would prefer to be an only cat.

This week Hull Seaside Animal Rescue is featuring Lily, a pure white short hair 2-year-old female. She's on the quiet side and would prefer to be an only cat. She's not overly fond of the shelter and stays curled up in a corner away from the other cats. When approached, she purrs and snuggles up to you. We think she would do well in a home with someone to give her the affection she needs. If you're interested in Lily or any of our felines, call Shirley at 781-925-3380. This number is for adoptions calls only.

The shelter is located at 50L St., Hull. The telephone numbers are 781-925-3121 and 877-378-1195. The mailing address is Hull Seaside Animal Rescue, PO Box 787, Hull MA 02045, e-mail address is hsar@hsar.org. The web-site is www.hsar.org.

CITIZEN OF THE YEAR

Dick Avery, shown here in his backyard, says his favorite part of Cohasset is his Surry Drive neighborhood. He also likes the fact that he and his wife, Sally, can go "birding" in almost any direction from their house.

Avery is 'model' Citizen of the Year

instead the Averys' Surry Drive neighborhood.

"I like this street," said Dick, "an Army brat" who was born at Fort Jackson in South Carolina. "This is a fabulous neighborhood. The kids all get along great – the school bus stop is a social gathering."

Sally adds that the neighborhood kids all seek out Dick when one of their bicycles has a flat tire or seat is wobbly.

He also likes the fact that they can go "birding" in almost any direction from their house.

About the time that Dick, who is also an Army veteran, retired he was asked to become part of the Cohasset Land Conservation Trust that led to his serving on the Turkey Hill Management Committee, and then the Weir River Estuary Committee and the Straits Pond Watershed Association.

"He is a person who does not know how to say 'no,' if asked he is ready and willing to help."

Over time, Dick's service has also included volunteering at Massachusetts Audubon properties; serving as an Eagle Scout advisor and also organizing the Boy Scout schedule at the RTF for sorting bottles and cans.

He was recently appointed to the Friends of Holly Hill Farm finance committee and is president of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation. He is a director and volunteer driver for Cohasset FISH, is very active at St. Stephen's Church in a range of roles; and is a teller at Town Meeting. Dick is also a member of the Cohasset Conservation Foundation. He has also served or is currently serving on a range of town committees.

Chris Oddleifson put it best in his nomination. "He leads and inspires by example," Oddleifson wrote.

Dick was outspoken about the Forest Avenue sidewalk extension, preferring a wider shoulder with a raised berm that could be plowed over to make it easier for runners, bikers and parents with doublewide strollers. He did not win that fight – as the sidewalks have granite curbs – but he does not view that effort as a defeat.

"It was my argument and everyone else," Dick recalls with a smile. "But it united the neighborhood and it is well utilized today."

Years ago when their son, Connor, was raking leaves with ASP for people around town – the Averys ended up with some extra trash bags. Dick decided to take one along on his morning run and pick up trash along Forest Avenue. That effort has continued to this day and spread to other area streets.

When it comes to being Citizen of the Year – Dick would rather the title was "model citizen."

"I just do what I can," he said. "It is a lot of little things that keep things moving – a little bit by everyone helps make the town run."

CITIZEN OF THE YEAR

Many fine citizens nominated for annual award

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The selection committee met at the Cohasset Mariner office on a recent Sunday afternoon to pore over the nominations and reach a decision.

The Cohasset Mariner received 12 nominations from literally dozens of individuals for the annual Citizen of the Year Award. A selection committee consisting of Karen Quigley, Jane Henderson, Bill Burnett, Joe McElroy, all of Cohasset, joined editor Mary Ford in poring over the nominations at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday and selected Dick Avery of 22 Surry Drive for the annual award.

The decision was unanimous, although not reached without considerable discussion about all the other very deserving candidates including:

• Richard E. T. Brooks (posthumously) for activism on behalf of the town, his caring about what was happening in Cohasset, and putting the time in to make the town a better place today and into the future. He devoted time and energy to the sewer project and more recently the preservation and restoration of Cat Dam.

• John Campbell for doing so much for all age groups in his service to Cohasset over the years. Most recently, in his work as President of the Friends of Cohasset Elder Affairs, he has worked tirelessly with many organizations to move the new Cohasset Senior Center toward a reality.

• Joseph Campbell for selflessly putting in thousands of hours coaching and mentoring Cohasset children in basketball, baseball, and most importantly, life. With the support of Peter Roy, Atlantica, the Old Salt House and Cohasset Harbor Inn, he never turns away a request to host a fundraiser or awards dinner for numerous local sports teams. He has also provided employment for dozens of high school and college kids every summer and mentors the students on how they should conduct and present themselves in a professional work setting.

• Murray Campbell for his leadership of the Cohasset Lightkeepers Corporation over many years, his letters to the editor on timely topics that keep readers informed.

• Darilynn Evans for her volunteerism and work ethic as president of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce, service on the Economic Development Committee and efforts to keep the village a vital, happening place.

• Sheila Evans for her longtime service on the library trustees, efforts to make Greenbush a reality, her leadership of the Cohasset Central Cemetery, and her lobbying issues at the state level when there are consequences for the town.

• Anne Marie Goff for remembering deployed troops through care packages that she coordinates and sends, for always lending a helping hand in events like the Relay For Life and for being a wonderful mother, teacher and friend to all.

• Brad Goodwin and Ron Goodwin, brothers and fellow Rotarians, who each understand they are part of a larger community and epitomize the Rotarian motto "Service Above Self." Brad is a Marine veteran and director of the Cohasset Road Race by the Sea; volunteer for Cohasset Elder Affairs, head of the Cohasset Free Masons and more. Ron has served on town boards and boards of non-profits, school councils and has donated to a host of clubs and causes through his company, Goodwin Graphic.

• George McGoldrick and Bill Cavanaro of the Cohasset Sports Partnership who set out to put turf on the town's athletic field and succeeded despite the sour economy. The men showed that the town could work successfully toward a goal and have fun in the process.

• Joseph Nedrow for his work with the schools, church, Council on Elder Affairs, and other good works, and for the great pride he takes in the Town of Cohasset which is evident in all his volunteer efforts.

• Hamilton Tewksbury for his deep love for Cohasset, for his service on the Govt. Island Study Committee, historical commission, Council on Elder Affairs and other boards and helping to obtain the Fresnel lens for the Minot Light Replica.

Water Planning Group has first meeting

how to move forward in the short- and long-term.

The most pressing solution needed is how to deal with an estimated $680,000 shortfall in the current fiscal year, which ends on June 30, 2009. And looking ahead, the current proposed budget for the next fiscal year could be as much as $1.2-million short.

"The issues are so complex that it goes beyond just missing sales goals," Water Commission chair Glenn Pratt said.

The group has a deadline of mid-June when a Special Town Meeting will be held to address next year's water department's budget and whatever other recommendations the group may come up with to balance the books. A rate increase could be among the solutions. A Special Town Meeting will be called in mid-June.

On Wednesday night, the Water Planning Group brainstormed as they looked over the water department's situation. Ideas like selling off disposable assets (equipment and land holdings), re-financing the debt, looking for inaccuracies in the metering and billing system, and moving the debt service over to the town side were all suggested at one point during the meeting.

Pratt said the Water Commission has been looking at the operational side and over the last few years they have cut two and a half positions from the department.

While positions have been cut, the overall contracted services budget had increased over the past few years. Between fiscal 2009 and fiscal 2010 the American Water contract, the company that runs the water plant and operations, increased approximately 30 percent (in fiscal 2009, $921,523 and in fiscal 2010 appropriated, $1,200,000).

Committee members said the American Water contract and operations cost is something they want to look into further. Savings could be made if the town hired one company to run operations for the water and sewer plants, but the American Water contract is not up for renewal until 2012.

Toward the close of the meeting Selectman Karen Quigley who was in the audience offered what she called "a dose of reality."

"[Judging from the phone calls I've been getting] people will not approve a rate increase and don't care what the consequences are – they are mad," Quigley said.

The most pressing solution needed is how to deal with an estimated $680,000 shortfall in the current fiscal year, which ends on June 30, 2009.

The Water Planning Group will meet weekly for the next few months on Wednesday nights at Town Hall at 7p.m.. However, next week (Wednesday, March 31 at 7p.m.) the committee will meet at the Water Department on King St. to have a tour of the plant.

Fiscal 2010 shortfall

The Water Department operates with an enterprise fund, which means it is designed to be a self-sufficient operation relying on revenue from water users and other sources to meet its expenses. The issue is important for both water users and taxpayers because with the projected shortfall, water users could face a significant jump in water rates to cover it (it would be the third rate increase in four years) and/or the town operating budget would need to use its reserves and budget cuts to cover the shortfall.

A perfect storm of unrealized revenue sources has put the water department in this financial predicament. The current year's fiscal budget relied on more revenue coming from its sole wholesale customer, Linden Ponds, which stopped construction last year (loss of $165,000); it assumed receipt of the first of two parts in a legal settlement with Avalon Bay development company expected to come in when the project pulls the building permit (loss of $335,000); and the rainiest summer in five years left many not using their sprinkler system (expected water user revenue is off $500,000).

The BIG problems

- $680,000 estimated shortfall in fiscal 2010
- $1,200,000 estimated shortfall in fiscal 2011
- Approximately 63 percent of the budget is devoted to debt service
- Customers are unhappy with the water quality
- Capital improvements are needed to meet more stringent federal water regulations coming in 2013

Who is on the Water Planning Group?

The Water Planning Group is modeled after the Budget Planning Group and is comprised of representative members of several key boards and two at-large citizens.

- Board of Selectmen: Paul Carlson (who will serve as the committee's chair) and Fred Koed.
- Advisory Committee: Ed Lappen and Pat Waters.
- Capital Budget Committee: Steve Gaumer and Peter Decaprio.
- Water Commission: Glenn Pratt and Nathaniel Palmer.
- Citizens-at-large: Patrick Gallagher and John Beck (who is also the current Sewer Commission chair).

OPINION

EDITORIAL

'Model Citizen'

As editor of the Cohasset Mariner, it is my pleasure to announce that Dick Avery of Surry Drive is the Citizen of the Year.

The town can count itself lucky that Dick — who was born at Fort Jackson in South Carolina and lived all over as an "Army brat" – has never wanted to live any place else since finding Cohasset in the 1970s.

The grandfather, father and husband took an "early retirement" some 15 years ago. However, not working for pay did not mean not going back to work.

Dick, who is an Army veteran, is not one who sits on the sidelines. His commitment to community service started with service on the Capital Budget Committee and Advisory Committee, then he got involved with a host of land preservation groups and trusts, the Boy Scouts, and so much more.

While nominations were open, dozens of individuals took the time to propose candidates for the annual award, detailing the nominee's contributions to help make this town we all love a better place.

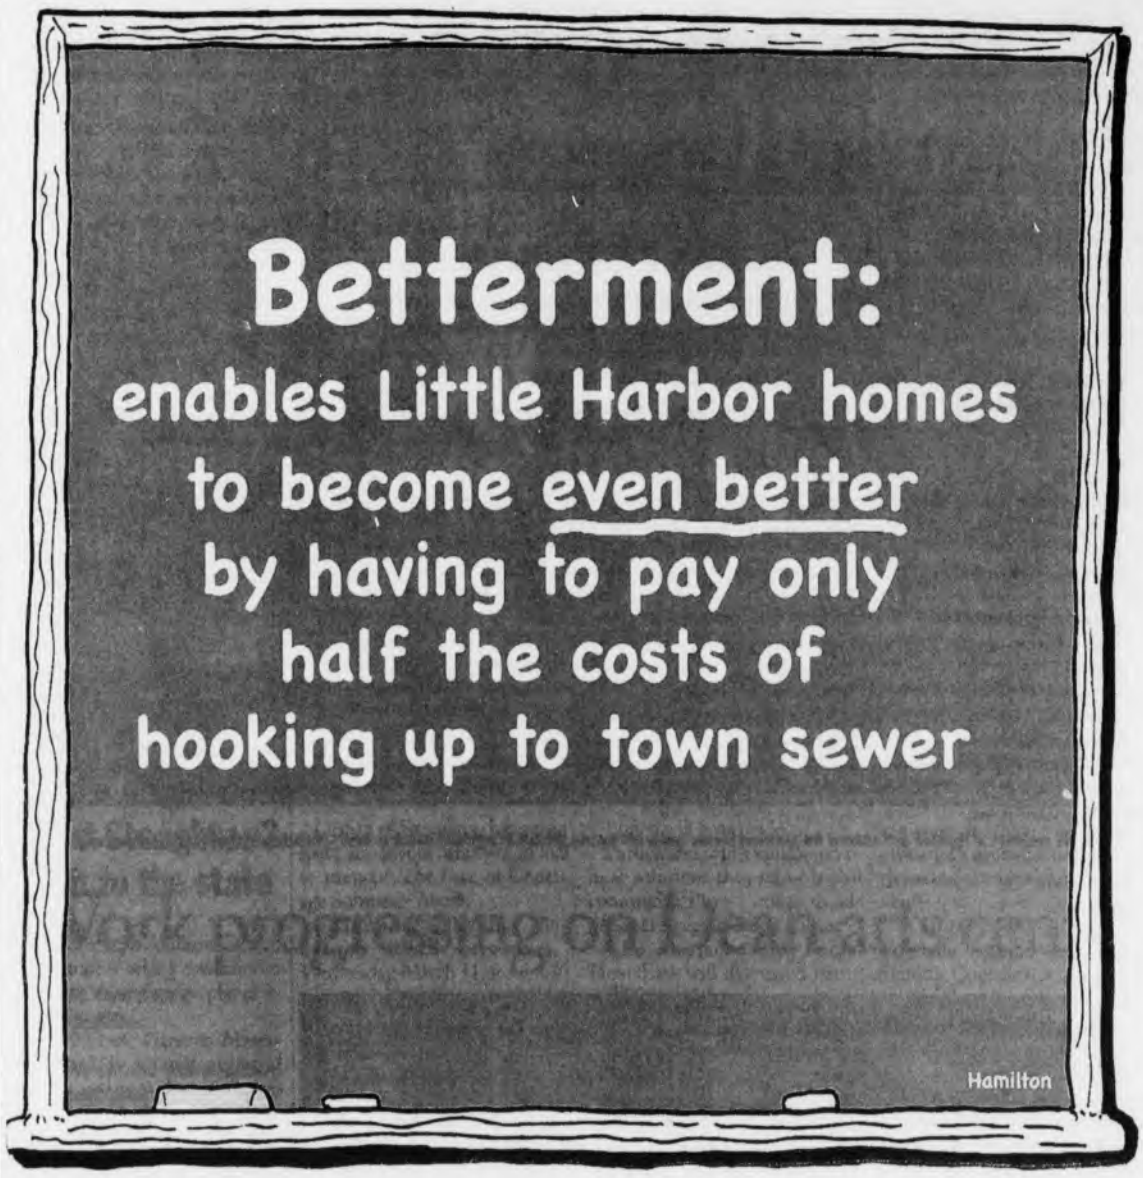
The Citizen of the Year selection committee consisting of Karen Quigley, Jane Henderson, Bill Burnett and Joe McElroy, all of Cohasset, joined editor Mary Ford at the Cohasset Mariner office in Hingham Square on a recent Sunday afternoon to pore over the 12 nominations. The Citizen of the Year is an annual award started by the Cohasset Mariner in 1993; the Mariner solicits nominations through a form printed in the paper over six weeks every winter.

Merle Brown, himself a past Citizen of the Year, wrote in his nomination of Dick, that he is a hard-working volunteer that never seems to give up.

"He is a person who does not know how to say 'no,'" Brown wrote. "If asked he is ready and willing to help."

Chris Oddleifson put it best in his nomination. "He leads and inspires by example," Oddleifson wrote.

Rob Hillman wrote that what qualifies Dick for this award goes beyond his resume.



"He is always a reasonable voice for public spiritedness and good citizenship," he wrote. "This attitude and example leads to the actions that make him such a valuable citizen."

When it comes to being Citizen of the Year – Dick would rather the title was "model citizen."

"I just do what I can," he said. "It is a lot of little things that keep things moving – a little bit by everyone helps make the town run."

With this award, the Cohasset Mariner offers recognition for making a difference. In our society too many role models go unrecognized. Too often people today look to the sports, rock or movie stars with envy, when the real hero is the local police officer, firefighter, parent, teacher, church leader or government official.

The annual Citizen of the Year Award is our way of taking our hats off to those among us who go that extra mile without asking for anything in return but the intrinsic reward of helping to make Cohasset a better place.

BRIEFLY

Middle-high school tackles bullying

John Halligan whose son died by suicide on Oct. 7, 2003, at the age of 13 after being bullied by classmates at school and online, will be presenting "Ryan's Story" to Cohasset Middle-High School students during the school day on Monday, April 5, and will then return on Thursday, April 8, at 6 p.m. to present to the parents.

Halligan's presentation will cover the lessons learned too late for his family regarding how to deal with bullying, cyber-bullying and teen depression. More information regarding the presentation can be found at ryanpatrickhalligan.org or by calling Cate Nelligan at 781-383-6100, ext. 122.

Brush chipping day

Residential brush will be accepted at the D.P.W. parking area on Saturday, April 10, from 7:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

No trees over 5 inches in diameter. No stumps, firewood, briars or weeds. No contractors.

Recycling Transfer Facility updates

The Recycling Transfer facility will be closed on Sunday, April 4, in observance of the Easter Holiday. It will re-open on Wednesday, April 7.

Winter wreaths and baskets must be removed from all town owned cemeteries by April 15.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Concerned about direction of curriculum

TO THE EDITOR:

About 50 years ago our family moved to Cohasset. My stepmother had urged us to consider the town since her cousin, a teacher at the Winsor School, said Cohasset had one of the best K-12 school systems in the state. PTA parents Jean and Dan Cotton had worked hard with the administration. Through the next 10 years or so students regularly graduated to Ivy League and other top four-year colleges. It wasn't just new resident's students, but also the longtime citizen's children that also achieved a top education. In this period, the system grew to nearly 2,000 pupils with large classes. They all had top results. Curriculum was varied and even cooking and shop, along with arts, regular academics were included. There was an active student council that often questioned policies providing a lively debate – a healthy sign of democracy!

I give some of the background of Cohasset schools in the past, because I am disturbed when I read of the proposed "dumbing down" of the high school curriculum. Over this past weekend I read in the Wall Street Journal the case for Saturday school by Chester E. Finn. He states "among other things that we are truly falling behind even moving to four-day school weeks because of budget concerns, and summer learning loss. If we do not insure our emphasis on longer days, taught subject matter and instill a joy of learning America will fall behind." We should look to Europe and Asia that have a longer year of schooling.

I conclude with a quote from Eugene Boyer's "High School 1982."

"There may be those who feel we are asking too much from high schools and students. In response we can only observe that today we ask too little. Indeed, our investigation has convinced us that student aspiration can be raised and that the academic quality of American high schools can and must be strengthened."

I urge the School Committee to reconsider their action on curriculum change.

Meeting raised questions

TO THE EDITOR:

After attending the March 17th School Committee meeting, I want to personally thank teachers of the High School Science Department for also attending. I commend you on your willingness and courage to stand up for what is right and setting the record straight, pertaining to the incorrectly reported and published information in the Program of Studies by the Program Supervisor (STEM). It shows that there are teachers here that truly care about teaching their students. The manner in which the information for the Program of Studies was ascertained was shoddy at best.

I was particularly incensed by the behavior of the Program Supervisor who was quick to want to "throw the teachers under the bus" instead of admitting that it was a tough job to gather the information she needed, at such an inexcusable short notice. If this is how she interacts with her colleagues, I find it hard to believe that Superintendent Dr. Denise Walsh, has accomplished what she set out to do when she fired the Department Heads and then hired Program Supervisors to replace them, in order to "get things under control".

Is it any wonder that the morale at the High School is reportedly very low?

We all need to question where this originates.

YOUR REP
GARRETT BRADLEY

I wanted to update you on legislation I am working on that will help small businesses.

As you are aware, some off the largest expenses for small businesses are the rising health insurance costs. Currently, there are small businesses that pay as much as $26,000 for a single, family policy. If you own or work for a large business or are employed in local or state government, you get a much better price for a policy — in many cases, $10,000 less — than the cost of that same policy to a small business.

One of the reasons we have seen these huge premium increases for small businesses over the years is due to a law passed in the 1990s that prevents small businesses from grouping together to purchase health insurance. This measure, lobbied for by the health insurance industry, took away the ability of small employers to join together to negotiate with insurers for group purchasing discounts, a practice restricted to larger businesses and government entities only.

...a law passed in the 1990s that prevents small businesses from grouping together to purchase health insurance.

I have met with small business owners from my district who are all feeling the pinch of the current economic recession. As costs rise and business slows, health-care costs are negatively impacting small businesses and affecting their ability to hire new employees. With small businesses accounting for over 80 percent of jobs in Massachusetts, this is a problem that we must address now if we want to see job creation anytime soon.

I'm supporting legislation that will help fix this problem. The bill (H.3452) will give

HEALTH NOTES

Physical fitness can be fun!

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

Physical activity doesn't have to be drudgery. Take a ballroom dancing class. Check out a local climbing wall or hiking trail.

Health Notes, recognizing the benefits of exercise, has continued its campaign for getting people out and exercising their bodies one way or the other. It used to be walking, now somewhat outré, and while one observes more walkers nowadays, one also observes more people and the percentage of exercising walkers is probably about 20 percent of those working out. Tennis, a perennial source of exercise, particularly for those receiving early lessons, is also popular. There's a story about a youth who, at the age of 7, broke his arm but his mother, having paid for a tennis lesson, made him take it anyway and for the rest of his life he has played excellent tennis as a leftie.

Habits change, however, and the in thing now seems to be fitness centers. We certainly have a spate of them. Although not listed as a category in the Cohasset Rotary phone book, they are sprouting up like spring flowers. Currently listed elsewhere are: The Body Studio, 87A Elm St.; Mindful Bodyworks Pilates, 1 Pleasant St.; USA Fitness Centers, 135 King St. The Board of Health also has licensed many others.

Merits of regular physical activity from preventing chronic health conditions to promoting weight loss and better sleep are hard to ignore. The National Center for Disease Control lists seven ways exercise can improve your life.

1. Improves one's mood. A brisk 30-minute walk can help you calm down. Physical activity stimulates brain chemicals that may leave you feeling happier and more relaxed than you were before you worked out. You'll also look better and feel better when you exercise regularly, which can boost your confidence and improve your self-esteem. Regular physical activity can even help prevent depression.

2. Combats chronic diseases. By managing high blood pressure, cholesterol boosting high-density lipoprotein (HDL) or "good" cholesterol while decreasing triglycerides by lowering the buildup of plaques in arteries. It prevents Type 2 diabetes, osteoporosis and certain types of cancer.

3. Helps manage your weight. Physical activity burns calories. The more intense the activity, the more calories and the easier it is to keep weight under control. Stairs are better than elevators; bikes better than cars.

4. Exercise boosts energy levels and delivers oxygen and nutrients to tissues. In fact, regular physical activity helps your entire cardiovascular system – the circulation of blood through your heart and blood vessels – work more efficiently.

5. Promotes better sleep by helping boost your physical activity during the day. A good night's sleep can improve your concentration, productivity and mood. And you guessed it – physical activity is sometimes the key to better sleep. Regular physical activity can help you fall asleep faster and deepen your sleep. There's a caveat, however. If you exercise too close to bedtime, you may be too energized to fall asleep. If you're having trouble sleeping, you might want to exercise earlier in the day.

6. Exercise can put the spark back into your sex life. Are you too tired to have sex? Or feeling too out of shape to enjoy physical intimacy? Physical activity to the rescue.

Regular physical activity can leave you feeling energized and looking better, which may have a positive effect on your sex life. But there's more to it than that. Regular physical activity can lead to enhanced arousal for women, and men who exercise regularly are less likely to have problems with erectile dysfunction than are men who don't exercise – especially as they get older.

7. Exercise can be – gasp – fun. Wondering what to do on a Saturday afternoon? Looking for an activity that suits the entire family? Get physical!

Physical activity doesn't have to be drudgery. Take a ballroom dancing class. Check out a local climbing wall or hiking trail. Push your kids on the swings or climb with them on the jungle gym. Plan a neighborhood kickball or touch football game. Find a physical activity you enjoy, and go for it. If you get bored, try something new. If you're moving, it counts! Are you convinced? Good. Start reaping the benefits of regular physical activity today.

So much for the Center for Disease Control. If you ever visit them in Atlanta, don't use the elevator – take the stairs.

Paving is more interesting than you think

MAKING TRACKS

TOM GRUBER & MARK BRENNAN

Reclaiming grinds up the old paving down into the base road material below the asphalt and homogenizes the mixture.

Paving, Paving and More Paving – Since there is so much interest in when our roads will be repaved, we'd like to review some of the decisions that need to be made before we begin to pave a road. Paving is much more than slapping another coat of asphalt of top of the road and calling it a day. Paving is a lot like painting. If the preparation is inadequate, the topcoat will not last.

The first decision that needs to be made is what type of preparation needs to be made to get ready for paving. Let's look at what some of the options are. The simplest is little or no preparation. That is, just adding another layer of asphalt on top of what is already there. This is called an overlay. Unfortunately, this doesn't work in most cases. The reason is simple. Each layer of new asphalt raises the road by the thickness of the added asphalt. This will add 1-1/2 to 2 inches of additional height in the roadway. The net result is changes to the drainage, especially at driveways. With overlay, places where paving water flowed in the road may now flow into the driveway onto private property. We just cannot allow roads to continue to increase in height. Plus, if the existing road is in poor condition, adding another coat of asphalt on top will not last. The road will be the same as it was before the "repair", or perhaps worse, very quickly. Like our earlier painting analogy, painting over a peeling surface will only peel again.

The next option is to "cold plane" the old road to prepare it for paving. Cold planning removes an amount of asphalt approximately equal to the amount of new asphalt being added back. Thus, the road height stays the same before and after paving and storm water drainage is not worsened. This preparation method works only if the old road is mostly structurally solid, but it may be irregular. This method preserves the major shape and grades of the old. However, in some cases the new asphalt can be used to make very minor changes in grading and drainage. After cold planing only the top coat of asphalt needs to be added, rather than a base and top coat with the reclamation method. This process is moderate in cost since cold only one layer of asphalt is needed.

The last option is to "reclaim the old Road." Reclaiming grinds up the old paving down into the base road material below the asphalt and homogenizes the mixture. The road is then regraded to re-establish the shape and grades of the roadway. Excess material is then trucked away so that the final road after paving will be at the correct height. After regrading, a base layer of asphalt is laid followed by a topcoat of asphalt. This is the process that was used in the Common area last year. Where there is ledge close to the underside of the old road, reclaiming becomes more difficult, since the teeth on the reclaiming machine do not like granite ledge at all. The huge carbide tipped teeth fracture often on ledge and machine maintenance and down time is very high as a result. For this reason reclaim companies don't like to work in areas with surface ledge. This is far and away the most complex of the options since the old road is reduced to a fine material that can easily be regraded and compacted into a good road base.

Reclamation is only used when absolutely required by the condition of the old road. But, it does result essentially in a totally new road. This is the most expensive option since reclaiming is about twice the cost of cold planing and two coats of asphalt are required.

Little Harbor Paving Sequence – Now, let's look at the way this methodology applies to the Cohasset roads awaiting their paving; Beach St., Jerusalem Rd. and Atlantic Ave. After the DPW considered the condition of these roads and we met with the Sewer and Water Commission representatives as well as our paving contractor we decided on the following approaches:

• Beach Street — This road is in the poorest condition of the roads to be paved. So, the road will be reclaimed and then given a new base coat of asphalt, followed by a top coat. Beach St. will be the first major road to be undertaken in 2010, but we must wait for the gas company to replace about 600 feet of gas main starting at the Highland Avenue end. The gas company should be finished such that we can begin the reclamation road work on Beach in late April or early May.

• Jerusalem Road — Jerusalem will be next in the sequence of work. We will be cold planing this road to a uniform height and top coating it. This work will begin after the completion of Beach Street and take between 6 weeks and 2 months to complete.

• Atlantic Avenue — Finally, Atlantic will be cold planed and top coated. At this time our plans are to do this work in the fall after the beach season is over and school has begun.

The side roads connecting to the above three main roads will be completed as the main roads are paved. By next winter, the Little Harbor roads should be in better shape than they were at the start of the project.

Other Paving Work — In addition to the paving needed to complete the Little Harbor Project, the Town will be updating several other roads around our town. Sohier Street will be cold planed and paved from Fair Oaks Lane to Ripley Road. Beechwood Street will be cold planed and paved from Norman Todd to Route 3A. Pond will also be cold planed from the high school to Route 3A. Of necessity this work will need to be done during the school summer recess. So, these paving projects will be interspersed with the Little Harbor work as required to meet the schedule requirements.

LIBRARY CORNER

MamaSteph, Story Time for little patrons

The following events will take place at Paul Pratt Memorial Library, 35 Ripley Road. For more information, call 781-383-1348 or visit cohassetlibrary.org.

MamaSteph – MamaSteph will be performing in the Meeting Room on Monday, March 29 and April 5, 12, and 26 at 10:30 a.m.. MamaSteph is generously sponsored by the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Story Time – Story Time will take place in the Story Room on Tuesday, March 30 and April 6, 13, 20, and 27 at 10:30. Drop in and join us. All ages and communities welcome.

Art Exhibit – South Shore Art Center will present an art exhibition at the library featuring the works of Dianne Panarelli Miller through April 30. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 8 p.m., Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays; 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Wednesdays and Fridays; and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturdays.

Library Book Group – Join others for coffee and discussion of Carol Goodman's book "Night Villa" at 10 a.m., on Wednesday, March 31. Free. All are welcome.

Movie Matinee –A free showing of the classic film "The Man Who Knew Too Much," starring James Stewart and Doris Day, will take place at 11 a.m., on Friday, April 2. Free admission and light refreshments courtesy of the Friends of the Cohasset Library.

Great Decisions Discussion Group – Become a participant in the Great Decisions Discussion Group at the library. Great Decision is a nation-wide discussion group, which focuses on current foreign policy decisions being made in this country. The group meets every Tuesday morning at 10:30 a.m. beginning April 27, through June 15. Space is limited. Register online through the website or call for further information.

Ongoing at the Library – Brain Fitness, a computer program designed to exercise auditory and memory skills; Knitting Group, 10 a.m., on Wednesdays. Edna Finnegan from the Senior Center will be on hand to help people learn how to knit or help with a knitting project.

St. Patrick's Day was delightful

SENIOR SCENE

LOUISE SMULLEN

...spring has arrived, and the birds are beginning to sing again. Daffodils and other spring plants are poking through the damp earth.

Wasn't it great to see the sun after a whole weekend of rain and high winds, to say nothing of the flooding? Having never experienced the flooding of my home, I can only imagine how heart breaking it must be.

On a happier note, spring has arrived, and the birds are beginning to sing again. Daffodils and other spring plants are poking through the damp earth.

On St. Patrick's Day the seniors were treated to a corned beef dinner at St. Anthony's Parish Hall. After we had eaten our fill, we were entertained by the championship group of Irish step dancers. It is a wonder to me how they can dance so vigorously while keeping their arms held stiffly at their sides. They were almost done when suddenly the electricity went off while a young lady was dancing a solo. The music stopped and so did she. When it was discovered to be at town-wide electrical problem, the girl finished her routine without benefit of music. One of the stars of the show was a wee lassie of five years, who performed beautifully even though there was no music.

Linda Krasner of Pedicare for the Elderly, spoke at one of our Wednesday seminars. She trims toenails, gives foot massages and check for calluses, color, edema and more. If needed, she will recommend seeing a podiatrist. Linda is situated at 60 Elm St. An appointment may be made by calling 781-383-9112. She will also make home visits.

At another seminar a representative from the U.S. Census Bureau spoke about the 2010 census. He went through the questions on the form and explained why it is so necessary to fill it in and mail it.

Police Chief Mark DeLuca joined us for one of our luncheon meetings. He introduced himself giving a run-down of his career with the police force. He in turn introduced Officer Regan Steverman, who is liaison for the CEA. She told what her duties are as an officer and answered questions put forth. We were also warned about scams, particularly those aimed at the elderly.

We are looking forward to next Wednesday's seminar when fire Chief Robert Silvia will speak to us about fire prevention.

Louise Smullen's column appears monthly in the Cohasset Mariner.

CANDIDATES CORNER

Snowdale 'Meet and Greet'

The Committee to Elect Linda Snowdale For School Committee would like to thank Ellen and Michael Maher for hosting a 'Meet and Greet' on Tuesday evening. This event gave Linda an opportunity to spread the word about issues near and dear, as well as a chance to hear from parents and students about their concerns. This followed a well-attended meeting of concerned parents Monday night that was held at the library. A note of appreciation goes out to Howie Altholtz for holding an informational gathering at his home this past weekend where a lively discussion was held and useful information was disseminated. To learn more about Linda, visit her website at www.snowdale.info.

Coffee for Ognibene

In support of Paul Ognibene for School Committee, Kristina Coffey of 78 Elm Street will be hosting a candidate coffee at her home on Monday, March 29 from 9:30 – 11:30 a.m. Coffey said, "The event will be a great opportunity to meet Paul Ognibene and learn about his candidacy. As a mother of two children, I'm voting for Paul on April 10 because he'll listen to parents like me and make sure our schools are the best they can be."

On Tuesday, April 6 from 7 – 9 p.m., Ann Musto of 42 Stevens Lane will also be hosting a candidate meet-and-greet for Ognibene. Musto said, "I support Paul Ognibene because he has the energy and business savvy to provide leadership and accountability at the School Committee."

Ognibene's campaign Web site is www.VoteForPaulO.com.

Coffee for Astino, survey

Howie Altholtz graciously hosted a coffee for Jeanne Astino this week, where she met some new supporters and exchanged ideas on our schools. She looks forward to several more opportunities currently in the planning stages in the remaining weeks prior to the April 10th election!

Another survey will be added to Jeanne Astino's website (www.astino.info) next week. This newest addition to a series of surveys will ask for teacher input on school issues here in Cohasset. Jeanne invites all Cohasset teachers to participate in this survey, which should be available at the beginning of the week!

Open Space Plan completed

The Open Space and Recreation plan for the next seven years – until 2016 – has been completed. The plan will keep the town eligible for a variety of state grant funding.

The Open Space Committee, with the help from its consultant Beals and Thomas, spent the last year compiling the data and input needed for the comprehensive plan. The plan is currently under review by the Department of Conservation and Recreation.

"The challenge will be staying on the plan and making progress year to year," Selectmen vice chair Karen Quigley said. To that end, the Board of Selectmen voted to keep the Open Space Committee active and head up the coordination efforts to accomplish the various goals set forward.

The objectives of the plan are:

• Make protection of open space a priority in all town land use decisions.

• Protect the natural environment, including wildlife habitats and wetlands, and preserve Cohasset's scenic beauty and local character.

Campaign commotion in Kasperowicz camp

Allegations denied by facility, Delahunt's office

Kasperowicz, who was not present for the incident, said his campaign worker was asked to remove his table, signage and campaign material from the premises.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Ray Kasperowicz, a republican candidate for the 10th Congressional District and Cohasset resident, stirred up his campaign in Quincy this week.

In a press release put out on Wednesday Kasperowicz alleges one of his campaign workers was removed from President's Place in Quincy Center on Monday after being requested to do so by the office of Congressman William Delahunt's office, which is on the eighth floor of the building.

"We were the persona non grata," Kasperowicz said in a phone interview. "Why should [Delahunt] care? It ain't right and I figured we should let the world know."

Kasperowicz, who was not present for the incident, said his campaign worker was asked to remove his table, signage and campaign material from the premises.

However, Amy Tran, who manages the property on behalf of Lincoln Property Company, had a different story.

Tran said she was directed by the owners of the property to not allow political campaigning in the building. Several tenants had weighed in and believed Kasperowicz's solicitation of nomination signatures represented a conflict of interest.

As a private property, Tran said they reserved the right to allow or not allow campaigning in the building.

When asked Kasperowicz said Tran did not directly implicate Delahunt's office, "she was dancing around it," he said of his interpretation.

On Wednesday, Delahunt's Quincy office flatly denied they had anything to do with the removal of Kasperowicz's campaign worker on Monday.

"It is absolutely not true; we never asked for his removal," said Kim Arouca, district director for Delahunt's office, which is located on the eighth floor of President's Place. Arouca said Kasperowicz had come up to the office on a previous occasion to introduce himself. "I thought the staff treated him very cordially," she said.

The Massachusetts Constitution protects the right to solicit signatures on candidate nomination papers and ballot question petitions, in a reasonable and unobtrusive manner, in the common areas of privately owned shopping centers.

President's Place is primarily an office building located on Hancock Street across from the Quincy Center T station and has only a few retail tenants. A first floor atrium has a Dunkin' Donuts and there is a convenience store and several service-oriented offices spaces.

Kasperowicz's campaign worker had set up a table at the President's Place atrium on three Mondays during the past month in an effort to collect the needed 2000 certified signatures to be placed on the ballot.

Kasperowicz announced his campaign for Congress back in early September.

When reached on Wednesday he said today was not a "good day" for his campaign as Senator Scott Brown endorsed republican candidate for Congress, Jeff Perry.

"All that leaves me with is the voters. Hopefully they will endorse me," Kasperowicz said, who has coined himself as the "citizen legislator." The candidate is making a handful of appearances at events around the South Shore over the next few weeks, but it limited by his work schedule – he is a certified public accountant – until Tax Day April 15.

"Once I get through May 1, I'll be more candidate than accountant," Kasperowicz said.

It's not the level, it's the label

COMMENTARY

TRISH MORSE

I've been thinking a lot about what transpired at the most recent School Committee Meeting. On Wednesday, March 17th, the Program of Studies for the High School was presented to a packed meeting room.

Principal Antolini and Director of Curriculum Nancy Mrzyglod gave a thorough overview of the curriculum for next year including details on individual department offerings and sequencing. At that time, Mr. Antolini stated clearly that all core classes would always be offered at the College Prep and Honors levels. He also made clear that a limited number of electives might be combined (as is current practice), and explained the circumstances under which these combined classrooms are formed. We were repeatedly assured that nothing will change next year. With these assurances, I am willing to take Mr. Antolini at his word and trust that this will be so.

Rest assured however that all eyes will be on the schedules this spring and the final schedules in the fall to ensure that there are no surprises. I do not blame the community for remaining skeptical. Since the beginning of what I call the "deleveling debacle", there have clearly been two official party lines on this topic from the administration. Which to believe? I think many people are still chewing on this, trying to figure out how the lines of communication could be so frayed as to allow this to happen. The community is also trying to understand the motivation behind not simply being forthright about this from the start.

At the "Library Meeting" on Feb. 2nd, after Mr. Antolini finished assuring the audience that he had no plan to delevel classes as the audience had feared, and that "nothing would change", Superintendent Walsh made the following statement on the topic of deleveling: "So, there has been a plan, it has been ongoing. It is not something that happens over night, but is part of the discussion that we need to have as a community and something that we all want for our children."

Now it would seem to me that if there were to be a discussion with the community, that it should actually include the community and faculty and should take place before plans were in place and "ongoing". Also, it would be helpful not to make assumptions about what we all want for our children without first asking the question. Parents have made it clear that they feel heterogeneous classrooms will not serve the needs of our students. To attempt to bring such sweeping changes in through the back door in the dark of night in spite of loud opposition breaks the trust the community should have with the superintendent.

Going forward, if there are deficiencies in our current leveling method, for heaven's sake, lets talk about them! The faculty, parents, administration and students should examine the roots of the issue together. In my mind, the issues we have, which start in the Middle School really center on the label, not the level. So why eliminate the levels? We could simply stop using the terms "Levels 1 and 2" and the term "CP" and use course names instead. Ninth -grade Algebra I CP could simply be Algebra 1. Eighth-grade Pre Algebra Level 2 would simply be Pre Algebra. Algebra II CP would be Algebra II and so on. The way the courses sequence, this totally works. Those are just a few examples, and it wouldn't take too much brainpower to figure out the rest.

In the past several years, the administration has been touting the ever-rising Honors and AP enrollments. This might sound impressive, but it seems at odds with the concept of breaking down barriers between College Prep, Honors and AP. It is no wonder that students who would simply not experience success at those levels might feel as though they are more and more the minority. Let's think about this! Removing barriers doesn't have to mean pushing everyone up and up and up. It can also mean making sure that instruction across the board is top-notch and students are supported and can achieve a sense of mastery wherever they are.

I am not an educator, and don't know the first thing about running a school system, but I do feel strongly that communication, honesty and respect for the ideas and concerns of others need to be the cornerstone of any public institution, especially one that involves the future of our children in such a tangible way. Only with leadership that understands and embraces this concept will we be working together toward the same goals.

Trish Morse lives at 78 Forest Avenue.

Supt.'s vision doesn't mesh with Cohasset

TO THE EDITOR:

I was deeply concerned on several levels when I left the most recent school committee meeting last week. Despite the reassurances we received from Superintendent Walsh that she was not planning to revamp our entire school system to move to a more heterogeneous, or deleveled model, I, and most other parents in the room, left with the distinct feeling that this is exactly what she is planning to do. In fact, I am told it is what she has been planning for quite some time. I am concerned for our children because I have taught in a deleveled classroom, and know that it is extremely difficult to implement without extensive and ongoing teacher training, as well as resources, i.e. money that Cohasset clearly does not have at the present time.

When asked if there was any money set aside to train our teachers, or any money for resources, we were told that there were courses at Northeastern that the teachers were welcome to take! (We were also told that the teachers were in favor of this change in policy. Upon speaking with several teachers we are finding that the majority of teachers are indeed not on board. Perhaps because they are being asked to do something that is impossible to do with limited resources and training!) In this kind of an environment students at every level suffer academically and socially, and teachers are left frustrated and demoralized.

Upon speaking with numerous parents in our community, I know that most people are not confident that this kind of a model is beneficial, given Cohasset's demographics and the fact that we are trying to remain competitive with the best schools in the Boston area. I am, frankly, surprised that someone with a vision so different from that of the community has stayed in office for so long. Have we all had our heads in the sand?

It is one thing to have a vision. It is another to force one's vision on a community that does not share it. Sneaking it in the back door without open communication with parents, teachers and town officials is plainly wrong. Using the taxpayers' money to do it is clearly irresponsible.

I am disappointed in this Superintendent, as well as the School Committee who continues to renew her contract year after year. I am also disappointed in myself for being complacent, when my children's futures are at stake.

Scouts' help appreciated

TO THE EDITOR:

I want to thank three Boy Scouts that helped out at last week's Pinewood Derby. Luke O'Brien and Jack O'Brien did the legwork, retrieving the cars at the end of every race. Robbie Hillman ran a very complicated computer-tracking program. Without them the Derby would have been cancelled. It was a long night of racing with about 40 cars and each car ran in four races, 160 races in all! Through it all, Robbie, Jack and Luke held the races together. Again, thank you boys for a great job!

Candidates' debate Tuesday on Cable-TV

Next week, Our Town hosts Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin, will hosta televised debate among School Committee Candidates on Tuesday, March 30 at 7:30pm. The event will take place in Selectmen's Office in Town Hall and will be broadcast live on Comcast's channel 10.

Members of the public are invited to send questions for consideration to Pat at: Massmartins@comcast.net. Questions from the audience will not be allowed during the broadcast. Each candidate will have an opportunity to give opening and closing statements.

The debate gives Pat and Mark a chance to serve in this capacity once more as their show has been on hiatus while the cable studio is being built in town hall. When the studio opens in July 2010, Mark and Pat plan to get right to work to bring their popular show back to viewers on a bi-weekly basis.

Without current studio capacity, the debate can only be broadcast live and therefore will only be available for viewing to the public at that time. "So we hope folks mark their calendars and make a point to tune in to get to know the candidates", Mark said.

Small business health insurance equal rights to small purchasers, allowing them to negotiate, group buy, and institute wellness programs that will result in savings for their employees. In short, the bill will return real competition to the marketplace and force insurers to stop this discriminatory cost-shifting to small businesses.

Predictably, the insurance companies oppose this common sense legislation. They have introduced an alternative "reform" measure that fails to address the fundamental problem, will not deliver comparable insurance products for comparable premiums, and arguably would look attractive only to a small minority of employers who have already bought all the way down the coverage ladder.

The unfinished business of health care reform in Massachusetts is to control costs and to make reform work for small businesses, their employees and families. Small employers started out with higher premiums than their big competition before the passage of reform and the price disparity has grown with each passing year. Giving small businesses the ability to join together to buy health insurance would be a major step in the right direction.

Absentee ballots are available for annual election

Absentee ballots for the Annual Town Election on April 10, are now available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, April 9, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. If you will be in town on Election Day and you are able to come to the polls you should vote in person.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

FOR SCHOOL COMMITTEE CANDIDATES: We talked about the School Committee's role in communicating with the public and making their meetings accessible to all, but how about the School Committee's role in communicating with the school department? Where does the buck stop when questions arise about the direction of education or issues at the schools — with the Superintendent or the School Committee?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Adrienne MacCarthy

When I was elected to the School Committee in 2004, we were operating under the 1995 Strategic Plan; this is an important to note since a strategic plan is a school system's educational road map. In 2004/2005 under the leadership of a new superintendent, Dr.Walsh, the School Committee and various/numerous stakeholders from our town developed a new strategic plan. It has been implemented with quantitative measures and used to drive the educational goals, policies and budget of the schools for the past five years. You can access the plan at www.cohassetk12.org.

As a Committee member, I believe we have been more effective in advancing the education of all by focusing on the strategic direction of the schools. The committee has set local educational goals, policy and budget within the framework of statewide standards and the superintendent has promoted and implemented the advancement of the vision and mission set out in the strategic plan. Basically, the School Committee is responsible for the "what" (i.e. educational goals/standards, policy and budget). The superintendent is responsible for the "how" or the operations; the educational leader and who provides administrative leadership for all school staff in operational matters and proposing and implementing policy.

At the end of the day, when the line between policy and operations isn't clear, it is incumbent upon both the superintendent and School Committee to communicate and collaborate openly. Then the "buck" stops with the School Committee usually through a consensus or vote of the committee.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/ Paul M. Ognibene

The buck stops with the School Committee. I've had this same conversation with a variety of people, in town, and there are varying opinions about whether the Superintendent or School Committee is responsible for the performance of our schools. To me, however, there's simply no debate.

This issue is among the most important we face. I'm running for School Committee with a solitary purpose: to ensure that Cohasset has the best schools in Massachusetts.

Strategy and direction are set by the School Committee, with input from parents and the community. The Superintendent and the rest of the administration are charged with day-to-day operations. The School Committee needs to hold the administration accountable for the administration's responsibilities and be vigilant to make sure delegating is effective and that school operations are never disconnected from the community's vision.

One of the School Committee's key responsibilities is to evaluate the Superintendent, as well as to make sure that we have the best teachers and resources available for our students. I take this responsibility seriously and will ensure that evaluations are transparent and that the Superintendent and administration are held accountable for results they've been entrusted to deliver.

And I'd like to go even further to inject even more accountability. To that end, I propose a new initiative of voluntary annual performance evaluations of the School Committee by the community. This will create a valuable feedback loop and keep residents involved and engaged.

Parents rely on School Committee members to be advocates for their children. As your elected representative, I'll provide leadership to keep our schools in tune with our community's priorities and values. I'll work hard every day to give parents a voice and to ensure our schools are the gold standard they deserve to be.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Linda Snowdale

The buck stops with the school committee and starts with the voters! School Committee members are elected to serve the voters of Cohasset! The superintendent is supposed to answer to the Committee while serving as the educational advisor, overseeing the administration of the school system in a manner that is consistent with the district goals listed in the Strategic Plan. Cohasset's plan was a collaborative effort of eighteen, including the superintendent, a current school committee incumbent, staff, parents and community members.

The currently outdated Strategic Plan states goals for improving our educational system. Let's use parts of the Strategic Plan as a tool for evaluating the school committee/superintendent. Over the last five years have they:

- improved communication?
- set high expectations and a respectful, positive learning environment for students, staff and the community?
- created a true school budget that accurately reflects the needs of the district?
- developed a working technology plan for the maintenance and replacement of equipment?

Information gathering suggests that the Strategic Plan has not been well carried out to the satisfaction of many students, parents, school department employees and parents. Statements cite poor and disrespectful communication, a disregard for input, ignored concerns, processes/timetables not followed, low parent/faculty morale, disproportionate amount of unemployment, outdated technology, lack of a transparent budget, exorbitant legal fees, wage disputes, disagreements regarding the Program of Studies, scheduling/deleveling, student/teacher ratios, and concerns about Department Supervisors.

Let's turn these dissatisfactions into new visions for our schools.

Honoring roles for effective school committee-superintendent relationships and valuing input, can be conducive to team building with the community so all are confident in our leadership as they advocate for our students.

Voters, the buck also stops with you on April 10. I look forward to representing you and would appreciate your vote. Please visit www.snowdale.info.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Jeanne Astino

In January a representative from the Massachusetts Association of School Committees (MASC) conducted a workshop for our School Committee members. I attended this workshop as an observer, in order to learn more about this subject. The gentleman from MASC stated that the role of the School Committee is to set budget, policies, and to implement performance standards. It is also the job of the Committee to develop a mission statement for the district and establish goals and objectives. It is then the job of administration to set in motion, district wide practice plans to implement the School Committee's policies.

I believe it is the charge of each School Committee member to be fully invested and make it their mission to understand what is occurring, both in our schools and with the administration. It is the School Committee's responsibility to set policies in place and ensure that they are implemented as intended. These policies should be clearly communicated to the Superintendent so there is no misunderstanding on the intention of the School Committee regarding these policies.

Additionally, as an elected body the School Committee has a responsibility to the town electorate, who have put their faith in their ability to conduct business as set forth by law.

Members need to stay on top of issues that are of interest and concern to the community and be a welcoming point of contact to the public. It is the role of the School Committee to serve as the "checks and balances" in the system ensuring the Superintendent and administration are always acting in the best interest of our students. The law states that the school administrators report to the Superintendent, who in turn reports to the School Committee. Without clear direction from the Committee, the system cannot efficiently function.

NEXT QUESTION

For School Committee candidates: Leveling appears to be one of the most controversial issues before the School Committee. What are the pros and/or cons of leveling and where do you stand on the issue?

Please note: answers to this question will appear next week.

Responses should be brief — no more than 300 words — and must be received by noon, Wed. (March 31). Candidates are asked to be specific and make every word count. Submissions will be cut if they exceed the word limit. (We use the word-count feature on the computer to determine the number of words.)

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the 5 p.m. Tuesday deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, or would like to suggest a Question of the Week, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

TEN REASONS TO ATTEND CAMP OPEN HOUSES

BY BETTE BUSSEL – EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, AMERICAN CAMP ASSOCIATION, NEW ENGLAND

Warmer weather is still a few weeks away, but many families are already thinking of summer camp. As the search begins, it is important to find the right match for your family, ensuring that your child has a satisfying and memorable experience. Camp open houses provide a hands-on and in-depth way to explore potential program you cannot get any other way. Here are ten reasons to make camp open houses a part of your camp search:

1. Speak directly with directors and representatives in person about the most important questions on your mind— questions the camp's materials may not address and questions specific to your search and your child

2. Guided tours of the facility provide an opportunity for you & your child to see exactly where they'll be eating, sleeping, playing, and learning.

3. Gain a better understanding of the camp experience – representatives in attendance will tell you everything you need to know about what their camp offers. Some open houses will even have past campers and their families available to speak with you.

4. Relieve nervousness and apprehension and quell fear of the unknown by becoming familiar with the camp. By meeting people from the camp and seeing the location itself, you and your child will have a better idea of what's in store.

5. Give your child an opportunity to envision themselves at the camp by allowing your child to tour the camp in person, it will help them envision what they'll experience.

6. Become familiar with the camp's personality – does the camp program seem to address what your child is looking for in a camp? Now is the time to determine if the potential union will be the right match

7. Look at pictures and mementos from previous years – build your child's excitement by seeing the smiling faces of previous campers and what the camp has done in the past.

8. Compare and contrast multiple options – camps will be putting their best foot forward to impress you. Use this time to see which one offers exactly what you and your child need.

9. Get applications and information in one place – instead of waiting to receive information, save time and paper by picking up forms and paperwork you need.

10. Admission is free –open houses provide valuable information and assistance to you at no cost.

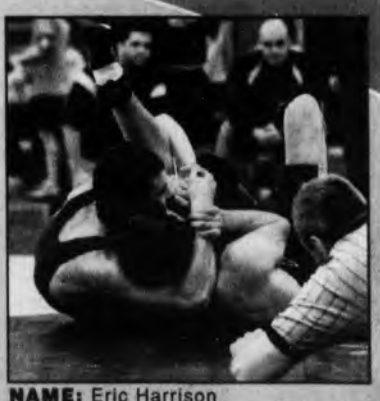
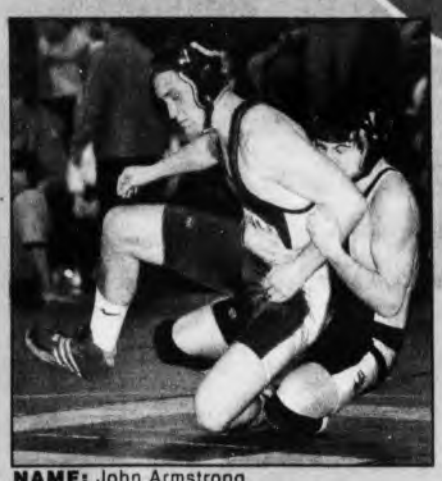
NAME: Pat Claflin
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Pembroke
WEIGHT CLASS: 145
STATS: An absolute machine at 145, Claflin turned last year's career season into a monster campaign this winter. The senior captain posted a mind-numbing 48-2 record. He placed third at All-States and third at New Englands, the highest finishes by any wrestler in school history. He finished his high school career with 116 wins, second all-time at PHS.

NAME: Geoff Bullock
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Duxbury
STATS: One of the most feared 130-pounders in the state, Bullock went 41-1 this year and advanced to the New England Championships where he picked up three wins. He finished third in school history with 114 wins.

NAME: Mike Mui
YEAR: Sophomore
SCHOOL: Hingham
WEIGHT CLASS: 103
STATS: Mui was one of the most dangerous wrestlers in the state this year. He won the All-State tournament with a dramatic pin over Lowell's Andrew Gauthier, the only Mass wrestler who has beaten him. Mui had also won the Div. 3 State Tournament and the Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament along the way.



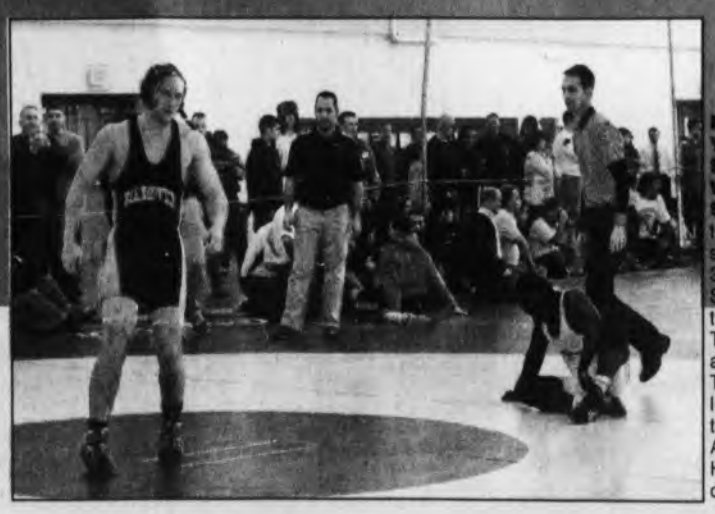
NAME: Ryan Taverna
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Norwell
WEIGHT CLASS: 130
STATS: Taverna made history at Norwell High School this year by becoming the first NHS wrestler to reach the All-State Championships in nearly a decade after he placed fourth at the State Championships. He made his third straight trip to states this year, and even more impressive was his record. The senior captain won 24 of his 29 matches.



NAME: Danny Murphy
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Weymouth
WEIGHT CLASS: Heavyweight
STATS: Weymouth's co-captain concluded his high school career in style, finishing as runner-up at the New England Championships in Connecticut. Murphy, who was a Super Team selection in football, is the first Weymouth wrestler to advance to the NE finals since Joe Tully won in 1999 at 145 pounds. Murphy finished the season with a 42-4 record.

NAME: Jack Murphy
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Cohasset
WEIGHT CLASS: 145
STATS: Murphy tied the Cohasset career win record this season with his 121st career victory. He finished second at the Div. 3 State Tournament and won a match in the All-State tournament despite a stomach bug that wore him out. During the regular season, Murphy had a 31-1 record.

NAME: Eric Harrison
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Weymouth
WEIGHT CLASS: 135 pounds
STATS: Weymouth's co-captain was unbeaten during the regular season for the Wildcats. He followed it up by winning the South Regional title and finished third in the All-State championship. He proceeded to take fifth position at the new England championships. This new his second appearance on our wrestling Super team.



NAME: John Armstrong
YEAR: Junior
SCHOOL: Hanover
WEIGHT CLASS: 160
STATS: John Armstrong finished fourth in the Div. 3 State Tournament, earning himself a trip to the All-State tournament, where he won a match.

NAME: Andrew Littauer
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Cohasset
Weight Class: 152
STATS: Littauer finished second at the Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament and followed that performance with a sixth-place finish in the Div. 3 State Tournament. Littauer also won a match at the All-State Tournament.

NAME: Aaron Hunt
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Marshfield
WEIGHT CLASS: 215
STATS: Despite battling a shoulder injury throughout most of the postseason, Hunt managed to muscle through the pain and place fourth at All-States, sending him to his first-ever New England Championships. There, he picked up one victory. A sixth-place finisher at the Division 2 State Meet, Hunt also made it to the quarterfinals of the Marshfield Holiday Tournament this winter.

NAME: Frannie Armstrong
YEAR: Senior
SCHOOL: Hanover
WEIGHT CLASS: 171
STATS: Frannie lost just two dual-meet matches all season, and then took a 36-3 record into the All-State Tournament. He won the Div. 3 South Sectional Tournament and was third at the Div. 3 State Tournament, with his only loss there a 7-5 setback in the semifinal round. Armstrong also broke the Hanover career record for career victories this season.

Football leagues put to a vote

Radical changes could be in store for 2011 season

By David Wolcott
DWOLCOTT@CNC.COM

PLYMOUTH – A proposal to radically change the high school football playoff system will be on the table Friday at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association.

The MIAA Football Ad Hoc Committee has spent the last two years studying and gathering input on the current system used for the state playoffs and in what ways the system could be tweaked for the betterment of the student-athletes.

The idea being put up for a vote would eliminate, in the case of football only, the current league system, eliminating the likes of the Patriot League, the Atlantic Coast League and the South Coast Conference. In their place would be six statewide football alignments based solely on male enrollment, with mathematical adjustments made to private and vocational schools.

If approved, the plan would take effect in the fall of 2011.

Football

Division 1, 3 and 5 would have South and North Divisions. Divisions 2, 4 and 6 would have teams divided into North, South, Central and West Divisions.

The current male enrollments would put perennial football powers Brockton, B.C. High and Bridgewater-Raynham alongside Weymouth and Mansfield in Division 1. Marshfield and Oliver Ames would be in Division 2, while Plymouth South, Silver Lake, Plymouth North, Duxbury, Hingham, Pembroke, and Randolph would all be placed in Division 3.

Fighting for playoff spots in Division 4 would be Wareham, Canton, Norton and Norwell.

The competition in Division 5 would include Old Rochester, Hanover, Rockland, East Bridgewater, Abington, Carver and Holbrook while Cohasset, Bristol-Plymouth, Hull and South Shore Voke would all be in Division 6.

Plymouth North Athletic Director and Head Football Coach Bill Burkhead is a member of the Ad Hoc committee that will be presenting the proposal.

"A lot of research has gone into this proposal and what we were looking to do is find a balance of fairness in playoff opportunities between football and the other high school sports," Burkhead said. "Right now, about 15 per-

POPPIN' OFF

WILLIAM WASSERSUG

The entire look of high school football could be changed as early as today when the MIAA puts their new playoff system to a vote.

A yes vote would change the entire way high school football is run, and to tell the truth, I don't know if it is a bad thing.

I admit I like having leagues and rivalries, but I also like the idea that with the proposed changes, there will be many more opportunities for teams to battle for a state championship.

It may take some time to get used to added travel and potentially building new rivalries, but after watching more than one deserving team get shut out of any chance to compete for anything more than pride after losing one game in league play, something just didn't seem right.

Cohasset easily could have been a victim of this format.

Instead, this year it was Abington who suffered.

One loss to Cohasset and no playoff hope, even though in the end, the two teams each finished with one loss.

Now, I'm not crying for Abington. They've been to the big games enough times, but it would seem that there has to be something a little more fair.

Scituate was a casualty of the same system.

They lost a non-league game to Cohasset, but in the end, their playoff hope came down to an overtime loss to Duxbury.

Yes, one league loss in the Patriot League and no chance.

It's as bad as the NCAA, which, I truly believe, should have a playoff system.

I won't go into that right now though.

Going back to the high school changes, it will be interesting to see just how changes might affect the Skippers.

With new alignments, Cohasset could find itself in a position of well, almost boredom.

Looking at some of the teams they might be playing is almost scary for the opponents.

The squad that coach Pete Afanasiw rolled out this season may have set some school records against a few of these schools, although knowing the staff and the fact that they value sportsmanship, it may have been more a chance to get younger players into games more.

Still, the fact that opponents and playoffs would be set by enrollments rather than league play, which can be well, unfair to smaller schools, should give everyone a fair chance to compete, and knowing your school will be playing schools their own size could be great incentive for building programs.

Speaking of football playoff changes, here's a thumbs up for the NFL's new overtime rule change.

Yes, the owners slipped this one through while the coaches were playing golf, but I honestly like the idea that a team can't win the toss and just boot a field goal to

South Coastal Hockey League roundup

By Mark Ducharme
CORRESPONDENT

The Grizzlies pulled off an incredible comeback in their Master Div. matchup in the South Coastal Hockey League.

They were trailing the Roadrunners, 5-1, but came back with five straight goals in the last 16 minutes to pull out a 6-5 come from behind win.

Hanover's Jeff Ray had three goals including the game-winner with 4:25 left and an assist and Joe McCafferty had two goals with an assist for the Grizzlies. Kevin Jones of Pembroke added a goal and an assist for the Grizzlies.

Craig Ingemi had two goals and an assist for the Roadrunners, Bob Ward, Kevin Barnard and Sean Parrell of Marshfield added a goal each.

Keith Smith of Marshfield scored three goals and assisted on another as the Masters Div. leading Wolves rolled to a 6-1 win over the Aeros. Jonathan Hilldebrandt of Hanover, John Tympanic and John Dougenik also scored for the Wolves while Pembroke's Dave Bonneau scored the Aeros goal.

Derek Rappaport of Pembroke scored two goals and assisted on another as the Thunder rolled to a 4-1 Masters Div. win over the Vipers.

Hanover's Mike Joy and Tom Maguire added a goal each for the Thunder and Peter Fallon of Hanover scored the Vipers goal.

Jeff Gauthier scored with 3:35 left in regulation as the Maple Leafs remain undefeated in the Classics Div. as they tied the Rangers 2-2. Shawn Malloy scored and Gauthier scored in the shootout for the Leafs, who tied the Rangers, 1-1 in the shootout.

Pembroke's Bill Sawtelle and Hanover's Jay Parker scored for the Rangers, who got a goal from Joe O'Connell in the shootout.

Mike Fahie of Pembroke and Kirk Souza both scored two goals each in a six goal in six minute outburst as the Canadiens pulled away to a 7-1 Classics Div. win over the Bruins. Souza ended the game with three goals and an assist in the game.

John Davey and Jim Donnelly added a goal each for the Canadiens and steve Anzuoni scored for the Bruins.

Dana Dolanbany of Norwell had two goals and an assist, Marshfield's Tim Cruz scored a goal and Jay Faherty had three assists as the Sharks nipped the Stingers, 3-2 in a Legends Div. game.

Peter Tamborella of Pembroke and John Scag scored for the Stingers.

Duxbury's Kevin Mackin scored three goals and Steve Concannon added two goals and two assists as the Whalers pulled out a 7-1 Legends Div. win over the Crusaders.

Rob Dennis of Cohasset and Bill McMahon of Scituate had a goal each for the Whalers and Mike Simon scored for the Crusaders.

School Committee approves sailing team

Students from Cohasset High School, Hull High School and the South Shore Charter Public School (SSCPS) will compete as a regional team this spring.

Students and parents, with the support of Sail Nantasket, a non-profit foundation dedicated to encouraging the sport of sailing, worked with Cohasset's athletic director, school committee and school administrators to create this sailing opportunity for our students.

The support from the community, especially our sailing clubs, was essential in establishing this team.

The Hull/Cohasset/SSCPS Sailing team will join Notre Dame, Duxbury, Hingham, Manchester-Essex, Sharon, St. John's Prep, Winchester, Brooks, Cambridge, Concord Academy, Concord-Carlisle, Lynnfield, Natick, Newman, Newton, Newton Country Day, Noble and Greenough, Pingree, Quincy, St. Sebastian's, Winsor, Winthrop, the British School of Boston, Lincoln-Sudbury, Dover-Sherborne, Boston Latin, Wellesley, Buckingham, Brown & Nobles, Swampscott and Gloucester in the Mass Bay League, an organization in Boston that governs the sport and organizes races between high school teams.

The team will be coached by Kevin Broome, an accomplished sailor and coach. He has been a sailing director or instructor at Scituate Harbor, Plymouth, South Shore, and Hull Yacht Clubs. And, for the past several years has coached the Providence College Sailing Team.

High School sailing is the fastest growing segment of sailing in the United States. Sailing teaches teamwork, leadership, decision making, self-confidence, preparation, and other life values by encouraging students to strive to be their best on and off the water.

The Cohasset community is enormously grateful that Sail Nantasket included the Cohasset Skippers in their team's roster.

The Cohasset All Stars Basketball Team and the Dream Team gathered for a photo following the game. The Varsity won 57-54.

Scituate Recreation offering free Special Olympics Youth Track & Field Program

The Scituate Recreation Department, in conjunction with Scituate Special Olympics, is offering a Track and Field training program for athletes ages 7 through Grade 8 who have been identified with some form of learning disability or other special need. The program will take place on Sunday mornings, 8 to 9 a.m., at the Scituate High School track, beginning March 28.

This instructional program will focus on 50 and 100 meter runs and the Turbo Javelin and will be coached by certified track personnel. We also welcome peers who will act as role models and may compete as Unified Partners in Special Olympics. The program is designed to prepare runners for Special Olympics competitions later in the spring. All you need is a water bottle, sneakers, and a desire to run and have fun doing it.

Students from area towns are welcome to participate in this program which is free of charge.

Please contact the Scituate Recreation Department at 781 545-8738 or Taffy Nothnagle @781 383-0895 to register or to ask questions.

Special Olympics is a year-round program of sports training and competition. In Massachusetts, we offer 27 sports to almost 12,000, athletes, and locally 90 Team Scituate/South Shore Mariners youth and adults compete in 12 different sports. Our events are open to all people with intellectual disabilities regardless of the degree of disability. Competitions are divisioned so that every athlete experiences success. Besides the obvious physical benefits of athletic training, athletes and their families have an opportunity to make new friends and experience growth in self-esteem.

Radical changes could be in store for 2011 season

cent of kids who play football get the chance to play in a playoff game. That number rises to 60 percent with other sports."

The current system has each school putting together its own schedule of non-league contests and then the mandatory games with the other league members. One team from each league is eventually crowned champion and moves onto the state semifinal round of the playoffs.

In the new system, an MIAA scheduling committee would handle the scheduling for each member school. At the end of the year, instead of one team going to the playoffs, the top eight teams from each divisional alignment advance into the playoffs.

To get into playoff contention, each team would play seven weeks of games to determine the top eight teams in the division. In Week 8, teams in Divisions 2,4, and 6 would play their first week of the playoffs while Divisions 1, 3 and 5 would have an open date since they have no Central or West conferences.

The playoffs would continue through Week 9 and Week 10 of the season as the non-playoff teams will have games set up by the scheduling committee (Week 9) followed by a week where they can schedule a traditional non-conference opponent.

In Week 11, the two state semifinal games will be played, pairing the teams down to two finalists in all six divisions. Week 12 is left open for the traditional Thanksgiving Day game. Teams would be able to play anyone they choose on the Holiday, with no thought given to divisions.

The final week of the season, Week 13, would bring the six "Super Bowls" to Gillette Stadium, crowning a state champion in all of the divisions.

Got change ...

FROM CHANGE, PAGE 17

win on the first try.

It just seems fair.

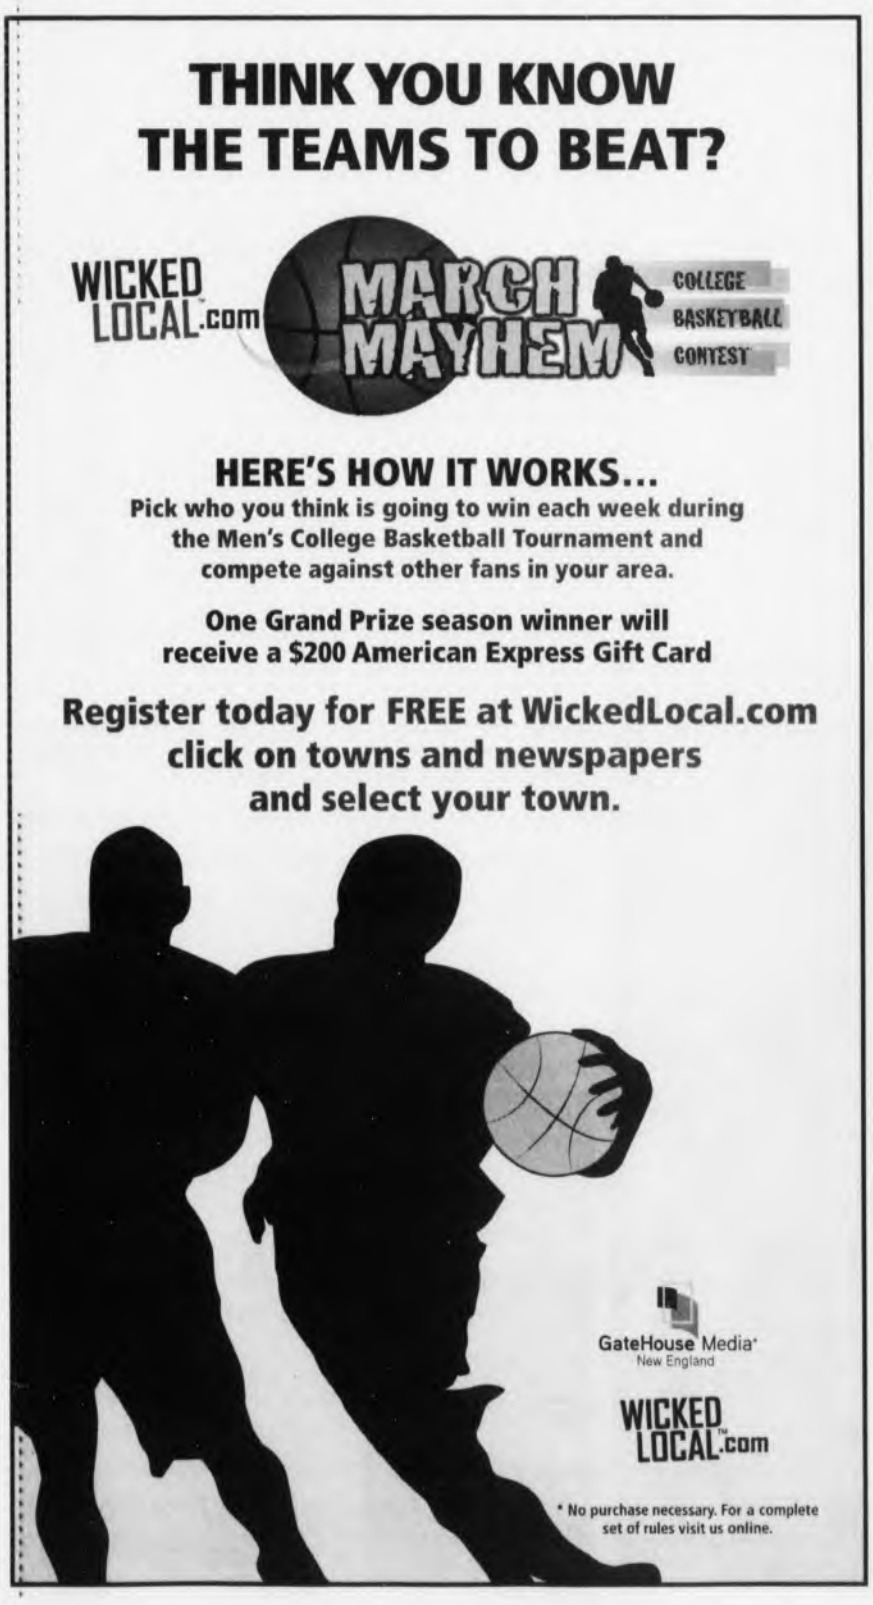
I went to the Faculty Dream Team vs. the varsity All-Star game in Cohasset on Friday night and had to admit it was a lot of fun to watch.

Athletic Director Ron Ford did a nice job with the announcing duties, and more importantly, the kids and the coaches put on an entertaining game that was for a good cause, a band trip.

It's nice to see everyone helping each other out like that.

To the coaches, especially Jim Willis and Pete Afanasiw, you had me and my daughter and her friend laughing and smiling. Thanks.

I can't remember who made the shot, but here's a prop to the varsity boys player who hit one right after the buzzer from behind the backboard.



Reminded me of Larry Bird, and well, myself. I used to be able to make that shot.

Great job to everybody.

Finally, one last congratulations to the girls basketball team.

You have done something amazing and should be proud of not just the accomplishment, but the way you went about it.

Again, great job.

LIFE AT CHS

SEAN MACCARTHY

Hello. I would just like to start this article off by saying, yes, I am still Mr. Skipper. All annoying and fake egotism aside, I will be honest with you. This week was pretty lame. It was very dull compared to last week. But that's not to say this article won't be as good, so keep reading!

Monday was a day that I just didn't want to go through. I know for a fact I am not the only one. The main reason for this negative nelly feeling was most definitely the weather. This past weekend was like a mini summer and it got me wicked excited for some stupendous weather. My dreams were destroyed Monday morning as I awoke to the sounds of raindrops. All I ask is that I can wear flip flops, some cargo shorts, and a t-shirt to school without being uncomfortable. It's a shame Mother Nature doesn't read the Cohasset Mariner otherwise I would totally call her out.

Tuesday was the beginning of MCAS. Oh, MCAS…I remember when I was young and had to take those. In all seriousness, I kind of miss the MCAS. It was so easy and it got you out of lectures and irritating class discussions that you didn't understand. I remember finishing my sections pretty early and just doodling in the test booklet. My favorite picture I drew was that of a tiny fish biting a big fish and the big fish looking back at the little fish all confused. Wait a minute…this is so irrelevant. Umm…so yeah, the sophomores started their MCAS testing on Tuesday. Some were angry and some were happy to doodle like me.

Wednesday was another day of standardized testing. But I already went on one of my unfocused rants about that. So instead I will tell you about Wednesday's Student Council meeting. At the meeting, the next Red Cross Blood Drive was organized. The student council run blood drive will take play on April 16. Save the date so you can save a life. I think I just came up with that all by myself. I should copyright that and sell it to the Red Cross because that is a pretty sick quote. I am genuinely proud of myself for creating that in my head. I am also impressed by my ridiculously unrelated rants this article.

Thursday saw the announcement of the running of the GBRSAC candidates (very different from the running of the bulls). I take it at this point in time you are trying to figure out what GBRSAC means. Well it's an acronym like LOL (laugh out loud), TTYL (talk to you later), and WT…nevermind…so yeah GBRSAC stands for Greater Boston Regional Student Advisory Councils. GBRSAC is also pronounced like "gibbersack" and was voted one of the top 3 worst acronyms of 2008. Anywho, 2 people are elected to go to this council of students to discuss what goes on here at CHS and what goes on elsewhere. You get to miss a bunch of days of school so there is a bunch of incentive to run…helping your school is a good incentive as well…sorta…

Friday all of the Seniors got their baby pictures and Senior pictures back from the yearbook committee. With that being said, I would like to state just a few things. 1.) I was a cute baby. 2.) Parents took a lot of weird pictures of their kids back in the day. 3.) Thank you to the yearbook committee. The yearbook peeps are all volunteers and they have to deal and work with a lot of people that are not so keen to deadlines. However, they persevere, and are putting together a great yearbook. I can't wait.

I'd love to tell you that I have more to talk about, but I don't. I guess you are just gonna have to wait until next week. Hope you enjoyed this.

Workshop to explore services available to children

The public is welcome to a presentation titled "Finding Mental Health Services for Your Children: New Services, New State Laws and New Pathways to Services," from 7 to 9 p.m., on Tuesday, April 6, at Paul Pratt Library. This panel discussion is presented by SSEC/Pathways, a statewide initiative to promote and improve the mental health of children through collaborations between public schools, state agencies and community providers.

Presenters will discuss what services are now available for children in Massachusetts as the result of recent litigation and newly enacted laws. Presenters will discuss how to access these services through both private and public health insurance programs. The presenters represent the three major community-based mental health centers on the South Shore, as well as the child crisis team and Pathways. Questions will be answered, and a discussion between providers and parents will be featured.

All workshops and presentations are free and sponsored by the PSO/Cohasset PAC.

Music teacher has left his mark

THE ARTS

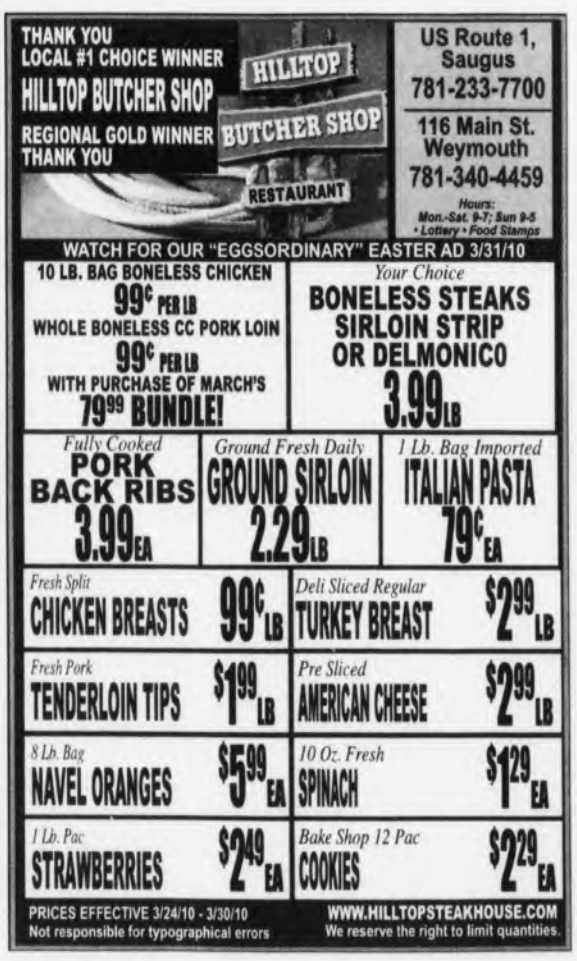
KATHRYN HILLMAN

Bryan Marks, a music teacher and choral director in the Cohasset Middle-High School, has been teaching music in the Cohasset Public Schools for 33 years. He grew up in Kingston, attending Silver Lake Regional and later Eastern Nazarene College. He graduated with a Bachelor's Degree in Music Education with a concentration in voice. He has taught music ever since, starting by giving private guitar lessons in 1971, which he continued to do for 25 years. He began teaching at Cohasset High School in 1977.

Upon Mr. Marks' arrival at Cohasset High School, he immediately began working to expand the program. He started a guitar class, available in school. Working with John Durant, a former student, Mr. Marks also began an electronic music class, which was a real innovation in high school music. Over the years, his music curriculum created a mix of basic music principles and student interests, getting many students involved.

Mr. Marks has also pioneered new programs for the choral department, combining his own unique ideas with school traditions and working tirelessly to expand the program as a whole. When he first started teaching, the High School chorus was comprised of about 18 students. Within the first three or four years, the chorus grew to more than 35 students. It has continued to grow – at present, the chorus has nearly 140 students per year (about 60-70 students per semester). The middle school chorus has also flourished under Mr. Marks' direction. The chorus was large when he started teaching, but comprised almost entirely of girls. He took steps to make the chorus more interesting for boys, including starting an after school program for middle school and high school boys interested in chorus which encouraged boys to join. By the early '90s, the number of male and female participates was almost completely equal. Under Mr. Marks' direction, the chorus has won many awards and delighted town audiences.

In addition to the chorus program, Mr. Marks started an American Musical Theater class, which is offered every other year. The program includes scene study, work on dialogues and sometimes student-written benefit performances at the end of the year. Mr. Marks said he keeps the choral programs very focused and very good by focusing the energies of the chorus on a few performances per year and investing a lot of time and effort into them.



In addition to being director of the chorus, Mr. Marks also directs musicals performed at Cohasset High School. Before he began teaching, it was traditional for the senior class alone to organize and perform a school musical. A panel of about four seniors would do everything from buying the rights to the show to hiring a director. While this was considered a good experience for the senior class, it did not involve the rest of the school and was very time consuming for the students. Mr. Marks worked with the seniors to reinvent the program, opening it up to anyone in the high school who wished to participate. He also began to direct the musicals himself. Rather than having an all-seniors musical, the seniors began to put on a Senior Variety Show, showcasing their talents in an unscripted, open setting. Mr. Marks co-directed with Helen Ketchum on the musicals for a number of years. Now, the Music Department runs the musicals. One of his favorite musicals to direct was "The Pirates of Penzance," which the school performed in 1985. Working with Mrs. Woods, the show was an enormous success, and opened the door to doing more challenging plays in the future. The most recent musical performed at Cohasset High School was an excellent version of "West Side Story" last year, which was very well received by audiences.

Music is not just a part of Mr. Mark's professional life, it has seeped into all aspects of what he does and his tastes are incredibly diverse. He enjoys listening to soft rock and smooth jazz in particular, though his tastes are quite eclectic, ranging to include classic rock, island sounds, and anything vocal. Mr. Marks plays a number of instruments: primarily the guitar and also a little trombone and piano. He enjoys playing country and folk on the guitar – he used to do coffeehouse style music and states that Pete Seger was a major influence on his music. When it comes to teaching, Mr. Marks enjoys teaching his students a cappella music, particularly Renaissance-style music. He enjoys their complexity and depth of human voice. In addition to this, Mr. Marks enjoys studying and observing music as it relates to history and current events. Music, particularly in recent history, has been a major part of movements and a rallying point for activists. To put it in his words, "Is it the movement or is it the music which pulls together the movement?"

Mr. Marks has had a tremendous impact on the music department at Cohasset Middle High School. So, what are his plans for the future? Sadly, Bryan Marks plans to retire two years from now. He will have taught for 35 years. He is now looking at the broader picture, firming up the program and hoping to leave it in a good place. He is pleased with the changes he has made and hopes that they will endure. He had this to say: "I am very, very, thankful and felt very fortunate that I have been in a town for my entire teaching career. I would not change anything; I felt very content." He spoke about how grateful he was that, even with economic difficulties, the town did not cut back the fine arts department, which has occurred in many other schools. Mr. Marks has had an enormous impact on the Cohasset Middle High School choral program for many years and the community has deeply appreciated his work.

Learn to build the Swampscott Dory

The Swampscott Dory Project is a community boat-building program geared for students of all ages who are interested in learning the fine craft of traditional wooden boat building.

Cohasset Maritime Institute (CMI) welcomes home Cohasset native Richard Wilmore, a master teacher and builder from Northwest School of Wooden Boat Building.

Richard Wilmore, a graduate of Cohasset High School, has been a shipwright most of his working life. He returns to Cohasset after years of experience in commercial boatyards repairing and building wooden fish boats, tugs and other craft. He is uniquely suited to revive wooden boat building in the historic Hagerty boathouse. As a highly valued teacher at the NorthWest School of Wooden Boat Building known for his depth of knowledge, easy-going style and patience, he is poised to lead a rebirth of interest in traditional maritime arts and skills.

The legendary John Gardner describes the Swampscott Dories as "the aristocrats of the dory clan not to be confused with their clumsier, more crudely built cousins, the working dories of the Grand Banks fishermen. True, in some features of their construction Swampscott and Grand Banks dories are similar, but in performance there is a vast difference." Adds instructor Wilmore, "it's a great first boat for students to learn to build. It has all the elements of traditionally planked boats, and it presents the beauties and challenges inherent in building rounded bottom boats. Plus, they're a lot of fun to row."

The Swampscott Dory Project is a community boat-building program geared for students of all ages who are interested in learning the fine craft of traditional wooden boat building. Ten workshop modules are broken up into three-hour segments spread out over five days from Wednesday to Sunday to accommodate flexible working and weekend schedules. Students may sign up for as little as one three-hour session or for all 10 modules- 50 days of instruction. Sign up for the entire program and save $1,045.

Cohasset residents talk about their experiences in Guatemala

On Tuesday, April 6, at 11:30 a.m., a local group will share their experiences working in Guatemala. The presentation will take place at the Hingham Public Library and is sponsored by the Osher Life-Long Learning Institute (OLLI) at UMass Boston.

In October 2009, eight members of First Parish Unitarian Universalist Church in Cohasset went on an 11-day work trip coordinated by the non-denominational charity Common Hope, based in Antigua, Guatemala. Team members and presenters are Kay Mixon, Jack and Carol Martin, Steve and Margie Brown, Bev Burgess, Dee Lehner and Pat Baird.

There are three parts to this presentation.

First, attendees will learn about the country of Guatemala and Antigua, the ancient Spanish capital of Central America. Antigua is considered by many to be the most outstanding and best-preserved colonial city in Spanish America. It has been recognized as a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Second, attendees will learn about Project Common Hope, a very unusual and effective non-denominational charity that has been working in Guatemala for more than 20 years. The heart of Common Hope's work in Guatemala is education. They provide the necessary resources for over 2,700 children to attend school each year in seventeen villages outside of Antigua and Guatemala City. Common Hope also works to improve local health care and housing.

Finally, the eight presenters will share some of their unique and special experiences. Individuals contributed according to their talents and interests. Among other things, they built an addition to a house, visited families and children in their homes, went with social workers on visits, taught teenagers the fine points of manicures, gave a primary school lesson on "Brown Bear, Brown Bear," presented instructional classes on digital photography and on the Wiki internet tool, hiked into the fields to learn about coffee production and even shared expertise in yoga with a Guatemalan women's exercise group.

The presentation is free, but prospective attendees are asked to register by calling OLLI at 617-287-7090. Light refreshments will be served.

RECREATION NOTES

Babysitting Class on Saturday

The course will cover information on child development, playing with younger children, basic first aid, fire safety and prevention, and the overall responsibilities of babysitting.

Cohasset Recreation Center is at 41 Highland Ave. For more information or to sign up for activities, stop by the office, or visit www.cohassetrec.com or call 781-383-4109.

Rec. Center dances and events

Sixth, seventh and eighth grades dances – Friday, April 9, 7 to 10 p.m. at Cohasset Rec. Center. Fee is $6. Register online at www.cohassetrec.com up to one hour before each dance.

Club 45 – Parties for children in grades four and five. Register online up to one hour before each party. Popcorn, pizza, and beverage will be included. Activities will include billiards, ping pong, music, Nintendo Wii, air hockey, and other fun activities. Friday, March 26, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Cohasset Rec. Center. Fee is $8.

Babysitter's Training Course – This one-day, three-hour, held on March 27, from 9 a.m. to noon. The course is designed to assist fifth through eighth graders to be better babysitters and to learn the do's and don'ts of being home alone. Instructed by Kimberly Cleary, nurse and mom. The course will cover information on child development, playing with younger children, basic first aid, fire safety and prevention, and the overall responsibilities of babysitting. Each class is limited to 18 pre-registered students. Fee is $20 per student.

Rocket Camp – Wednesday, March 31, at Cohasset Town Hall 1:30 to 4:30 p.m Students in grades K-5 will learn about rockets, how they work and how they fly. They will build and launch their own rockets. $25.

CPR & AED Two-Year Certification – American Heart Association CPR course held on the evening of Wednesday, March 31, from 6 to 10 p.m. instructed by members of the Cohasset Fire Department; CPR instruction includes adult, child and infant CPR. The more you practice CPR, the more automatic the skill will become – that way, if you are faced with an emergency, you will feel confident and know what to do. Sudden Cardiac Arrest claims too many lives each year. We are asking everyone to get trained in CPR. The course will be held at Cohasset Town Hall, the fee is $48.

Cross Country Running Club – Meet on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 4 to 5 p.m. beginning April 6 and continuing through May 20, for an hour of running related stations. We will train runners for 1 mile competitive meets against local running groups. The program is for boys and girls grades three through five - all levels of interested runners are welcome. Parent volunteers welcome, contact Kelly Grech if you would like to help out 781-383-0349. The fee is $60 per runner. Program meets at Milliken Field.

Suddenly in Command – This four-hour United States Coast Guard Auxiliary boating safety primer is designed for those not generally at the helm, and will help you to "be prepared" with the basics in case of an emergency. You will learn about your vessel, including nomenclature and operating principles including starting the engine. Also included are descriptions of what causes boating mishaps and how to minimize them, basic boat handling and what equipment should be on board. April 10, Saturday 9 a.m. 1 p.m.$35. Cohasset Town Hall.

Introduction to Geocaching – This course, held the evening of Saturday, April 17, from 4 to 5 p.m. is focused on the up-and-coming activity of Geo Caching, a modern day treasure hunting experience. You will learn how to get coordinates for a geo trip and learn the skills necessary to use a GPS system. Later on use the GPS to find a treasure of your own. This course is designed to be enjoyed by individuals, couples and families. This course, which meets at Cohasset Town Hall, is open to all ages and families. The fee is $40 per child, and $75 per adult.

Rock Climbing – Students ages 8 and up have fun while learning techniques and how to use the equipment necessary to climb with confidence by professional guides. Top-roping allows for a safe climbing experience that builds confidence. This program meets from 9 a.m. to noon, Monday, April 19 to Wednesday, April 21 during April vacation week at Quarry Hills in Quincy. The fee is $95 per climber.

Nantucket Daffodil Festival – The Cohasset Recreation Department will be taking a group of travelers on a trip to Nantucket for the day on Saturday, April 24. Bus departs Cohasset Town Hall at 6 a.m. for a day of fun on the island. The fee is $119, which includes a guided tour, or $99 without the tour. Includes round trip motor coach transportation to Hyannis, round trip Fast Ferry to Nantucket and Guide and tour. You will have time to shop and have lunch on your own.

New York City in The Springtime – For a fee of $49 per person, transportation will be provided directly from Cohasset Town Hall to and from Rockefeller Center. Bus departs at 6 a.m. sharp on the morning of Saturday, May 22. Travelers under the age of 18 must be accompanied by an adult. You may plan your own itinerary to include activities such as museums, sightseeing at Times Square and beyond, dining at any of the numerous eateries in the city and so much more. Fran Coffey Fun Walk scheduled for April 11

The Fran Coffey Fun Walk is in memory of longtime Cohasset Road Race by the Sea supporter Franny Coffey.

Cohasset Rotary Club's sixth annual Fran Coffey Fun Walk will take place Sunday, April 11. This family event begins at 10 a.m. at Sandy Beach in Cohasset, and it precedes the Road Race by the Sea in the afternoon. Participants have their choice of walking either 4.5 or 6.2 miles (10K).

Pre-registration by mail is $15. Save time and register online at www.roadracebythesea.com for $17. Registration for walkers older than 65 and younger than 14 is $10. Family walkers, up to five members, is $50. Check-in will be at the South Shore Community Center, 3 North Main St., Cohasset, on Saturday, April 10, 9 a.m. to noon, and Sunday, April 11, at Sandy Beach after 9:30 a.m. The first 200 walkers will receive a 100 percent cotton T-shirt. A complimentary map of historical landmarks along the coastline walk route will be available.

The Fran Coffey Fun Walk is in memory of longtime Cohasset Road Race by the Sea supporter Franny Coffey. Walk proceeds will go to two organizations close to the heart of the Coffey family, People in Need at St. Patrick's Church in Roxbury and Wellspring in Hull.

For more information, call 617-212-8824 or visit www.roadracebythesea.com.

Annual Good Friday Walk set for April 2

The Good Friday Walk to benefit Sharing, Inc., is April 2. Walkers may begin anytime from 7 to 9 a.m. from Plymouth River School, 200 High St., Hingham, off Route 228. The route winds for 20 miles from the school, through areas of Hingham and for several miles in Wampatuk State Park. All walkers are requested to obtain a minimum of $20 in pledges on their sponsor sheets. Walkers younger than age 18 are also required to have their sponsor sheets signed by a parent of guardian.

Anyone wishing to participate in this year's walk may obtain sponsor sheets by contacting Doherty at Sharing, Inc., P.O. Box 850153, Braintree, MA 02185-0153 or by calling 781-843-1676. Hingham residents may also call Donna Austin at 781-749-8778. Those interested in learning more about Sharing Inc, an Internet visit to www.WalkingOnGoodFriday.org gives an in-depth look at the Good Friday Walk from its roots to present day.

Sharing Inc. remains focused on rural poverty. The dues paid by Sharing's members support the administrative costs of this work so that Sharing is able to give away more than 94 percent of the money raised on Good Friday. The majority of grants in recent years have been focused on the needs of children by supporting groups who are making a difference in the children's lives. A scholarship fund has also been established for students from these rural areas.

Organic farming and gardening course

The South Shore Community Center will offer a new and exciting course this coming spring – Organic Farming and Gardening at Holly Hill Farm with John Belber. This is an opportunity for adults and families who wish to learn about working in a garden, while at the same time — help others in their community. This program will feature hands-on opportunities for participants to grow seeds, start seedlings, discuss soil and compost, prepare growing beds, transplant and discuss garden plans. Each participant will be able to take plants and plans home or be part of a community garden where some of the produce will go to a local food pantry. The session will end with a "salad party" in May.

There will also be many opportunities to see the rest of Holly Hill Farm in action as they prepare the fields and greenhouse with plants.

There will also be many opportunities to see the rest of Holly Hill Farm in action as they prepare the fields and greenhouse with plants. This six-week course will take place at Holly Hill Farm beginning on Sunday, April 25 from 2 to 3:30 p.m. The cost is $150 per person with children ages 4 to 12 free when accompanying an adult participant. There is also a $20 materials fee payable to Holly Hill at the first class, which will cover seeds, pots and soil for the complete session. Call 781-383-0088 to register or stop by the Center at 3 North Main Street. Class size is limited.

Writers workshop to meet March 30

Grub Street South at Buttonwood, a workshop for writers, will meet at 7 p.m., on Tuesday, March 30, at Buttonwood Books & Toys, Shaw's Plaza, Route 3A, Cohasset. Instructor will be Nichole Bernier, whose topic will be Novel Revision. Bernier lives outside Boston and is revising her first novel.

Novel revision can be overwhelming. How can people synthesize input from a variety of sources and keep track of the edits? The class will provide an overview of how to take it in steps, beginning with deeper concerns of theme, structure, character and chronology, and drilling down into to issues of dialogue, transitions and refining sentence style.

Reservations are requested and can be made by calling Buttonwood at 781-383-2665.

Ordering flags for Healing Field

The Sons of the American Legion is planning to install a Healing Field as part of the town's Memorial Day 2010 observances.

The effort should result in hundreds of American flags on eight-foot-tall poles temporarily installed on the town-owned island at the corner of Border and Summer streets. The island faces Veterans Memorial Park where the annual Memorial Day observances are held.

The flags sell for $25 and can be dedicated to anyone. In other words, the purchase of a flag is not limited to those honoring someone who is serving or has served in the Armed Forces. (Those who purchase flags will be able to pick them up after 10 days).

Checks should be made out to the Sons of the American Legion, with a note on the memo line indicating "Healing Field" and sent to Sons of the American Legion, PO Box 118, Cohasset, MA 02025. For more information, please visit www.healingfield.org/cohasset or contact the Legion post at 781-383-9657 or stop by the post at 98 Summer St. any weekday after 3 p.m., Saturdays after 10 a.m. or Sundays after 12 noon. Applications for Healing Field flags are available at the Post. All proceeds will go to veterans' projects of the Sons of the American Legion.

The Healing Field will be on display from May 22 to June 1. The dedication is scheduled for 1 p.m., Saturday, May 29.

Newcomers Club to host Seaside Spring Boutique

Scituate Cohasset Newcomers Club will host its annual Seaside Spring Boutique from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., on Saturday, May 1, at Scituate Country Club, 91 Driftway.

The public is invited to check out this shopping experience as local vendors display a range of specialty items such as jewelry and accessories, baby items, stationery, home accessories and gifts. While shopping, visit the raffle table to support the club charity, Cradles to Crayons. Admission to this event is free.

Kitchen Tour to delight the senses

There is a buzz around Cohasset this Spring, and it's not the bees! It is the excitement over this year's South Shore Community Center Kitchen Tour. Six exceptional coastal properties located on some of Cohasset's most prestigious locations will be open for viewing on Friday, April 9th from 10:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Each home on the tour is unique, and offers visitors a chance to appreciate incredibly distinctive architectural style and construction, while being inspired by the talented pool of interior decorator's and florists who have helped to make each home truly spectacular. Guests will spend the day viewing exquisitely decorated homes that owners have graciously opened, while sampling delicious light fare created by renowned local caterers and restaurants.

The crisp white cabinets of the Durkin family home at 735 Jerusalem Road are a standout.

Many of the historic properties have been meticulously renovated, preserving their classic integrity while balancing the needs of modern families. The former "Asa Potter" home, set on Strait's Pond is a stunning Victorian shingle-style masterpiece with the perfect blend of formal and relaxed living. The gorgeous kitchen features creamy white cherry cabinets, state of the art appliances, and gorgeous granite countertops. The Robin's Nest and Hingham Village Greenery will impress visitors with their beautiful table settings, arrangements and accents.

Another beautifully restored historic home located directly on Little Harbor is the former Levi Nichols house. Quality and grace abound this kitchen, which features modern appliances, cashmere silk granite countertops and crisp white cabinetry. Suzanne's of Hingham and Charles Street Antiques have collaborated to make this home stunning, while The Chef's Table tempts visitors taste buds.

Two of the new custom-built homes on the tour will remind visitors of Nantucket. One home, "Safe Harbor", was completely re-built to thoughtfully capture the amazing Cohasset Harbor views. The home is informal, yet grand. The kitchen features gorgeous custom-made hart pine cabinets, which were create out of reclaimed beams from a historic Boston building. Country House Furniture and Interiors have joined designing forces with Darilynn's to showcase their extensive array of tablewares and accessories. Bia Bistro will offer delicious culinary treats to quests.

The 2010 Kitchen Tour will be held rain or shine, and is not suitable for young children. The cost of a ticket is $25. Tickets for the event can be purchased online at www.southshorecommunitycenter.com or by visiting or calling the Center directly at 781-383-0088. Cash, check, Visa, and Mastercard are accepted. Proceeds from the event directly benefit the center's exciting operational and programming initiatives. The South Shore Community Center is a registered 501-c-3 non-profit, and is dedicated to serving Cohasset and the surrounding communities by providing a welcoming environment for social, educational and recreational pursuits.

The light-filled kitchen at 44 Beach St., the former Levi Nichols home, is on the kitchen tour.

Horoscope

SALOME'S STARS FOR RELEASE WEEK OF APRIL 5, 20105

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You might be upset about having to deal with problems that are no fault of your own. But you can turn the annoyance into an asset by showing how quickly and how well you can resolve them.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The Bovine's fondness for tidiness pays off when you untangle a situation that seems hopelessly snarled. You might later be surprised to learn who will be expressing his or her gratitude.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Although you can tackle your assignment the way you prefer, it might be a good idea to at least ask for suggestions. Who knows? One or two might even turn out to be helpful.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Make all the changes in your plans or proposals that you feel are necessary before — repeat, before — you submit them to your colleagues. You'll come off looking more decisive that way.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You might feel a mite intimidated in a new environment, be it a job, a classroom or meeting the future in-laws. But enter with a big smile, and everyone will see you as a real take-charge Cat.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This could be a romantic time for you if you can set aside your cynicism and let yourself believe that someone really cares. If you're already in a relationship, expect your partner to be extra-loving.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) It's a good time to shed any doubts about your abilities. You've proved yourself in the past, so why not accept that you'll do just as well, or better, in dealing with the new challenge ahead?

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your suspicions might be on the mark, but unless you can prove what you assume, you need to exercise that Scorpion discretion and let events unfold without your assistance.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Be careful not to go over the top this week. Avoid overeating (especially of the wrong foods), or drinking too much, or working too hard. You can do it all, but in moderation.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A family matter is given to you to resolve because you have the gift for bringing quarrelsome kinfolk together. But while you're playing Dr. Phil, don't neglect your career obligations.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Someone of importance shares your goals but disagrees with your plan to achieve them. Never mind. Defending your methods with logic and facts earns you admiration and respect.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Consider getting away, perhaps for the weekend, despite all the demands made on your time and energies. You'll return refreshed and ready to tackle it all with your usual finesse.

Fun By The Numbers

Like puzzles? Then you'll love sudoku. This mind-bending puzzle will have you hooked from the moment you square off, so sharpen your pencil and put your sudoku savvy to the test!

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Weekend of music at St. Stephen's

Mr. Fontaine brings his Haitian roots to African-American spirituals, and the resulting fusion is both wonderfully surprising and profound.

St. Stephen's Episcopal Church will host two concerts this weekend. Both concerts are free, and the public is heartily invited to attend. On Saturday the 27th from 7 to 8 pm, St. Stephen's welcomes Haitian gospel singer Pierre Gardy Fontaine. Thanks to the initiative of Cohasset resident Will Charles, this benefit concert will raise funds, supplies, and awareness for the continued recovery effort in the nation of Haiti. All donations and proceeds from the concert will go directly to "Light Path for Haiti," a US-based 501c(3) founded by physicians, nurses, and other medical personnel with deep roots in Haiti. A team of folks from Light Path for Haiti, including Mr. Charles, will be leaving for Haiti on Easter morning.

Mr. Fontaine brings his Haitian roots to African-American spirituals, and the resulting fusion is both wonderfully surprising and profound. He sings with a clarity of voice and a depth of emotion that rank him in an elite group of singers, gospel or otherwise.

On Sunday the 28th at 3 pm, St. Stephen's organist John Whiteside presents a program featuring organ works by Charles-Marie Widor, J. S. Bach and Cesar Franck. March 28th is Palm Sunday, and the music selected will reflect the liturgical themes of the day as well as show off the organ's expressive capability. The first half of the concert will, for the most part, feature music on the quieter side. The second half of the program starts with a prelude and fugue by J. S. Bach. The Prelude and Fugue in G Minor is a substantial work that shows Bach at his contrapuntal best and shows the power of the organ in subtle ways.

A reception will follow the program so that concertgoers can meet the artist.

At home on Broadway

Easton native steps into spotlight

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

After two decades of national tours, performer Jodi Capeless had spent the last few years as a stay-at-home mom to her two young children in Teaneck, N.J. When it came time to resume her career, the Easton native knew she didn't want to go back on the road. So instead of another out-of-town run, Capeless booked the gig of a lifetime and is making her Broadway debut alongside Dame Edna Everage and Michael Feinstein in "All About Me," which opened last week in New York.

"My partner, Kimberly Galberaith, and I had waited a long time to have children so I knew I didn't want to be away from them. My daughter, Grace, is just 6 years old, and my son, Jack, is only 4, so my agent understood that while I wanted to work again I also wanted to be able to live at home," explained Capeless in her Henry Miller's Theatre dressing room following a recent preview matinee.

Jodi Capeless

These days, not only is Capeless sleeping in her own bed, but she is also sharing a stage with Feinstein, the five-time Grammy Award-nominated singer known for his devotion to the American songbook, and Everage, the lavender-coiffed Australian housewife turned Tony Award-winning gigastar played to perfection by Barry Humphries, in "All About Me."

Directed by Casey Nicholaw ("The Drowsy Chaperone") with a book by Feinstein, Humphries, and Christopher Durang, and based on a concept by Feinstein, Humphries, Lizzie Spender and Terrence Flannery, the musical comedy has Capeless playing a very capable stage manager drawn into Everage and Feinstein's ego-fueled, tongue-in-cheek battle for stage supremacy. It may sound like a tough spot, but it is one Capeless is very happy to be in. Along the way, the 1984 graduate of Easton's Oliver Ames High School who earned a BFA in Musical Theater from Emerson College in 1988 even gets her solo moment on stage, singing "And The World Goes 'Round" from the 1977 feature film "New York, New York."

"Appearing on Broadway has been my dream since I was a kid. I've done regional theater, national tours, and even a little television, but Broadway had eluded me until now," says Capeless, who, early in her career, was a frequent performer with Young Peoples' Summer Theatre, the Scituate company founded by Peter Tolin, co-creator of FX-TV's "Rescue Me," and also the former That New Theatre in Norwell, which was run by Donna Milani Luther, head of Scituate's Inly School.

"Getting cast in this show now was just incredible. I've been pounding the pavement for 20 years looking for acting jobs and going on auditions, so while the process was familiar I still feel awestruck to finally be here. I said to someone just the other day that I still can't believe what I get to do in this show. I get to listen to Michael Feinstein sing, and laugh at Dame Edna, and I also get to do a full-belt Kander and Ebb song in comfortable shoes."

Capeless knows something about sensible shoes, having played both Reverend Mother and Sister Hubert in various companies of "Nunsense," including a sit-down of the show that played the now-defunct "Theatre Lobby" in Boston's North End in the early 1990s. Capeless also toured in "Les Miserables" and starred in the off-Broadway production of "Late Nite Catechism." Although she moved to the New York area 16 years ago, Capeless still has many family and friends in southeastern Massachusetts including her brother, Paul Capeless, his wife, Ann, and their children in Centreville, an aunt, Joan Buttiglieri, in Randolph, and another, Monica Sullivan, in South Boston. One of the first local friends to see Capeless on Broadway is a former co-star who made the trip from Cohasset to Manhattan.

"Sarah DeLima and her daughter Caroline came to see the show just the other day. Sarah and I did 'The Mystery of Edwin Drood' together many years ago at Hingham Civic Music Theatre. Sarah is a good, good friend of mine and it was wonderful to see her again."

Capeless isn't the only "All About Me" cast member receiving backstage visitors.

"Just a few days ago, I literally bumped into Liza Minnelli backstage. That's never happened to me before. I almost had to pinch myself and ask, 'Is this really happening?'"

"All About Me" will be at Henry Miller's Theatre, 124 West 43rd Street, in New York, through July 18. For tickets and information, call 212-239-6200 or go online at broadwaysbestshows.com.

Tomlin's act has familiar ring

Memorable 'Laugh-In' character Ernestine part of stage show

By R. Scott Reedy
CORRESPONDENT

With six Emmys, two Tonys, and a Grammy, not to mention an Academy Award nomination, to her credit, Lily Tomlin gets plenty of job offers. The legendary comedienne – who comes to Boston's Wilbur Theatre for two shows this Saturday night – doesn't mind admitting, however, that when she likes a particular project she's not afraid to let the right people know. Her current role as Marilyn Tobin, the secretive widow of a Bernie Madoff-esque character, on the hit FX drama "Damages" is one of those times.

"I think I got this part on 'Damages' because I was such a fanatical fan. I've watched the show since day one. So when I ran into one of the creators, either Todd Kessler or his brother Glenn, at a party, I let him know just how much I loved the show. I'm not sure which one it was, but I think now it was probably Todd. Either way, they knew that I was enthused and when this role came up they thought of me," explained Tomlin by telephone on Sunday from New York, where she is shooting an episode of the hit series. "It was the same thing with 'The West Wing.' I came on as the president's assistant when Kathryn Joosten's character was killed off, and I stayed for four seasons, through the end of the show. It was Kathryn, whom I've known since 'Murphy Brown,' who called me when Marc Cherry decided he want to give her character a sister on 'Desperate Housewives.'"

"When the writing and acting are as good as they are on these shows, then I want to be a part of it. I went after Chris Carter about using me on 'The X-Files,' too, but he resisted at first, saying he didn't like to use celebrities because he thought familiar faces were distracting. Finally, in the third or fourth season, he wrote a terrific episode for Ed Asner and me."

While the Detroit-born Tomlin's directness has brought her considerable success, she still remembers one time early in her career when it didn't go so well.

"I even tried to get on 'The Lawrence Welk Show' as Bobbi Jeanine, the cocktail lounge organist, but I couldn't make that happen. It was too bad, too, because I thought Bobbi Jeanine would have done beautifully on that show."

Tomlin has done pretty well, too, since becoming a regular on NBC-TVs highly rated "Laugh-In" in 1969, where her characters, such as Ernestine, the unflappable telephone operator, and Edith Ann, a bratty five year old, helped make her a household name. When "Laugh-In" went off the air in 1973, Tomlin went on to co-write, with partner Jane Wagner, and star in six television specials and win three Emmy Awards. Tomlin made her feature film debut in 1975 in Robert Altman's "Nashville," earning an Oscar nomination for her portrayal of Linnea, a gospel singer with two deaf children. Tomlin's other feature film credits include "The Late Show" (1977), "9 to 5" (1980), "The Incredible Shrinking Woman" (1981), "All of Me" (1984), "Short Cuts" (1993), and 2006's "A Prairie Home Companion," in which she and Meryl Streep play a sister singing act.

Lily Tomlin performs at the Wilbur Theatre for two shows March 27.

While she has earned great acclaim for her film and television work, Tomlin never strays too far from the stage. She won her first Tony Award for her 1977 Broadway debut in "Appearing Nitely," which was written and directed by Wagner. In 1985, Wagner's critically acclaimed play "The Search for Signs of Intelligent Life in the Universe" brought Tomlin back to Broadway and won her a second Tony Award.

Tomlin's long relationship with Boston began with a 1971 appearance at the old "Paul's Mall" in Copley Square and continued with national tour stops for her one-woman shows at the Wilbur and Shubert Theatres.

"Boston is a place where I'm very comfortable and the Wilbur is great so I'm very glad to be coming back. I love working on stage, because I have more control. It allows me to make much more of an expression of my sensibilities."

It also allows Tomlin to bring audiences up to date with Ernestine, who has left the telephone company.

"Ernestine couldn't stay with the telephone company after deregulation. She hates competition of any kind. She just wants to be in control. These days, she's working for a health insurance company, where she can deny health care to everyone."

What Tomlin can't deny is Ernestine's enduring popularity?

"I used to say that Ernestine was like Bette Davis, because so many people impersonated her. I still feel like Ernestine probably really does exist somewhere and I am just one of the people who imitates her."

Lily Tomlin will be at the Wilbur Theatre, 246 Tremont St., Boston, for two shows on March 27. For tickets and information, visit the box office, call 1-800-745-3000 or go online at thewilbur.com

The instructor is Nichole Bernier and her topic is Novel Revision. Novel revision can be overwhelming. How can you synthesize input from a variety of sources, and how do you keep track of the edits? The class will provide an overview of how to take it in steps, beginning with deeper concerns of theme, structure, character and chronology, and drilling down into to issues of dialogue, transitions, and refining sentence style. Nichole Bernier lives outside Boston and is revising her first novel. Reservations are requested and can be made by calling Buttonwood. 781-749-0284 www.buttonwoodbooks.com

Plymouth Phil concert features dramatic music with over 300 performers

'Drama,' 'excitement' and 'inspiration' are the hallmarks of the upcoming concert of the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra's 94th season. Steven Karidoyanes conducts "Inspiring Lessons," a program featuring a large assembly of performers in one of the truly great English-language scores for chorus and orchestra, Vaughan Williams' Dona Nobis Pacem ("Grant Us Peace"). Two acclaimed vocal artists with close ties to the South Shore, soprano Meredith Hansen and baritone Andrew Garland, along with the 240-voice High School Choral Consortium join the Phil for this singular sonic experience. The program also includes Brahms' tune-filled tribute to academia, his Academic Festival Overture, and American composer Cindy McTee's soulful Adagio. This much-anticipated event is being held in Plymouth's Memorial Hall on Saturday evening, March 27. The concert begins at 8 p.m. A pre-concert talk by Conductor Karidoyanes begins at 7 p.m. Tickets are now on sale. Memorial Hall is fully accessible.

William B. Richter, conductor of the Pilgrim Festival Chorus, is the High School Choral Consortium chorusmaster. Five area public high school choral programs make up this unique combined chorus. They are the Duxbury High School Chamber Singers, James Donovan, director; the Pembroke High School Honors Chamber Singers, Gwynne Cushing Sousa, director; the Plymouth High Schools' Vocal Point, Jonathan Richter, director; the Scituate High School Select Choir, William B. Richter, director; and the Silver Lake Regional High School Select Choir, Kelley DePasqua, director.

Cohasset native Meredith Hansen is a soprano whose star is on the rise. Notable upcoming engagements include her appearance with James Levine and the Boston Symphony in Mendelssohn's Elijah in April, as well as featured operatic roles next season in Fidelio with Opera Boston and Don Giovanni with Commonwealth Opera. Baritone Andrew Garland is acknowledged as an accomplished opera, concert and recital singer. He has performed in Europe, Asia and across the Americas including the opera companies of Seattle, San Francisco, Philadelphia, Cincinnati, Ft. Worth, Utah, and the Boston Lyric Opera as well as the Ravinia Festival, Atlanta Symphony, National Philharmonic, Dayton Philharmonic, Delaware Symphony, Tucson Symphony, Virginia Symphony Orchestra, and the Washington Master Chorale at the Kennedy Center. Mr. Garland is on the faculty of the South Shore Conservatory.

Individual ticket prices are $50, $45, $35 and $20. Senior, Youth and Group discounts are offered. $5 student "rush" tickets sold at the door one hour before performance, as available. Advance tickets can be purchased on-line by visiting plymouthphil.org or calling the Phil office at 508-746-8008. Memorial Hall is located on 83 Court Street/Route 3A, Plymouth. For more information about the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra's 94th Season, visit www.plymouthphil.org

ROOF RESCUE

Cohasset firefighter/ paramedic Jonathan Hickey works his safety line around the Nissan pickup truck that went into the water by Jerusalem Road and Bow Street on Tuesday afternoon. Police said the driver went around traffic cones and continued to drive down the flooded Jerusalem Road; he couldn't distinguish the edge of the road from the basin and his truck slipped into the water and got caught in the current. Voters in a 'yes' frame of mind

300 turn out for three-hour Town Meeting

Lucia Woods, who regularly attends Town Meeting, goes over the Warrant on Saturday. Town Meeting tackled 23 articles in about three hours.

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

A swift and decisive Town Meeting tackled the 23 articles on the warrant in what may be the shortest Town Meeting in recent history.

The meeting was called to order around 9:20a.m., concluded at 12:20p.m., and in between 299 voters did not say "no" to one article.

Debates were few and far between. Community Preservation projects drew some discussion as well as the citizens petition requesting a Little Harbor sewer project debt exclusion request, but most other articles were passed (or indefinitely postponed) with little input from the voters.

The operating budget, not including the water enterprise fund budget, was approved without any discussion.

In 25 minutes, Town Meeting tackled 14 articles ranging from dog regulations to the sewer betterments interest rate to property tax exemptions.

Judging by the breakdown of voters in precinct 1 and 2, residents of Little Harbor came out in numbers to weigh in on the 50/50 cost-sharing proposal for the $13-million project. Eighty-one voters checked in

Sewer plan tested in rain

Extreme flow pipe used for first time

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Cohasset and the South Shore area have had about 15 inches of rain over the last month making it one of the rainiest months on record.

While the wastewater treatment plant was able to handle the excessive flows largely generated by stormwater that came in the storm two weeks ago, this week's storm tested the plant's capacity.

For the first time since its installation last year, the "extreme flow pipe" had to be put to work, Sewer Commission chairman John Beck said.

"We experienced the same thing all sewer treatment plants around the Commonwealth experienced – a lot more water coming into the plant," Beck said. "This was significantly more rain than we had two weeks ago."

In the storm earlier in March the plant was able to successfully process about 950,000 gallons of wastewater in one day. In this storm, on Tuesday, Beck said about 1.07 million gallons of water went through the plant.

In comparison, on a normal day the effluent entering the plant is about

POLICE BEAT

Emergency notification phone calls

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

The town's emergency notification system is dubbed, Connect-CTY, through which police, fire and some other town departments can alert residents to a situation involving the safety or welfare of the community.

Police used the system last week during the manhunt for a man who allegedly broke into his grandparents' house in Cohasset. Other examples would include severe weather warnings and updates, hazardous traffic or road conditions inside the town or affecting local routes.

If a number is unlisted or a resident wants to sign up using his or her cell phone number, then residents can make those adjustments by visiting the town's website. There is also a list of questions and answers about the service.

The message on the town website states: "Connect-CTY service allows authorized civic leaders to create and rapidly disseminate time-sensitive messages to every telephone number stored in the notification database...Only authorized officials are allowed access to the system."

For more information visit the town's website at: www.townofcohasset.org or call 781-383-0666.

Dog attacked

A 53-year-old Black Horse Lane resident reported to police last Monday (March 22) that when she was out walking her dog, another dog attacked her dog, police said. The Animal Control Officer is following up with the resident.

Power-washer

Scituate police, who had arrested a Cohasset man last week who had a power washer in his car, asked Cohasset police to make sure the machine was not stolen and belonged to his mother as the suspect has said.

Cohasset police confirmed the power washer was his mother's and she did not report it stolen.

Citation

A caller reported being tailgated and that the 2009 Nissan Pathfinder was attempting to pass her on the right at about 12:43 p.m. on Monday (March 22) on Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A). She provided the plate and police stopped the Pathfinder in the vicinity of 3A and lower King Street. Based on the woman's testimony, police issued a citation to the operator, a 45-year-old Weymouth man, for passing in a non-passing zone.

Scam calls

An Elm Court resident reported to police last week that she had received two suspicious calls asking her to send money in order to receive prize money. The calls appear to be a scam, police said.

Laptop taken

A 44-year-old Marshfield man, who had attended the Alcoholic Anonymous meeting at the Second Congregational Church last Monday (March 22), reported to police that his laptop and laptop accessories were taken from the backseat of the his 2008 Nissan Altima while he was at the meeting. It is unclear if the car was locked at the time of the theft, police said.

Attempted break-into

An 83-year-old James Lane resident asked to speak police last Wednesday (March 24) about a possible attempted break-in to her house. Police found evidence that someone had tried to break in through a bathroom window. Detectives are investigating.

Missing watch

A 43-year-old Linden Drive resident reported to police last Wednesday that her $5,000 ladies Rolex, oyster gold and silver, watch is missing. She explained that she had been away on business for a week and when she came home it was gone. There were no signs of forced entry and the incident is under investigation.

Expired license

A 51-year-old Hull man is being summonsed to court following a traffic stop at about 6 p.m. on Wednesday (March 24) at Chief Justice Cushing Highway near Mendel Road. Police said an officer was monitoring traffic when the 1999 Ford Escort, the man was driving passed by, and the officer noticed it had a rejection sticker with a red "R." The red "R" means the inspection failed due to safety reasons and that the car cannot be driven.

The officer stopped the car and a registry check revealed the operator's license had expired on his birthday in October. The Hull man is being charged with unlicensed operation and having a failed inspection sticker.

Pocketbook

A 43-year-old Saugus woman reported to police at about 7:36 p.m. on Thursday (March 25) that she had lost her pocketbook after leaving the Red Lion Inn. She recalled paying for her meal with an American Express card and then when she got to her car, she lost sight of her pocketbook while putting her baby in the car. Police said she likely left it on the ground or put it on top of the car and drove off. However, the story has a happy ending. Police said the Saugus woman called back later to report that her mother found the pocketbook and returned it to her.

Dispute

A woman is being summonsed to court for trespassing and malicious destruction of property valued under $250 for removing stakes and breaking a stake during a neighborhood property line dispute last week, police said.

Police said the dispute is an ongoing issue and the woman was served with a no-trespassing order several months ago. The neighbor had his property surveyed and was installing stakes that the woman continued to pull out, breaking one, police said.

Unlicensed

A 21-year-old Natick woman, operating a 1994 Toyota Corolla, was stopped for going 46 in a 30 mph zone on Beach Street at about 10:40 a.m. last Saturday, police said. A computer check of the plates revealed the registration had been revoked for insurance reasons. The woman, who spoke little English, had no license and presented police with a Brazilian passport indicating she had entered the country a year ago. Her car was towed and she is being summonsed to court for speeding, operating after suspension of registration, operating an uninsured motor vehicle, and being unlicensed.

Illegal dumping

A shop in Shaw's Plaza reported to police last Saturday that someone was putting trash in their dumpster and should not be. Police found paperwork in the trash belonging to a Norwell resident, who will be warned that it is illegal to put household trash in someone's dumpster, police said. If the practice continues, the individual could face a criminal charge.

Driver tried to go through washed-out road

Red truck pulled out of Little Harbor

By Mary Ford
MFORD@CNC.COM

Fire Capt. Frank Mahoney lets out the safety line while firefighter/ paramedic Jonathan Hickey walks into the basin to tie the hook around the steering column of the Nissan pickup truck. For more photos, see page 23.

Police said a 50-year-old Marshfield man whose red, four-door 2005 Nissan Titan pickup truck got stuck in the water on Jerusalem Road near Bow Street, got out of the truck and ran up Jerusalem Road to a house where he called 9-1-1.

The call came in at about 2:30 p.m. on Tuesday.

John McSherry, 165 Prospect St., who was headed toward North Main Street, tried to drive his pickup through the flooded, washed-out part of the road, which was blocked off by cones when the mishap occurred.

The truck was lifted up on the current and pulled in an area of Little Harbor off Bow Street. McSherry quickly abandoned the truck. The current then took the vehicle about 25 yards off the road into Little Harbor on the Bow Street side and sank, police said.

McSherry was treated by paramedics at the scene and was picked up by an unidentified woman. The accident remains under investigation. McSherry could not be reached for comment.

Police called Thomas Auto Body that arrived with a flat bed and a tow truck. Cohasset firefighters swam with a chain out to the submerged truck and wrapped the chain around the steering column, police said. The tow truck then slowly pulled the pickup out of Little Harbor.

No hazardous material was spilled but the fire department was on scene with equipment in case that did occur, police said.

Police said McSherry would be issued a citation for going around a traffic-warning device.

Police Chief Mark DeLuca said traffic warnings are there for a reason and should be adhered to. He said the situation could have been tragic if there had been children strapped in the truck.

He praised the work of Cohasset public safety personnel.

"The police and fire departments did a great job as always," DeLuca said.

MV crash

Police investigated a single-car crash at about 1:05 a.m. on Sunday (March 28). Police said a 2006 Jeep Grand Cherokee operated by a 24-year-old Cohasset man hit a tree and then a stonewall near the 500 block of Beechwood Street. Police said the driver told them he lost control of the Jeep. He was transported to the hospital with non-life-threatening injuries and the Jeep was towed. He is being cited for speeding and failure to stay in marked lanes.

Intoxicated

Police could not locate the white Chevy truck a man, who was reported as appearing to be intoxicated, was driving out of Cohasset Plaza on Sunday at about 5:46 p.m. The man reportedly tried to purchase some alcohol at the liquor store and was refused service, then left and drove off, police said.

Trek bike

A resident reported finding an abandoned trek bicycle. The bike is now at the police station along with a handful of other bicycles. Anyone with a missing bike should contact the police or stop by the station.

A MANYFOLD DECREASE

Not only does a leak in the manifold severely compromise a vehicle's ability to pass an emissions test, it poses a dangerous risk of carbon monoxide poisoning for the occupants of the automobile's cabin. The exhaust manifold is bolted tightly to the engine block with a gasket on one side and the front of the exhaust pipe of the catalytic converter on the other. Because the manifold is subjected to very high temperatures, it is vulnerable to developing hairline cracks that may increase over time due to the heating/cooling cycles of the engine. The noise indicative of hairline cracks in the manifold may be very noticeable when engine is cold, then less so as the engine heats up.

Clearly, carbon monoxide poisoning is not something you want to mess around with. That's why you should call ATLANTIC TIRE AND ALIGNMENT today to make an appointment for a regular tune-up. Preventative maintenance is the best way to keep your whole car running safely. Our ASE Master-certified technicians can catch small problems, like hair-line fractures in the manifold, before they become big problems, like carbon monoxide leaking into the driver's cabin. Our number is 781-925-3200 and you can find our shop at 25 Atlantic House Road. If you've gotten in an accident, be sure to check out our sister store, Cohasset Collision Center, 179 Chief Justice Cushing Highway, Cohasset, 781-383-3001.

HINT: In later-model automobiles, lighter-weight manifolds may be more vulnerable to cracking.

TOWN ELECTION 2010

School board hopefuls debate

Four candidates participate in 'Our Town' event

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

The race for two School Committee seats between four possible candidates is reaching a fever pitch.

The Town Election is set for Saturday, April 10, just over a week away.

This week, the candidate "faced off" in a live debate organized by the local cable show, "Our Town." The hour-and-a-half debated offered the opportunity for each candidate to speak on some of the major issues and concerns that have come up on the campaign trail.

From budget to fees to the superintendent's contract, the debate, hosted by residents Mark DeGiacomo and Pat Martin, covered a lot of ground

All four candidates participated: current School Committee chair Adrienne MacCarthy, Flintlock Ridge Road resident Jeanne Astino, Beach Street resident Paul Ognibene and Linda Snowdale of Mill Lane.

Two three-year terms are available on the School Committee. This is the first time in four years there has been a balloted race for a School Committee seat and it is the only contested race in this year's election.

"The intent is to give people watching to observe the candidates and understand where they stand on issues affecting the schools," DeGiacomo said.

The live debate could be seen on channel 10 in homes with Comcast service throughout Cohasset. Those who have recently switched to Verizon cable service do not yet have access to local cable (that is coming in the early summer once the new studio is up in running).

About a dozen people sat in the audience: a mixture of interested parents and family members of the candidates.

Each candidate was given about two minutes to introduce themselves to the community before the questions began. Seven questions were asked and each candidate was given about two minutes to respond. At the conclusion of the questions, each was allowed to appeal to the voters on why they should be elected to the School Committee.

The format allowed little interaction between the candidates and each listened to the others while they spoke.

The questions ranged in topic: fees, the superintendent's contract, the teachers contract, de-leveling, legal fees, the budget, and public input.

Although the topics were varied, a single thread wove its way though nearly all the questions and candidate's positions: communication. All four candidates spoke to at some point the relationship between the public, the parents, the administration and the School Committee.

All were in agreement that something needed to be done to improve communication between all parties. Each candidate spoke to the issue most passionately at different times during the debate.

Jeanne Astino was the first to speak of communication and later called the relationship between the schools and the public "broken." In her opening statement, Astino said there were "missing links namely honesty and transparency."

"People don't get back to people when questions are asked," Astino said, adding she was concerned the communication portion of the School Committee meetings had been moved to the end of the night.

Paul Ognibene said communication needed to be improved in the area of the budget. He called for more transparency so the community understands — and supports — how the schools are spending tax dollars.

"If we restore that confidence and ensure tax dollars are well spent, I think residents would agree with having the highest paid teachers in the area," Ognibene said.

School Committee candidates (from left) Linda Snowdale, Paul Ognibene, Jeanne Astino and Adrienne MacCarthy at the live "Our Town" debate held in Town Hall on Tuesday. The issues discussed included the superintendent's contract, leveling and athletic fees.

Candidate Linda Snowdale spoke to communication during the leveling question. Her take on the issue was less about leveling and more about how it has been presented to the parents and the public at large.

"The focus should be on whether people are being heard. There is a lot of interest in delevel-ing and a lot of interesting ideas could come out if parents were allowed to give input," Snowdale said.

Adrienne MacCarthy, the incumbent candidate, acknowledged communication was "not getting out." She said she'd like to see a strengthened PSO, which formerly helped filter down School Committee information to parents.

"Frankly, before this year, nobody's come to our meetings. In six years there has been no one at our meetings. Obviously something went wrong this year…I take full responsibility and there is room for improvement, obviously," MacCarthy said.

The questions

The questions were prepared and asked by "Our Town" host Mark DeGiacomo. He received some suggestions from residents and some of those were incorporated into the questions. No questions were taken from the audience.

- The requirement that parents pay fees for athletics, parking and some bus transportation has existed for several years. While I expect that all of you would like to eliminate these fees, is it realistic to think that these fees can be reduced or eliminated in the near future? If not, will they need to be increased? Do you feel that fees for non-sport related activities should also be imposed?
- One of the most important duties performed by the School Committee is the hiring and supervision of the Superintendent of Schools. Denise Walsh has served as Superintendent for six years but she has recently become somewhat of a lightening rod for criticism of both her and the School Committee. Is it time to consider hiring a new Superintendent?
- A very substantial portion of the School District's annual budget is dedicated to teachers' salaries. A new teachers' contract is negotiated by the School Committee and the Teachers' Union every three years, which means that if you are elected you will be part of that process. What special attributes to you bring to the negotiating table that will help to ensure that the contract, which is implemented, is fair to both the town and the teachers?
- Recently there has been a lot of discussion concerning the possible "de-leveling" of certain courses at the Middle School and at the High School. Do you feel that any changes should be made to the current curriculum when it comes to leveling? Are you confident that the current administration agrees with your views and if not what steps will you take concerning the leveling issue once you are elected?
- There appears to have been a substantial uptick in the amount of legal fees paid by the School District over the last several years. While some legal fees are unavoidable, do you feel that the current amount being expended is justified? What type of controls do you believe should be put in place when it comes to the incurring of legal fees by the School District?
- These are difficult financial times for all School Committees. Costs continue to rise, the best we can hope for from the State is that local aid will be level funded and taxpayers have turned down recent operational overrides. What areas would you cut first if budget cuts are required over the next few years?
- Several members of the public claim that they do not feel that the School Committee is interested in public input concerning the running of the schools. Do you feel that the School Committee gives appropriate opportunities for the public to be heard? Do you feel that the public's views are given serious consideration? If not, what would you do to improve the School Committee's communication with the general public?

We'll make you smile.

TOWN ELECTION 2010

What did they say?

JEANNE ASTINO

On the superintendent's contract:
"The time has come for Dr. Walsh's contract not to be renewed."
On communication:
"The School Committee should want an engaged public and want to have a good relationship with the public. The relationship right now is very broken."
On block scheduling and the budget:
"If we eliminate block scheduling, we can offer a lot more for our kids."

ADRIENNE MACCARTHY

On fees:
"To get rid of fees we're going to need an override, there's no way around it."
On leveling:
"We need to do away with the barriers that are holding kids back from access to the curriculum and reaching their potential."
On communication:
"First and foremost our meetings are held in public so they can see us at work. I believe wholeheartedly communication has not been one of our strong points this year."

LINDA SNOWDALE

On the possibility of expanding fees:
"I'm not happy with the sports fees, I wouldn't want to burden other (activities) as well."
On renewing the superintendent's contract:
"We are in a relationship right now in Cohasset where the relationship (between the administration and the community) is broken. Both the superintendent and the School Committee hold part of the blame…We need a new direction, for sure."
On the teachers' contract:
"It's important for our teachers to receive good salaries, but it is also important for teachers to feel supported in other ways as well."

PAUL OGNIBENE

On the possibility of increasing fees:
"I'd never want to do anything that affects the classroom experience."
On the teachers contract:
"We should have relative to our peers the highest paid teachers."
On leveling:
"I have a problem when educational goals are really backdoor ways of solving budget issues."

The format

- Candidates were each given roughly two minutes for an opening statement.
- Each candidate was asked the same seven questions and given approximately two minutes to respond. "Our Town" host Mark DeGiacomo asked follow-up questions in some instances.
- A time allotment of two-to-three minutes was given to each candidate for a closing statement.

Forty Five Year Old Now Off Blood Pressure Medication!

I heard about GISFW one day while listening to the radio. I was a bit skeptical about the program and what it offered. I checked out the website and liked the concepts. I made an appointment with the staff and decided they were the right fit for me.

Since joining I've lost over 20 pounds and am down several dress sizes. Most recently I was able to come off of my blood pressure medication.

ANNUAL TOWN MEETING

Little Harbor 50-50 passes Town Meeting

from Precinct 2, and 218 from precinct 1, which includes the new Little Harbor sewer district.

Much of the discussion focused on the history of the issue and what several speakers described as fairness.

This citizens petition is not the first time this issue was discussed and considered. According to a vote taken at the 2005 Annual Town Meeting and subsequent special election, the cost of the largest sewer expansion project, involving 487 homes in Little Harbor, is being 100 percent borne by the benefiting residents.

The other recent town sewer expansion projects involving homes and businesses in the central and North Cohasset are being paid for with a 50/50 share — half of the cost is coming from the benefiting residents and the other half from the property tax base.

Citizen proponent of the article Alex Koines of Atlantic Avenue said the average cost to each Little Harbor homeowner right now was $28,000, not including the cost to actually hook up to the system. If voters supported a 50/50 scenario, the cost for each property taxpayer would be about $100 per year for the next 20 years.

"You can see by the numbers it is not costly to help out your neighbors with these sewer problems," Koines said. Residents are currently about halfway through the 20-year bond paying an average of $61 per year for the North Cohasset sewer project and $87 per year for the Central Cohasset sewer project.

"We have to decide if we want to be one town or neighborhoods pitted against each other," Koines said.

Steve Gaumer, chairman of the Capital Budget Committee, said although his committee did not specifically review this article, they were unanimously opposed to it.

STAFF PHOTOS/ROBIN CHAN

Joe McElroy raises his concern that CPC funding being asked by CSCR is really a maintenance issue rather than a capital improvement to the building while debating Article 8.

"Cost sharing eventually costs all of us…and it takes up debt that could be used for the betterment of the broader community," Gaumer said.

Gary Vanderweil, who served on the Sewer Commission while the Little Harbor sewer project was in the works, said this issue had already been dealt with.

"The town already voted (down) a Prop 2-1/2 override…this had been done before I wish it didn't come back," Vanderweil said.

One of the reasons the Little Harbor project was pursued, Vanderweil said, was because of more stringent Title 5 (septic) regulations. Because of the ledge and other obstacles in the area, Vanderweil said residents believed it would be cheaper to pay 100 percent of a town sewer project than install new septic systems.

Andrew Willard of Stockbridge Street was concerned about the long-term obligation of taxpayers if the override was approved, "it is a 20-year decision at least…this is not a vote on fairness, it is a vote on a finance issue."

Ronnie McMorris of Doane Street said the vote in 2005 brought out 2000 voters who decidedly rejected the 50/50 cost share of the Little Harbor project.

"We have a democratic process and [there shouldn't] be an option to go back just because you didn't like how it turned out," McMorris said.

Several speakers spoke to the precedent set and the fact it is likely eventually the whole town would be on town sewer – and all residents should share in that cost that improves the whole town and its water resources, like Little Harbor and Lily Pond.

"There is nothing more inherently unfair than paying 50 percent of North Cohasset (sewer project), 50 percent of Central Cohasset (sewer project) and 100 percent of your own," said Ed Lappen of Deep Run.

Gary Vanderweil asks what the Capital Budget Committee thinks about Article 5 on the Warrant during Town Meeting on Saturday. More on article 5 in next's week's Mariner.

As an example of the divide on this issue, Advisory Committee chair Sam Wakeman said his committee voted 5-3 to recommend the article's approval — completely along residential lines.

Although Town Moderator Dan Evans called for a voice vote twice, it was clear in both votes the article had the needed support for approval.

The issue will now got to the Board of Selectmen, who have the authority to call — or not to call — a special election for citizens to vote up or down a debt exclusion override needed to the 50/50 town/benefiting resident cost sharing of the Little Harbor sewer project. A super-majority of the Board of Selectmen (four out of five members) is needed to call the special election for the debt-exclusion vote.

ANNUAL TOWN MEETING

Voters support CSCR

Capital vs. maintenance discussion renewed at meeting

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

Although questioned by some in the audience, mostly for what it meant for the future of the community preservation funding, the Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) got its community preservation allocation with a majority vote.

The project called for close to $25,000, which largely will be used to make repairs to restore the integrity of the former Hagerty house building on Parker Avenue, which experiences water damage in heavy rain. The monies will be used for roofing, gutter, downspouts and seal and de-water the basement.

"Our request will help keep New England weather out of the building," said Steve Daly, a member of the CSCR Board of Directors.

Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer first raised the central concern with this project.

"It is important to understand and recognize that the integrity of the use of CPC funds is essential for the support of CPA in the long-term," Dormitzer said. Although the project met the guidelines of the CPA, the town could make a judgment. "It is a broader question that will come up repeatedly."

"It is important to understand and recognize that the integrity of the use of CPC funds is essential for the support of CPA in the long-term."
— Selectmen Ralph Dormitzer

The Community Preservation Act (CPA) allows communities to assess a property tax surcharge of up to 3 percent (in Cohasset it's 1.5 percent). The money raised locallay is then matched by a statewide trust fund derived from $10 to $20 fees assessed on real estate transactions filed at the county registries of deeds.

The Community Preservation Committee (CPC) then makes recommendations of how the money should be used, but it must be spent in three areas: historical preservation, open space, and community (affordable) housing.

According to its application, the CSCR project fell into the historical preservation category. The building is known as the Captain Aubrey Crocker house, after its once-owner, then subsequently housed the showroom for the Cohasset Colonials business owned by Francis Hagerty.

Stockbridge resident Andrew Willard said the town stood on the precipice of a "slippery slope." Naming other CPC recommendations – the lights and electrical outlets for the 60 Elm St. housing complex and the boiler for the historical society – Willard wondered what the town would see next year.

"I hope we continue to scrutinize very carefully the projects that come up," Willard said.

Joe McElroy of Windy Hill Road said it was clear to him the items being requested were maintenance items, adding he'd like to see a top-to-bottom professional appraisal of the former Hagerty house to know what needed to be done.

Mike Dick of Parker Avenue and a member of the CSCR board of directors said the items being requested would extend the life of the Hagerty house, a town asset. (The non-profit organization leases the building from the town for a nominal fee.)

"These are long-term solutions that will extend the life of the asset," Dick said.

Jim Hamilton said he looked at the CPA funding as a sort of foundation and he would like to see the committee look more closely at what else is being done – money raised, grants sought, what is the investment return on sustainability – to accomplish the goals of the organization.

"Everybody wants and deserves this money…but what is the criteria for receiving it?" Hamilton said.

Jack Buckley, president of CSCR, said the organization put $17,000 into the building last summer with a complete paint job. Dick said any "overage" on this project would be paid by CSCR.

The Center for Student Coastal Research (CSCR) previously sought community preservation funding in 2002 during the renovation of the building. As the discussion closed in on 25 minutes and it seemed all the angles had been covered, Town Moderator Dan Evans called for a vote.

The project was supported by a majority vote of Town Meeting.

Other approved CPC projects

The recommendations from the Community Preservation Committee always draw interest from the floor of Town Meeting. However, this year at Annual Town Meeting only one – $25,000 for exterior improvements on the CSCR building (Hagerty House) drew debate from voters (see related story). A total of an hour and 20 minutes was spent on the presentation and discussion of the CPC recommendations.

The following projects were supported by town meeting in unanimous votes:

- Historical Society request for a new boiler for their headquarters in the historical Paul Pratt building — $50,000
- Housing Authority request for electrical work (new outlets in units, exterior lights) — $40,000
- Great Brewster Woods purchase, 12 acres of open space — $245,000 (will only be a portion of total cost of acquiring the land)
- Restoration of Meeting House Pond — $250,000

Town Meeting Briefs

Championship team honored

The Cohasset High School Division 4 State Champion Girls Basketball team was recognized and honored at Saturday's Town Meeting. Athletic Director Ron Ford introduced the members of the varsity team and Town Meeting stood and applauded their accomplishment.

"They are great athletes and tremendous representatives for our town," Ford said, noting about one in seven residents attended the championship game held in March at the TD Bank Garden.

"When we support our school, these kids can not only do great things for their school, for themselves, but also great things for the town. These ladies are great representatives of that," Ford said.

The three senior captains are going on the play collegiate basketball. Tori Lehr will play at St. Anselm College in New Hampshire, Samantha Crough will play at Endicott College in Beverly, and Meredith Kelly will play at Bates College in Maine.

This is the second time in three years the girls basketball teams has been recognized at Town Meeting. The team won the state championship title in 2008 as well.

Dog regulations

There is not a general town bylaws prohibiting the leaving behind of a dog's mess. The Board of Health, which has had this bylaw on the books for several years, requested it become part of the general bylaws on dog regulations to take a tougher stance and make enforcement easier. Now, any dog owner (or walker) must pick up after their dog defecates.

Fines are attached to the violations: for the first offense, the fine is $25; for a second, $35; and for a third and subsequent, $50. The purpose, according to the article, is to abate potential health dangers in public places of fecal material from dogs and to help reduce stormwater pollution.

In one of the most humorous moments of Town Meeting, Selectman Ralph Dormitzer, whose term is up in April, got the whole room to laugh.

"It is fitting it is my last act as a selectmen to recommend this article," Dormitzer said.

The article passed in a unanimous vote.

Budget passes with flying colors

Town Meeting voters approved the operating budget (not including the water enterprise fund) with no discussion from the floor. The $32,046,855 general budget reflects a 1.47 percent increase over fiscal 2010.

"It does not anticipate an override," Town Manager Bill Griffin said. However, he said more information has come down from the state reflecting a decrease in state aid from the predicted numbers in the budget.

"The town will have to be ready to address a drop in state aid," Griffin said. The state budget is not finalized until late June.

Selectmen chairman Paul Carlson said the formation of a "Budget Planning Group" last summer aided in flushing out some of the budget issues.

"This budget does not do all that is desired nor is necessary, but it does do all we can afford," Carlson said.

Advisory Committee chair Sam Wakeman noted some of the successes in the budget – for the first time in many years, it does not rely on free cash or stabilization fund to make ends meet. Line items that have had overages in the past few years (legal services and snow and ice) were more properly funded to more closely align with the historical cost.

The water enterprise fund budget will be discussed at a to-be-scheduled Special Town Meeting in June.

A unanimous vote approved the operating budget.

Molly K. Gallagher of Cohasset has been named to first honors on the Clark University's dean list. This selection marks outstanding academic achievement during the Fall 2009 semester.

Molly is a member of the Clark University's class of 2011. She also attended Cohasset High School.

To be eligible for first honors, students must have a grade point average of 3.8 or higher of a maximum of 4.3 (all A+s). Great work!

ANDOVER

Cohasset students have been named to the honor roll at Phillips Academy in Andover for the winter term

John P. McKenna, a member of the class of 2010 and Calista C. Small, a member of the class of 2010.

To be named to the honor roll, students must maintain at least a 5-point grade average on a 6-pont scale.

Congratulations!

EMMANUEL

Emmanuel College in Boston recently announced recipients of dean's list awards for the fall 2009 semester, which included local student Faith C. O'Driscoll of Cohasset. Students earning a grade point average of 3.5 or higher are awarded the distinction of dean's list. Super news!

That is the news for this week. Send in all of your news to me no later than Tuesdays by 5:00 pm for inclusion in that weeks Friday copy.

Meteorologists say March 2010 was the wettest one on record in the region. So it is no surprise that the parking lot at the Post Office on Ripley Road became submerged during the rain earlier this week.

Extreme flow pipe used for first time

280,000 gallons per day.

But, the significant difference was not in the amount of water, rather it was in the rate the water came into the plant. The peak flow rate at one point during this week's storm was 2.1-million gallons per day. In the last storm, the peak flow rate hovered at about a million gallons per day, Beck said.

As a result, the plant operators utilized the extreme flow pipe for about two hours on Tuesday afternoon. About 20,000 gallons were routed through the extreme flow pipe during that time period.

Beck said the plant operators followed the protocol set forth and utilized the extreme flow pipe to prevent an overflow of the aeration tank, which is the main holding tank inside the plant where the water is treated.

However, outside the building, the anoxic tank, which is the first holding tank for the effluent, did have a "foam over." Foam formed from the steady stream of mostly stormwater entering the plant and went over the top of the anoxic tank, Beck said.

"It was 95 percent stormwater," Beck said. Residents were notified of an overflow in a Connect-CTY, a reverse 9-1-1 system, on Tuesday afternoon.

The message also warned that stormwaters typically have high bacteria counts, which can cause a potential health risk to people and pets, and water contact should be avoided even after a minor wet weather event. As an added health safety measure, the message said children and pets should be kept out of the backyards of houses abutting Jacobs Meadow and experience flooding in your backyard.

When the extreme flow pipe was utilized it routes water directly from the anoxic tank, bypassing the more thorough membrane cleaning in the aeration tank. The effluent is screened of any solids, hydrogen peroxide is added to the water, in addition to passing through the UV chamber, and then heads out to the harbor through the effluent pipe.

"It was a tremendous challenge that our little treatment plant met with flying colors," Beck said, adding wastewater treatment plants around the state had to stop treatment altogether. "All things considered we did very, very well."

However, Beck and the sewer commission are gearing up to more aggressively tackle the primary source of water during storm events – inflow and infiltration (I and I).

Beck said the Little Harbor sewer district will not add additional I and I to the system because it is pressurized, so the only added flow will be directly from the residences.

"That is not a concern. What is a concern is the I and I that is still getting into the system," Beck said.

In the coming months, the commission plan to look closing at older hookups in the Jacob's Meadow and downtown area, especially those homes subject to tidal influence during flooding.

In addition, all the manholes will be re-inspected to insure water isn't getting in that way.

"We're in the fixing phase now, we have the money in hand," Beck said.

Record rain keeps DPW busy

The Department of Public Works has been kept busy during the recent rainfall. While many residents were bailing out their flooded basements or anxiously waiting what a full moon tide would bring, DPW crews were scattered around Cohasset tending to the streets and flooding hot spots.

"It was little stuff that kept us busy," said DPW working foreman Boyd Livingston.

One of the primary responsibilities was to keep the flapper open at Sandy Cove, where water from Treat's Pond on Atlantic Avenue drains. Crews went out at low tide during each tide cycle to clear out that sand that the waves had pushed against the outfall. On Wednesday Livingston said they would continue to check on the outfall over the next few days.

Several driveways on Atlantic Avenue had floodwater covering them.

Throughout Cohasset residents called in clogged grates and cleaning them off during the storm took up much of Tuesday, Livingston said.

In a way, Livingston said he was thankful this was rain and not snow.

"If this was snow we'd have no where to push it. We'd still be out there cleaning," he said.

The DeGroat girls and their friend, Taylor Lunt, prepare to cast off their own message in a bottle from Cunningham Bridge last week. From left, Annabell, 8, Taylor Lunt, 8, Bridgit, 5, and Kyra, 8.

Message in a bottle has far reach

Bottle from Maine was sent almost 15 years ago

By Nancy White
NWHITE@CNC.COM

More than a decade ago a green glass bottle was flung off a rocky beach in Yarmouth, Maine into the Atlantic Ocean.

For the last decade and a half that bottle has floated, or been beached somewhere, traveling the more than 100 miles south finally landing on a strip of pebbled beach in sheltered Cohasset Harbor.

Three weeks ago the bottle was picked up and found for the treasure it is by three young girls.

The Mariner featured a story about the message in bottle the DeGroat girls found on an afternoon walk with their daycare provider, Linda Bolster.

Using the same bottle that kept the original note so safe, they floated their own message to whoever finds it from Cunningham Bridge last week.

The DeGroat girls — eight-year-old twins Kyra and Annabell and five-year-old sister Bridgit — wrote to the Yarmouth, Maine address given in the rolled up handwritten note. Two weeks ago they were awaiting response from their message in a bottle pen pals.

But, it wasn't until The Forecaster, a Maine newspaper based in Falmouth and covering coastal Maine, did an article last week that the four girls who cast the bottle into the Atlantic came forward.

Two pairs of sisters, Laura and Sara Kayeum and Pearce and Paige Thompson, were the senders of the bottle almost 15 years ago.

"It's kind of exciting. At first I only vaguely remembered it, but the more I thought about it, it came back in bits and pieces," Laura Kayeum, now a senior at Colby College, said in a phone interview. She recalls searching the beach for the glass bottle that eventually would become the message's vessel.

"We were thinking it would be exciting to have a pen pal in another country," Kayeum said, who distinctly remembers writing the message on the cardboard, spelling mistakes and all.

Susan Kayeum, mother to Laura and Sara, said the girls had found a message in a bottle on a Scarborough (Maine) Beach at one point, which probably was the inspiration behind them later casting their own bottle out to sea.

Since the bottle has been found Laura has re-connected with her childhood friend, Pearce Thompson. The two have exchanged messages and memories from their youthful adventures. The Kayeums moved to Connecticut before the girls were out of elementary school.

"We talked about what we used to do as kids, it's been fun," Kayeum said. "It was a nice way to see how she was doing."

Sara and Laura Kayeum wrote and cast the message in a bottle from a Yarmouth, Maine beach. Here they are pictured at age 4 and 6, respectively, about the time they wrote the message. The sisters are now in college.

Bottle from Maine was sent almost 15 years ago

FROM BOTTLE, PAGE 10

The reminiscing helped prime Kayeum to write a letter back to the DeGrout girls of Cohasset.

"It was fun to write, I tried to thinking about what I wanted to hear as an eight-year-old," Kayeum said. The DeGroat girls excitedly received Laura's letter this week, Linda Bolster said on Thursday morning.

Bolster has done much of the detective and legwork in bringing the mystery of the message in a bottle to its ideal conclusion. She contacted The Forecaster with the story idea, and has talked to mother Susan Kayeum (they are even Facebook friends now).

"It's been really exciting to see how it all came about," Bolster said.

She has returned the original message in a bottle, by envelope and US Mail of course – no bottle this time – to Susan Kayeum for her to save a keepsake.

And the DeGrout girls are looking forward to finding their own pen pals. Using the same bottle that kept the original note so safe, they floated their own message to whoever finds it from Cunningham Bridge last week.

Who knows how long it will take to get a message back.

Where has the bottle been for the last decade?

Could the bottle have traveled across the Atlantic and back again? Or has it simply been stranded somewhere on a remote piece of shoreline or buried in the sand?

While it is impossible to know for sure, Jim Manning, NOAA (National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration) oceanographer and ocean current expert, said the typical travel time from Yarmouth, Maine to Cohasset is less than a month. Since the bottle was found washed up on shore it is unclear how long it had been there, although the DeGroat girls and Linda Bolster are frequent visitors to the area.

Manning said with all the high water flooding the area has had had recently, the bottle was possibly released from wherever it was beached and re-floated. The waves resulting from recent northeasterlies could have eroded the previously buried bottle and freed it from it long capture.

Overcoming years of conflict

Find out about a unique community of coexistence growing in the capital of Israel's Negev (Southern desert) at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, April 7 at the Second Congregational Church, Cohasset, beside the Common, next to Town Hall. Home Instead SENIOR CARE®

by Alan Carney, Director & Jennifer Moran, CSA, Community Liaison

HELP AT HOME

Home healthcare aides can provide compassionate assistance to those who have a senior loved one at home. Whether for a few hours a day or 24-hour care around the clock, they can assess the senior's needs and "match" him or her with the appropriate nonmedical care personnel. These trained, insured, and bonded individuals offer a wide range of service options for seniors, including assistance with bathing, grooming, and hygiene. They are also available to offer the senior client medication reminders and manage homemaking duties, from light housekeeping to shopping and cooking. Whatever the extent of nonmedical requirements, home healthcare aides are prepared to make arrangements that will accommodate the individual needs of seniors at home.

You may feel like you need to be the one who cares for your parent or loved one, but it's an exhausting and overwhelming task if you do it by yourself. You deserve help. We can give you the help you need to live your life and know that your loved ones are properly cared for. Call 781-878-2994 today to learn about our wide variety of services, even if it's just occasional respite care so that you can get out of the house to live your life. Even if you don't need our services now, write down the number. You never know when you may need us in the future. We are located at 145 Washington Street, Suite 11. In-home help for Massachusetts seniors.

P.S. Home healthcare service providers understand that the needs of seniors can change, even over night.

OPINION

EDITORIAL

April Fool's perspective

Having just suffered through the rainiest March on record; with the state, town, federal and world economies in recession; earthquakes and other disasters; as well as being involved two wars – it may be hard for us to laugh or find humor around us.

However, yesterday was April Fool's Day – which, we recently learned, may date back to 1392.

If you think about it: 1392 was probably not the best of times, either. Life expectancy was short and everything from antibiotics, toothpaste and even bathing were practically unheard of.

On a positive note, playing cards were designed that year by French court painter Jacques Gringonneur and would be employed for centuries to come in various games.

As children on April Fool's Day, we played an awful prank on our Dad. We put salt in the sugar bowl. It was not funny and he did not laugh when he took a sip of his coffee, although today we recall the incident more fondly. (Please do NOT try that at home!)

The Dutch television news reported in the 1950s that the Tower of Pisa had fallen over. Many shocked people contacted the station.

"Back in the day," one could probably get away with a lot more pranks than one would today. The same pranks today would likely result in police involvement.

We soaped the screens on Halloween, for example, of a neighbor who did not give us any candy. Our brother and his friend got caught by the angry neighbor and had to punch out each square of soap from the screens using a toothpick! It took hours. Not fun, but it is funny to recall it today.

According to Wikipedia, some April Fool's Day famous pranks included:

- In 1988, Burger King announcing left-handed Whoppers for left-handed people with condiments designed to drip out the right side;
- In 1996, Taco Bell took out a full-page advertisement in The New York Times announcing that they had purchased the Liberty Bell to "reduce the country's debt" and renamed it the "Taco Liberty Bell."
- The Dutch television news reported in the 1950s that the Tower of Pisa had fallen over. Many shocked people contacted the station.
- In New Zealand the radio station the Edge's Morning Madhouse enlisted the help of the Prime Minister on April 1st to inform the entire country that cellphones are to be banned in New Zealand. Hundreds of callers rang in disgruntled at the new law.
- In 1962 the Swedish national television did a 5-minute special on how one could get color TV by placing a nylon stocking in front of the TV. A rather in-depth description on the physics behind the phenomena was included.
- The BBC television program Panorama ran a famous hoax in 1957, showing Italians harvesting spaghetti from trees. They had claimed that the despised pest, the spaghetti weevil, had been eradicated. A large number of people contacted the BBC wanting to know how to cultivate their own spaghetti trees.

Perhaps one of the most famous hoaxes – that occurred closer to Halloween than April Fool's — was the War of the Worlds radio broadcast in the on Oct. 30, 1938, directed by Orson Welles, that included simulated news bulletins suggesting that a Martian invasion was in progress. Some listeners believed the broadcast and caused a panic.

According to Wikipedia, "The program's news-bulletin format was decried as cruelly deceptive by some newspapers and public figures, leading to an outcry against the perpetrators of the broadcast, but the episode launched Orson Welles to fame."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Seeking better communication, bigger role for School Committee

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter is written to help clarify the position of many concerned parents regarding the reasons we are working to educate our fellow citizens and parents regarding the actions of Supt. Denise Walsh and the School Committee.

Too many recent decisions by some of the School Committee and the Superintendent have essentially preempted any input from parents or the community at large. Those issues include "de-leveling" at the high school as well as policies regarding sports, high fees placed on families for certain activities in the district, the confusion regarding the "President's Speech to the Schools," arbitration costs with employees, SPED litigation – to name a few. Recent meetings at the high school have been prime examples of how any input from outside the Superintendent's Office, including from our own teachers, has been disregarded if the intent does not match the philosophy of Dr. Walsh.

As citizens and taxpayers, many of whom have had children go through the Cohasset schools as well as younger school parents, we can see the handwriting on the wall and, because of this, have gotten involved. We feel we need a Superintendent and School Committee that embrace the process of including the school community in major education policy decision. At the very least, we demand respect and communication when we, as parents, reach out to our Committee members, Principals and Superintendent. Since our individual involvement stems from bad experiences with the administration over these important issues, it is our position that the current status needs to change.

We ask for your support and consideration in moving forward to see a truly positive change in the Cohasset School District. We believe that the School Committee should be given the responsibility to review and oversee any and all administrative changes to our schools.

Signed by: Ann and Paul Musto, Ron and Mary Goodwin, Joann Mirise, Trish Morse, Jackie Brady, Sally Ayers, Linda Indek, Mary Noone, Joe Astino, Kathleen Crosby, Barbara Power, Diane and Bob Benson, Gail and Bill Flynn, Sean Curry, Laura Hurlbut, Allen Snowdale, Stacey and Dan Steele, Sally Ayers, Doug and Jackie Fitts, William Bell, Jean Muir and Jen Ognibene.

Selectmen urged to deny request for new vote

TO THE EDITOR:

Dear Selectmen:

Now that town meeting has asked you to consider placing a Prop 2 1/2 debt exclusion override on the ballot for cost sharing for the "Little Harbor" sewer project, please consider the following.

The decision to place a debt exclusion override to the voters rests with the Board of Selectmen alone. Dept. of Revenue guidelines specifically state that this is not a decision to be made by a town meeting. Four of the five members of the BOS must vote that it is in the best interest of the Town, as a whole, to do so. In 2005 it was decided that the question should be submitted to the voters and a special election was held in May. Almost 2,000 voters turned out at that time, and the override was defeated.

Five years later the Board of Selectmen are being asked to nullify that election and give certain residents another opportunity to secure a "yes" vote. Your vote on that request is based on the unique facts that are before you at this time and your decision will be precedent setting. Each time a BOS considered such a request, the members had to weigh every consideration and determine whether placing such a question on the ballot was best for the town as a whole.

This sewer project has evolved over the years in a way, which I believe, has been fair to the residents of the area and in keeping with their consistent request that they pay 100 percent of the costs if the town agreed to sewer the area. Gary Vanderweil, former chair of the Sewer Commission, has the same understanding that I do of that issue. At the same time, the town has been less than fair or equal in their treatment of other areas with regard to septic issues. Homeowners living in the Lily Pond watershed have not been sewered, despite the Board of Health placing that area in a higher priority district than "Little Harbor." Because of their proximity to the water supply, these homeowners have added responsibilities and burdens. The taxpayers do not share the cost of maintaining those systems, even if the homes are owned by widows or couples on fixed incomes.

Therefore, I ask that you deny this request for a new vote on Little Harbor sewer cost sharing. The town debated the issue, held a fair and legal election and the result should not be overturned. There are no new or overriding considerations that would lead you to the conclusion that it is in the best interest of the town to revisit this question.

Concert was terrific, well played!

TO THE EDITOR:

Last Thursday night, the high school gym was filled with the delightful sounds of our talented student musicians. Once again, the number of students from each school participating in this amazing program astounds me. Even more impressive is the clear demonstration of musical progress made between fourth grade and the high school. All Band Night gives the younger musicians an opportunity to perform in front of a large crowd and also lets them hear what they will sound like in a few years. From the reaction of the audience, the evening was a huge success!

The size of the fourth- and fifth-grade bands is astounding. We are so fortunate that year after year, Mr. Biagini can inspire such a large percentage of the Deer Hill students to take up an instrument and begin to play with confidence. His commitment has truly been a gift to this community.

Leading up to the concert, the high school band members mentored the middle school musicians, giving them a bit of personal inspiration and one on one attention. Listening to the high school band on Thursday night, I was thinking that we could have been listening to a professional recording! They were nearly flawless, and the Jazz Band was once again a showstopper and a perfect example of the high quality and sheer joy of playing music that this program brings to our community. I did a quick count of the number of musicians in the high school band, and counted close to 80. That a high school of fewer than 375 students can field a band of that size is absolutely amazing! That's an average of nearly 45 percent of each class.

So congratulations once again to our wonderfully talented and enthusiastic musicians. Thank you for an evening of fine entertainment. We are very proud of you!

HEALTH NOTES

Risk factors for lung cancer

By Steve Bobo
SPECIAL TO THE MARINER

We are generally aware of the relationship between lung cancer and smoking, but now the number of non-smokers developing lung cancer is increasing.

We've recently been hearing considerable gibberish and equivocation about this scourge. Lung cancer is a disease of uncontrolled cell growth in tissues of the lung. We are generally aware of the relationship between lung cancer and smoking, but now the number of non-smokers developing lung cancer is increasing. The risk of developing lung cancer is about 1 in 15 including both smokers and non-smokers. For smokers, the risk is much higher than for non-smokers. Still, the most common cause of lung cancer is long-term exposure to tobacco smoke. It is the most common cancer in terms of both incidence and mortality (1.35 million new cases per year and 1.18 million deaths), with the highest rates in Europe and North America.

The population segment most likely to develop lung cancer is over-fifties who have a history of smoking. Lung cancer is the second most commonly occurring form of cancer in most Western countries and is the leading cancer-related cause of death. In contrast to the mortality rate in men, which began declining more than 20 years ago, women's lung cancer mortality rates have been rising for over the last decades and are just recently beginning to stabilize. The evolution of "Big Tobacco" plays a significant role in the smoking culture. Tobacco companies have focused their efforts since the 1970s at marketing their product toward women and girls, especially with "light" and "low-tar" cigarettes. Among lifetime non-smokers, men have higher age-standardized lung cancer death rates than women.

Other Risk Factors

Emissions from automobiles, factories and power plants also pose potential risks. The occurrence of lung cancer in non-smokers, about 15 percent of cases, is often attributed to a combination of genetic factors, radon gas, asbestos and air pollution, including secondhand smoke.

Studies by the American Cancer Society directly link lung cancer exposure to the size of harmful particulate matter injested by breathing contaminated air. For example, if the concentration of harmful particles in the air increases by only 1 percent, the risk of developing a lung cancer increases by 14 percent. Further, it has been established that particle size matters, as ultra fine particles penetrate further into the lungs.

Recent media stories have cited individuals who never smoked dying from lung cancer. Another report indicated illnesses from wallboard in new homes which contained a 'fine white powder' called fly ash. It's difficult to identify all of the substances which may be harmful if injested while breathing. Smoke during cooking, particularly from burning grease or oil also gives off gasses at excessively hot temperatures. Keep stove temperatures at the lowest values possible for adequate cooking. Avoid excessive burning and charring; ventilate kitchens and other sources of open burning. Use heat to stay comfortable but don't use excessive heat in any of the places where it's likely to cause smoking or excessive fumes. Be rigorous in changing furnace filters. Avoid burning and spattering food while cooking. The best toxic sensor is your nose. Beware of any scent, which is not guaranteed to be safe and leave environments having strong or unusual odors.

Environments conducive to lung cancer necessitate face masks; an increasingly necessary part of living in unsafe environments. Lung cancer may lead to metastasis; the invasion of adjacent tissue and infiltration beyond the lungs.

Common Symptoms are shortness of breath, coughing (including coughing up blood), and weight loss. The main types of lung cancer are small cell lung carcinoma and non-small cell lung carcinoma. This distinction is important, because the treatment varies; non-small cell lung carcinoma (NSCLC) is sometimes treated with surgery, while small cell lung carcinoma (SCLC) usually responds better to chemotherapy and radiation. Lung cancer may be seen on chest radiograph and computed tomography (CT scan). The diagnosis is confirmed with a biopsy usually performed by bronchoscopy or CT-guided biopsy. Treatment and prognosis depend upon the histological type of cancer, the stage (degree of spread), and the patient's performance status. Possible treatments include surgery, chemotherapy, and radiotherapy. Depending on the stage and treatment, the five-year survival rate is 14 percent. Best to try and avoid it.

COMMENTARY

LAURA DESISTO

Thank God Thomas Edison and William Hewlett did not grow up in Cohasset. I'd be handwriting this letter in the dark right now.

Let's face it, level two kids in Cohasset are either one of two things: dumb or unmotivated. Why would I want them sitting next to my hard-working, gifted child?

Do I have your attention? Good, because while you won't find these sentiments printed in the paper, if you listen carefully, you will hear them whispered in the aisles at Stop & Shop and on the sidelines at games. I know because I have heard them countless times over the years, and in the climate of the current "de-leveling" debate, this nasty buzz has grown louder.

I don't as yet have enough information to form an opinion on the de-leveling question. I suppose like most issues in education, a case could be made for either side. What I do know for certain is that there are many bright children in our district who because of mild learning disabilities such as dyslexia, ADHD, processing issues, etc., do not perform to their potential and are not able to access level one or advanced placement material. I also know that many parents (and sadly, even teachers) without thorough knowledge of these conditions assume that these children are stupid, lazy or don't care about school. What's worse, over time, the children start to believe them! As a result, oftentimes what started as a learning problem becomes a behavior problem. What a shame. What a waste.

Some of the world's most successful, most brilliant people had learning disabilities and/or performed poorly in school: Abraham Lincoln, John Irving, Richard Branson (Virgin Atlantic), Charles Schwab, Albert Einstein, Ernest Hemingway, Harry Truman, William Faulkner, Thomas Edison and William Hewlett (Hewlett Packard) to name just a few. Would I want my child rubbing elbows with this lot? You bet I would.

As world famous author and psychiatrist Dr. Edward Hallowell (a learning-disabled Harvard graduate) recently wrote: "The predictors of living the best kind of life are not the grades but the attitudes developed during childhood.... spunk; a sense of humor; courage; ambition; the ability to take responsibility and to do the right thing when no one is looking..."

High-pressure towns like Cohasset have a way of convincing their young that good grades are everything. An A in school means you are a good person, a good son or daughter. It means you will go to a good college and get a good job. While these may not be bad messages to send our kids, what is the implied opposite? Bad grades mean you are a bad person and you will never be successful? Thank God Thomas Edison and William Hewlett did not grow up in Cohasset. I'd be handwriting this letter in the dark right now.

Let's take Dr. Hallowell's advice and continue this de-leveling debate with the attitudes that predict success. Let's look at the facts and not get drawn into the "not in my neighborhood" hysteria. Most importantly, let's do the right thing in the grocery store and on the sidelines when we think no one is looking. Even when we whisper, our kids get the message loud and clear.

'How about accountability, oversight?'

COMMENTARY

HOWIE ALTHOLZ

Shooting the messenger is an old and tired distraction.

The recent School Committee meeting addressing the administration and Committee's ill-advised rush to so-called "de-leveling" was painful. Overflowing with parents and teachers, it was four hours of confusion, misinformation, misunderstanding and doublespeak. Apart from Committee members, Lucia Flibotte, and Helene Lieb, who presented some very thoughtful concerns, no one else seemed to have the vaguest clue as to what was actually being proposed, what it meant, or what they actually needed to vote on. Hope for our schools requires bold, innovative leadership, both on the Committee and at the schools. The Superintendent was chock full of talking points, like "building bridges," "21st Century learning," and "the arrow goes both ways." Trouble was, no one could explain how or why any of it was good for our children.

Despite much talk about "teacher inclusion," we heard directly from teachers that was not true at all. With over a year to flesh it out, this was now a last minute scramble to ram it through. Some even tried to blame teachers for not participating, after giving them only hours to review complex material with extensive changes from previous versions. Parents were correct that the Superintendent poorly managed the process. Despite hours of very detailed teacher and community concerns, the message did not get through. Blind support of bad management and poor judgment continues to cost the town, and the children. How about accountability and oversight?

We listened to some go on about how this fatally flawed plan could be fixed just by adding the word or, here and there. Huh? No ORs, IFs, ANDs and even BUTs, can help this poorly thought out document, which, as Ms. Lieb correctly noted, was, "the product of a very flawed process, that lacked inclusion and transparency." Later we would hear Committee member Slanetz deride the idea that process, was really that important at all. One of the only salient points of the evening was from CHS student Sam Green who in a brief comment made more sense than all the gobbligook heard all night. Sam Green for Superintendent!

Around 11:30, we had to endure yet another tortured "confession" on behalf of the Committee, (remember their recent admissions regarding their Open Meeting Law violation), for improperly conducting the Superintendent's performance review, after already renewing her contract.

Not content to just move on, Mr. Slanetz began railing against "troublesome parents" (possibly like those who spoke against censoring President Obama's Back to School Speech). Parents who care about their kid's curriculum, want to actually see public records, that decisions are not made behind closed doors, care about academic freedom for teachers, freedom of speech — and school leadership which inspires innovation and creativity, instead of PR and talking points. Those pesky parents, especially the lawyers, always asking questions. "Lawyers", he growled, (maybe like those at the DA's office, that based on his conduct, found the entire Committee guilty of Open Meeting Law violations). Outbursts like this are particularly ironic given previous complaints by some including Mr. Slanetz, about the need to more tightly "manage" citizen participation, because it was too, "ruckus". (see Mariner Dec. 12, 2009).

Nevertheless 90 +% of the parents who wrote and asked repeatedly without answer, for a simple clarification of the evaluation process were not lawyers, and concerns about this sort of incompetence has less to do with people's "business cards," then a much more important role as parents, and taxpayers. Anyone so upset about citizens who understand their rights, or who raise questions regarding incompetent, inappropriate or even unlawful behavior, should try working on the behavior. Shooting the messenger is an old and tired distraction.

Mr Slanetz was ultimately reprimanded by some fellow Committee members for his conduct.

Remember how during the Obama speech mess which some on the Committee helped cause, they claimed the Committee were helpless victims of overzealous parents insisting on things like free speech and academic freedom — and actually derided parents for being "one issue advocates," challenging them to show up for future issues? Well, thanks for the invite. I think they've arrived.

Impact of harbor forum still being felt

COMMENTARY

JENNY MAGRUDER
AND TERRY MACCORMACK

Cohasset High School student Tyler Oddleifson hands event organizer Bob Deutsch a card that has an audience member's question for the panel to address during the January forum.

...having the outfall pipe drain right outside the harbor would create just another source of fresh water for Cohasset Harbor.

Two months after the landmark State of the Harbor forum, the issues it brought forth to the public mindset still remain prevalent. As the State of the Harbor panelists attested, freshwater flushing is the major problem facing Cohasset Harbor today. Efforts to restore the natural salinity of the harbor are already underway, as the Center for Student Coastal Research will be commissioning studies for their upcoming summer program.

Harbor salinity was also a major topic of discussion at last week's Board of Selectmen meeting. Residents of Atlantic Avenue have expressed concern over the status of Treat's Pond: essentially, is it an estuary or a fresh water pond? The distinction is critical when it comes to funding for flood relief, which has been a topic of concern for the past few weeks. A freshwater pond is eligible for funding for an outfall pipe, while an estuary is not.

Residents approached Selectmen regarding the status of the pond, and whether or not funding would be available. Studies showed that one possible option would be to have the outfall pipe drain into the channel outside Cohasset Harbor, while another option would be to drain near Sandy Cove. While these two options could both possibly solve the flooding situation, disadvantages have arisen as this debate has evolved. For example, having the outfall pipe drain right outside the harbor would create just another source of fresh water for Cohasset Harbor. And both would be costly expenses for the town.

When the issue was discussed between Selectmen and residents, Selectman Fred Koed pointed out the concerns addressed at State of the Harbor regarding the influx of fresh water into the harbor. He believed that an outfall pipe by Cohasset Harbor would only aggravate the problem. However, the residents insisted that the board move forward with a vote on funding for an outfall pipe running from Treat's Pond to the channel.

At last Monday's Selectmen's meeting, the measure was voted upon, and the result was indecisive. Selectmen Koed and Quigley opposed funding for the pipe, Selectmen Carr and Carlson supported it, and Selectman Dormitzer abstained from the vote, as he is an abutter.

But this issue may yet be resolved. Board of Selectmen elections are scheduled for this April, and Selectman Dormitzer will be retiring from his position. The position of Lee Jenkins — the sole new candidate in the race (current Selectman Paul Carlson is seeking re-election) — is currently unclear. But it is possible the board changes its decision. The final decision on the funding for the outfall pipe will be determined once the Board adds a new member.

State of the Harbor has influenced the citizens of Cohasset to such a degree, that they are now aware of the pressing issues regarding fresh water flushing, as demonstrated by this recent vote. The impact will only be greater with time.

Jenny Magruder and Terry MacCormack are seniors at Cohasset High School and longtime members of CSCR.

MEET THE CANDIDATES

Editor's Note: This week the Mariner is featuring candidates, who are not currently serving in the position they are seeking and are running unopposed. Next week the Mariner will have profiles of the School Committee candidates

Jim Dow of 502 North Main St. is running for the open seat on the Sewer Commission.

SEWER COMMISSION
James Dow

Jim Dow of 502 North Main St. is seeking an open seat on the Sewer Commission. He previously sought a seat on the commission in 2008, but was narrowly defeated by current commissioner Wayne Sawchuk. With no opposition the second time around, he is hoping his campaign is more successful.

• Why are you running for office?

I have worked within a municipal sewer system for the past 23 years and feel that my background would benefit the town.

• How will you ensure openness and transparency on your board?

As an elected official, it would be my obligation to abide by open meeting laws and do what is best for the town while keeping the rate payers interest at the forefront and open to discussion.

• What have voters told you is their biggest concern?

In this economical climate, operational expenses seem to be the major concern.

• What is the quality you most admire in others?

I most admire openness and honesty in others, for better or worse.

• What is one thing you'd like to accomplish during your tenure?

To insure accountability and responsibility from all of the Commissions vendors and contractors.

• Fun fact about yourself.

I have a difficult time saying no to people which often leads to internal conflicts as well as a lack of sleep.

• Favorite quote

"Success is liking yourself, liking what you do, and liking how you do it." - Maya Angelou

• Where have local residents likely seen you?

As an avid fisherman, I can always be found in my kayak in the harbor or driving around with it on the roof of my truck looking for the fish.

• What do you love about Cohasset?

The beauty and serenity of small town life.

• Even uncontested seats have "blank" and possible write-ins as competition, why should people vote for you?

With my background and knowledge of sewers and infrastructure I am familiar with most issues that may present themselves.

Chris Seebeck of 36 Riverview Drive running to the open seat on the Water Commission.

WATER COMMISSION
Chris Seebeck

Chris Seebeck of 36 Riverview Drive is seeking an open seat on the Water Commission. He knows he has his work cut out for him with all the issues – financial and operational – currently facing the water department. This is his first foray into town government.

• Why are you running for office?

I feel strongly about giving back through public service and personally the timing is right for me to do that now. My own concerns about the cost and quality of our water led me to seek this particular office.

• How will you ensure openness and transparency on your board?

I will work to increase communication with other town boards and the public. The water department faces complex issues and these need to be communicated in ways that everyone can understand.

• What have voters told you are their biggest concerns?

There are two concerns from everyone I speak with: cost and safety.

• What is the quality you most admire in others?

Integrity.

• What is one thing you'd like to accomplish during your tenure?

A well understood budget and plan to meet federal drinking water requirements through the end of this decade.

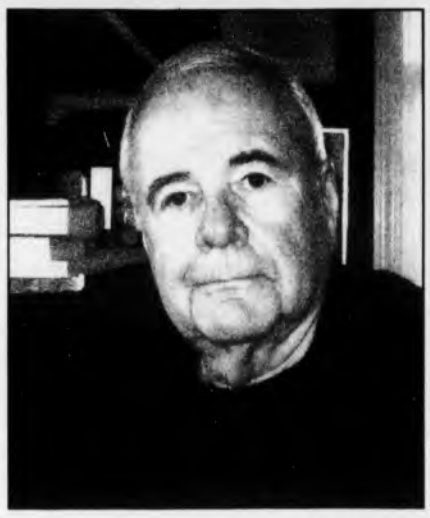
• Fun fact about yourself.

A few years ago I shaved my head for a charity event.

• Favorite quote.

"Never mistake activity for achievement." – John Wooden

• Where have local residents likely seen you?



I really enjoy coaching so I am likely to be seen on the fields and courts of town coaching soccer, basketball, or baseball.

• What do you love about Cohasset?

I can't imagine a town having more to offer especially in such a small and beautiful footprint.

• Even uncontested seats have "blank" and possible write-ins as competition, why should people vote for you?

I chose this office because I have a family and I am a concerned about the cost and safety of our water. If elected, I will work openly to address these concerns that are held by so many members of our community.

Linden Drive resident Bill Hannon is the only citizen seeking the associate position on the Planning Board.

PLANNING BOARD ASSOCIATE
Bill Hannon

The Planning Board associate member position is something brand new. Special Town Meeting approved the creation of the position last fall. The associate member is a three-year elected position. The associate member will sit in (and possibly vote on) special permit application. He/she will be called to action in the event a regular Planning Board member were ineligible to vote due to absence from one of the public hearings, inability to act or conflict of interest, or in the event of a vacancy or an application that crosses an election.

The idea behind the associate member, which is common in other Massachusetts towns, is to help maintain a full five-member Planning Board vote in the case of special permits application under the following bylaws: wind energy conversion, transit-oriented district, cluster development and the village business district bylaw.

Linden Drive resident Bill Hannon is the only citizen seeking the position.

• What is the most important quality you will bring to the table as a town official?

I've got year and years of design experience. As a college professor in design, I think that I bring something to the table in that respect.

• Why are you running for office?

A number of people encouraged me to do this for a number of years. My key interest is the downtown business district. It needs a lot of work and is underutilized; I have a passion for that particular area.

• This is a new position with a very specific purpose, how will approach the job?

I'm going to spend a lot of time listening. There are a lot of technical and legal issues that I am not yet familiar with. I want to absorb all the experience of other members and listen to what they have to say. Fortunately, I don't have to vote on anything unless someone gets sick or is unavailable, so I don't have t jump in and be the leading authority on day 1. My intention is to attend all the meetings and learn from them.

• What do you love about Cohasset?

Almost everything: the fact that it is so small and on the ocean. As a designer, I love the diversity and architectural mix in the town from the Walter Gropius modern (on Jerusalem Road) and Royal Barry Wills Cape Colonials. I've lived here for 35 years.

• Even uncontested seats have "blank" and possible write-ins as competition, why should people vote for you?

As I said above I have a special background in design and marketing I think will be very, very helpful in the number of issues that come up related to design, especially in the village business district which needs a combination of good design and good marketing.

Leland Jenkins is unopposed for one of two seats on the Board of Selectmen.

SELECTMAN
Leland 'Lee' Jenkins

Leland Jenkins of 198 Jerusalem Road is seeking one of two open seats on the Board of Selectmen. Current Selectmen chair Paul Carlson is running for the other seat. Jenkins served a six-year stint on the Advisory Committee, but this is his first attempt at seeking an elected post.

• Why are you running for office?

Through my experience on the Advisory Committee, my background in the service, and as a small business owner, I feel that I have something positive to offer the town. Having been a regular attendee at Town Meetings for the past 30 years and keeping abreast of town politics, I have a working knowledge of town budgets and the ability to ask the necessary pertinent questions.

• How will you ensure openness and transparency on your board?

Openness and transparency are very important to me in the workings of government. In 2005, I was instrumental in having two citizens' petitions passed, which require all town boards to produce monthly income and expense reports. This was a large step towards a more transparent process. While on the board, I will be advocating for more information to be made accessible electronically.

• What have voters told you is their biggest concern?

The town residents are now very concerned about rising expenses which are leading to unsustainable tax increases. Parents are being nickel and dimed to death with ever increasing fees and taxes. Retirees would like to remain here but the cost of town services is going up faster than can be supported by their fixed incomes.

• What is the quality you most admire in others?

Honesty, hard work, perseverance and common sense are qualities that I hope to find in the people I work with.

• What is one thing you'd like to accomplish during your tenure?

While in town hall, I would like to encourage an atmosphere of cooperation and efficiency.

• Fun fact about yourself.

Most people don't know that while a Captain in the Army, I was Airborne and while on a routine training night jump, the pilot made a mistake forcing me to jump into the jungle in Panama.

• Favorite quote.

Since I discovered Ben Franklin in primary school, I found that he has a saying to meet most situations in life. As a small business owner, "A penny saved is a penny earned" and "Beware of little expenses. A small leak will sink a great ship" are ones that has helped me realize success in my endeavors.

• Where have local residents likely seen you?

Through the years, I've become a familiar face at town meetings, doing various volunteer activities, walking around my neighborhood and at my business in Hingham Harbor (Hingham Car Wash).

• What do you love about Cohasset?

I love the natural beauty of being in a small town on the ocean and with the added bonus of woods in unexpected places.

• Even uncontested seats have "blank" and possible write-ins as competition, why should people vote for you?

By voting for me, the residents should know that I will be their voice in advocating for business sense and common sense in running the town.

Beechwood account has strings attached

The citizens petition requesting Town Meeting authorization to transfer money from the Beechwood Improvement Association Fund account, a special account devoted to the Beechwood neighborhood, to a newly created non-profit, Beechwood Area Recreation Association, dedicated to improving the Beechwood area, was indefinitely postponed at Annual Town Meeting.

The article requested the transfer of all of the account's funds – a total of almost $12,000.

However, research into the history of the special account and the way in which it was given to the town revealed the transfer was not allowed.

According to Glenn Pratt, one of the proponent's of the citizens petition, it turned out that when the town accepted the gift from the now-defunct Beechwood Improvement Association in the late 1970s it came with very specific instructions.

"[The provisions] were all for the same type of improvements in Beechwood, but had no provision to give the money to another non profit," Pratt said in an e-mail.

The way the trust is set up a resident of Beechwood (which is described in the trust) can ask the Treasurer to pay for certain improvements in Beechwood that would benefit youth under 14 years old. The treasurer (or Finance Director Mike Buckley) decides if it is an expense that qualifies.

For example, the new non-profit Beechwood group could request funds for a specific project and get support for its efforts that way.

In the late 1990s, Pratt said some of the accounts funds were used to construct new bleachers for the ballpark.

QUESTION OF THE WEEK

For School Committee candidates: Leveling appears to be one of the most controversial issues before the School Committee. What are the pros and/or cons of leveling and where do you stand on the issue?

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Paul M. Ognibene

Cohasset residents want and deserve to have our schools be recognized as the best in Massachusetts. The idea of eliminating the separation between college placement ("CP") and honors courses (i.e., de-leveling) is a one-size-fits-all approach to education and is out of sync with our community's goals.

Cohasset is blessed to have dedicated, enthusiastic teachers. These common-sense educators know that many students grasp concepts quickly and some capable students require more time and guidance for comprehension. Our curriculum needs to be flexible enough to provide a first-rate education to everyone. De-leveling into heterogeneous groupings removes an important tool for teachers to recognize these inherent differences. In my view, de-leveling promotes mediocrity, not excellence.

To be fair, well-respected educators have been debating this issue for many years and I think there is one, limited circumstance where a heterogeneous offering could make sense. In the case where, for example, three students enroll in a CP-level elective course and five students enroll in the honors level of the same course, practically speaking, the amount of interest wouldn't justify two separate classes. Rather than not offer the course at all, in this instance, it would be fair enough to offer one combined course. Parents and students can decide together if it makes sense to participate. To avoid an otherwise slippery slope, this approach needs to be carefully managed by exception and limited exclusively to electives where administrators are solving a logistics problem

If elected to the School Committee, I'll do everything I can to ensure that any changes to the curriculum are:

- well communicated;
- designed to meet educational goals, not budget goals; and
- in line with our community's educational vision and goals.

Please visit my campaign Web site for more information: www.VoteForPaulO.com.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Linda Snowdale

Pros and cons of issues are often in the "eye of the beholder". I am convinced that the controversy about leveling has more to do with the way our community experienced processes used by the current school committee, superintendent and administration to implement policy change. Parents, faculty and students have made it clear that they want to be involved in discussions at the inception of an idea and throughout the change process.

I am against making changes to the present leveling system because:

- Our school community has communicated strong feelings against more heterogeneous classes at the middle and high school levels.
- There is a fear of lowered expectations for the entire student body.
- Research supports leveling as well as de-leveling.
- Mixed ability classes use differentiated instruction which requires intensive ongoing teacher training to be effective and not all program supervisors are ready to mentor/support our teachers.
- There is a reoccurring lack of administrative preparedness
- Communication and leadership trust have broken down.

When policy options are presented to the school committee, as your representative, I will maintain open communication with the community to ensure the rationale for initiatives including transparent budget implications are consistent with our vision of the educational goals and policies for our schools. I will hold the administration accountable in the implementation of well thought–out policy including timelines and evaluation plans. The school committee I serve on will include open, responsive communication with parents, faculty, students and community members at every step of policy development, seeking the pros and cons of issues. As a seasoned educator with 35 years experience in the public schools, I will be an energetic advocate for an outstanding education system that supports all the diverse needs of our learners in a respectful climate conducive of growth.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Jeanne Astino

I am absolutely opposed to de-leveling and don't see any pros in this initiative. Research driving the administration's plans toward de-leveling comes from schools with socio-economic divides and diversity issues very different from our own, along with multiple levels of instruction. We have just two levels in Cohasset – college prep and honors (AP is an entirely separate entity). Further, I believe we need another level in order to truly support the wide range of needs within these two levels. As a commentary in the Mariner last week mentioned, it is not the level that is the true problem here, but the labeling of courses.

To do this correctly, combining all levels of instruction in one classroom would involve adding another level of staff in each classroom to provide needed support. If we were to do this at the current class sizes, even with additional support, we would be hard pressed to ensure success for every student. "Blended" classes, which seems to be the administration's latest name given to heterogeneous grouping, would also require intensive teacher training and would cost a lot of money that we don't have. There are so many other things we could be improving and focusing our energies on, like smaller classrooms, technology, etc. We are failing in all of these areas.

Also, we are being sold a bill of goods when this is presented as a way to ascertain NEASC accreditation. This is just one of many suggestions by NEASC, not a requirement. A better question perhaps would be why our school administrators tried to sneak this initiative in the back door.

De-leveling, de-tracking, blending – no matter what the "label", make no mistake it will not meet the true educational needs of our children and must not be allowed to invade our Program of Studies.

SCHOOL COMMITTEE/Adrienne MacCarthy

Here in Cohasset, for well over a decade, it is has been a fact that if your student is identified to be in the top 10-20 percent of their class, they will do extremely well having access to all the top level curriculum as they are navigating their way through Cohasset Middle/High School. What about the other 80-90 percent of students? During the 2004-2005 strategic planning process this was identified as an area we needed to address. Our system created advantages for some students through processes and sorting/leveling which may have been artificial and inconsistent. In line with our strategic plan and goals, we have been working to provide equity and consistency in curriculum and assessment. We are adding rigor and relevance; as well as, changing the culture and eliminating some barriers that existed so that all of our students will be challenged and motivated as they matriculate thru CHS.

Our vision statement is clear, "We hold high expectations for all students and staff…" During my tenure on the school committee, we have worked toward this vision through numerous goals and objectives. Currently, a student has the ability to choose to take some elective offerings, within a heterogeneous grouping, at College Prep level or at Honors Level; this is one way that the motivated student can challenge themselves along the way. It makes them responsible and accountable for their choice; and our teachers are there for support along the way. When success is achieved, it is bound to set the stage for more challenges.

We are not reinventing the wheel here in Cohasset, there are numerous high achieving schools such as Boston Latin, Hingham, Wayland, and Weston who have similar approaches in the continued pursuit of equity for all students. A vote for me will continue the pursuit towards equity and excellence!

CANDIDATE PROFILES NEXT WEEK

Next week the Mariner will feature profiles of the School Committee candidates, who will receive the profile questionnaire via email and US Mail.

The completed questionnaires must be received by noon, Wed. (April 7).

Candidates may reply by e-mail at mford@cnc.com; by fax at 781-741-2931, or by dropping off their responses at the Cohasset Mariner office in the Hingham Journal Building, 73 South St., Hingham Square. However they choose to deliver their answers, candidates should adhere to the noon, Wednesday, deadline.

We will also publish a weekly Candidates' Corner, which will be limited to a few paragraphs (about 150 words), from any candidate who chooses to submit dates of coffees, fund-raisers, short position statements and the like.

The Mariner will not accept letters to the editor from candidates or letters endorsing or attacking particular candidates. The Mariner will publish letters about campaign issues from citizens not seeking election.

If you have questions, call Mary Ford at 781-741-2933 or contact her by e-mail at mford@cnc.com.

Absentee ballots available for annual election

Absentee ballots for the Annual Town Election on April 10 are available at the Town Clerk's office. Absentee voting may be done during normal office hours until noontime on Friday, April 9, at which time the office will be closed to prepare for the election. If you will be in town on Election Day and you are able to come to the polls you should vote in person.

CAMP, SCHOOL AND ACTIVITIES DIRECTORY

DAY CAMP MAY MEAN TAX CREDIT

By Bette Bussel – Executive Director, American Camp Association, New England

Day camps provide an excellent and educational way for children to spend the summer months. In addition to the physical, mental, and social benefits of the camp experience for their children, there's an additional bonus that parents who work or attend school can cash in on.

Many people don't realize that summer day camp tuition may qualify for tax credit. In this challenging economic climate, this little known fact is especially relevant. Parents want their kids to enjoy a summer at camp while having fun and gaining skills that prepare them for college and adulthood. This tax credit may make that a little easier for some families.

To qualify for tax savings, parents must have dependent children under the age of 13 enrolled in a day camp and must either be employed or a full-time student; because the day camp allows parents to work or attend school, its fees can be considered dependent-care expenses. In some cases, parents can receive a tax credit for up to 35% of the cost of day camp ($1,050 for one child or $2,100 for two or more children). The tax benefits vary depending on household income and other factors; parents are encouraged to consult a professional accountant or tax advisor to find out if they qualify and for how much.

The American Camp Association, New England, is the region's leading source for "all things summer camp." For more information please visit www.acanewengland.org, or call (781) 541-6080.

SCHOOL: Braintree
STATS: Hasson has been a guiding force on the Lady Wamps. She is a three-time

NAME: Julia Hannon
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Duxbury
STATS: Hannon was one of the main reasons the Duxbury girls hockey team won a share of the Southeastern Mass. Girls Hockey League and went all the way to the Division 2 South semifinals. Called the "backbone of the team" by Head Coach Friend Weiler, Hannon led the league in goals against average and registered six shutouts during the regular season.

NAME: Chrissie Bowler
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Hingham
STATS: Bowler scored her 200th career point during the regular season, and tallied goal No. 100 in the playoffs. In the regular season she scored 25 goals and added 22 assists while playing one of the most difficult schedules in the state.

NAME: Courtney Igo
GRADE: Junior
SCHOOL: Hingham
STATS: Igo was second on the team in goals, notching 20, and also stood tall during the postseason, notching a goal and an assist against St. Mary's. She also had a goal and an assist against Springfield Cathedral in a tournament victory.

NAME: Sarah Schwenzfeier
GRADE: Freshman
SCHOOL: Hingham
STATS: Schwenzfeier helped take the scoring burden off Bowler, and was a huge catalyst to the offense with an outstanding freshman campaign. She notched 42 points in the regular season, including 13 goals and 29 assists.

NAME: Briana Connolly
GRADE: Junior
SCHOOL: Duxbury
STATS: It seemed like every time that Connolly touched the puck, it was either going into the net or off a teammate's stick and into the net. The team's leading scorer, Connolly came through in the clutch time and time again for the Lady Dragons.

NAME: Katie Conlon
GRADE: Junior
SCHOOL: Marshfield
STATS: Conlon, a 6-foot, 2-inch junior led the Lady Rams in scoring this winter. In 20 games, she netted 20 goals to go along with 17 assists for 37 points. Not only did she lead the team in scoring, she was one of the top scorers in the Southeastern Mass. Girls High School Hockey League. This season, Conlon was named a league all-star for the third year in a row.

NAME: Alanna Woodford
GRADE: Junior
SCHOOL: Scituate
STATS: Woodford was Scituate's scoring leader with more than 20 goals against a tough schedule.

NAME: Katie Hildreth
GRADE: Senior
SCHOOL: Hingham
STATS: Hildreth was a huge key to Hingham's exceptional defense, making all the big plays in back. She also had 13 assists and a pair of goals during the regular season.

NAME: Beth Findley
GRADE: Junior
SCHOOL: Hingham
STATS: Findley carried a 0.91 Goals against average into the MIAA Div.1 Tournament and was a key factor in an 18-3-1 season. Throughout the season and in the tournament, she handled not only the easy saves, but made the tough ones as well.

NAME: Katie Walsh
GRADE: Junior
SCHOOL: Hingham
STATS: Walsh tallied 15 goals and 15 assists in the regular season, then had one of her best games of the season in the biggest game. While Hingham lost 4-3 in the State Semifinal game against three-time champion St. Mary's of Lynn, Walsh scored two goals and had an assist in the game, giving the Harborwomen a chance at the upset.

Cohasset's Brendan Doonan won't be pitching a lot this season, but will bring leadership and strong play in several other positions.

Ready to roll

Baseball team hyped for season

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

Last season, the Cohasset baseball team struggled, losing six games by one run.

The team was also very young, with three sophomores, a freshman and two juniors who hadn't played varsity before.

This season, the Skippers look to that experience this season.

Coach Pete Afanasiw is hopeful that will be the case.

Leading the way in experience is Brendan Doonan, who is ready to go after suffering a broken arm early in the hockey season.

Baseball

Doonan, along with Andy Mckenna will be captains this season.

"The kids look good," Afanasiw said. "And it's good to have one of the best players in the league back."

While Doonan is back, he will have a bit of a different role this season due to the injury.

"Brendan will play third base and bat third," Afanasiw said. "We may use him in relief. Each day he's getting better."

Doonan threw an innimg in a scrimmage against Hingham.

Jeff Cavanaro is another returnee expected to have a solid campaign.

"Jeff will have a big year," Afanasiw said. "He gives us a lot of depth at a lot of positions. He can play multiple positions. He wants to play college baseball. He has a strong, accurate arm. He's a good fundamental fielder. He can play third base, second base, shortstop and even first base. He's a very good pitcher too. It's not his passion, but he'll still be one of the aces of the staff. He'll also bat fourth."

Cavanaro was slated to start in yesterday's opener agaiust Scituate. That game was actually the second on the schedule, but the first game, also against Scituate on Wednesday, was postponed to Saturday at 3:30 p.m at Scituate. Both games against the Sailors will be played in Scituate because of better field conditions. Cohasset will still be the home team in the Saturday game.

Junior Drew Cobin will also see time on the hill.

"Last year he had a couple of really good games, times when he was lights out," Afanasiw said. "He's a junior, but he's young for his grade. He's worked really hard to get ready for this

Boys win opener 17-3

By Sean MacCarthy
SPECIAL TO THE COHASSET MARINER

Spring is in the air and so are the lacrosse balls.

The Cohasset boys lacrosse season started March 26 with a 17-3 victory over neighboring rival, Hull.

In the season opener, everything flowed perfectly for the Skippers in the 17-3 victory.

Boys' Lacrosse

The score could have been a lot more lopsided had Coach Stew Curran not taken out most of the starters after going into halftime with a 14-2 lead.

The massive offensive by the Skippers was lead by seniors Will Wise and Dean Driscoll.

Wise scored four goals while Driscoll put another five in between the pipes.

Senior Jack Murphy kept the ball out of Cohasset's net for the first three quarters of the game.

With such a large lead, Curran gave junior Alex Kinnealey the job in the fourth quarter.

Speaking of Alex, he continued to win nearly every face off, giving Cohasset key possessions that contribute to the success of the team.

Kinnealey is one of the top two or three faceoff players in the area.

Will Wise, a senior captain, had some great things to say about his team after he watched them run through Hull. "I think we have good players at every position, so we don't really have any weaknesses," Wise said. "A lot of our guys played a lot last year so they have experience."

But it's not just the guys with all the experience that are bringing in the success. The McNary twins, Dean and Mitch, are showing promise as sophomores.

"Another young gun not to be missed is, Charlie Neaves," added Wise. "He worked really hard in the off season and I see it paying off."

The start to the 2010 season was an easy one, but the schedule gets harder down the road. Despite the tough competition, Wise stated the team's aim with confidence.

"Our goal for this year is the same as every other year," he said. " That's to win the State Championship."

The team is only 1-0 right now, but the win showed a great deal of promise for the remainder of the season as Cohasset Lax looks to return back to the State Championship game.

Maddie Altholtz returns for another go-round at No. 1 singles for Cohasset.

Set for success

Girls tennis looking strong again

By William Wassersug
WWASSERS@CNC.COM

The Cohasset girls tennis team has all the elements for another successful season on hand.

Last year, the girls made it all the way to the Div. 3 South Sectional final, where they lost to a very strong Dover-Sherborn squad.

They've got 27 players ready to suit up, a few solid returning starters and a crop of youngsters with lots of talent and skill.

Thngs have been made easier with the fact that the top slot in the lineup will be filled by senior captain Maddie Altholtz, who was brilliant last season in the No. 1 slot and is now a year older with even more experience.

Tennis

In the No. 3 spot, freshman Meredith Spofford steps in.

Spofford's dad, Rob, was the coach of the softball team last year. One reason Rob turned the keys over this year was because he wanted to be able to watch his kids play, which he wouldn't be able to do if he were coaching.

"Meredith is looking very strong," Meehan said.

The team will rely on tri-captains Altholtz, Jenny Magruder and Margaux Danze for leadership.

Magruder will play doubles with Hannah Rawson.

Magruder has doubles experience, teaming successfully with Maggie McGoldrick last season in the No. 1 doubles position.

Danze will also be playing doubles with returner Tina D'Antonio.

"Tina has been looking good," Meehan said. "She's looking for another good year."

D'Antonio played second doubles last season with Lauren Allen.

Caitlin DeAngelis looks to step into the No. 2 spot.

Mehan said she tries to get as many players into matches as she can, and has a long-standing policy of not cutting players.

She's found in the past that solid players tend to develop when given the chance, whether varsity of junior varsity.

The toughest thing this season was breaking it all down.

While spots are set for the early going, things do change through play, challenge matches and injury. Nothing, outside of Altholtz, is completely set in stone.

"We have a big group, and with the rain it's been tough," Meehan said. "Our first task was separating the varsity and the JV. Now we're testing doubles pairings to see what works best. We start (yesterday) at Hingham. That's always a good match, but a tough one. Hingham is a good team."

Meehan said she'll should also have Sam Crough joining the team.

Crough was a member of the state championship basketball team.

She decided to give tennis a shot in her senior year, much like Sammi Lehr did last year.

Crough is just waiting for clearance to play after suffering an injury in the championship basketball game.

Talking the night before the opener at Hingham, Meehan was rearing to go.

"I can't wait to get started," she said. "What's great is that the year. He'll pitch Saturday at Scituate."

McKenna will be another strong point for Cohasset.

"Andy McKenna will catch and bat fifth," Afanasiw said. "He's excellent defensively. He doesn't have the strongest of arms, but he's accurate and calls a very good game. He also has great skills blocking balls. He's mentally tough behind the plate and he's gotten bigger and stronger since last year. He's put on 15 or 20 pounds. That bodes well for the season.'

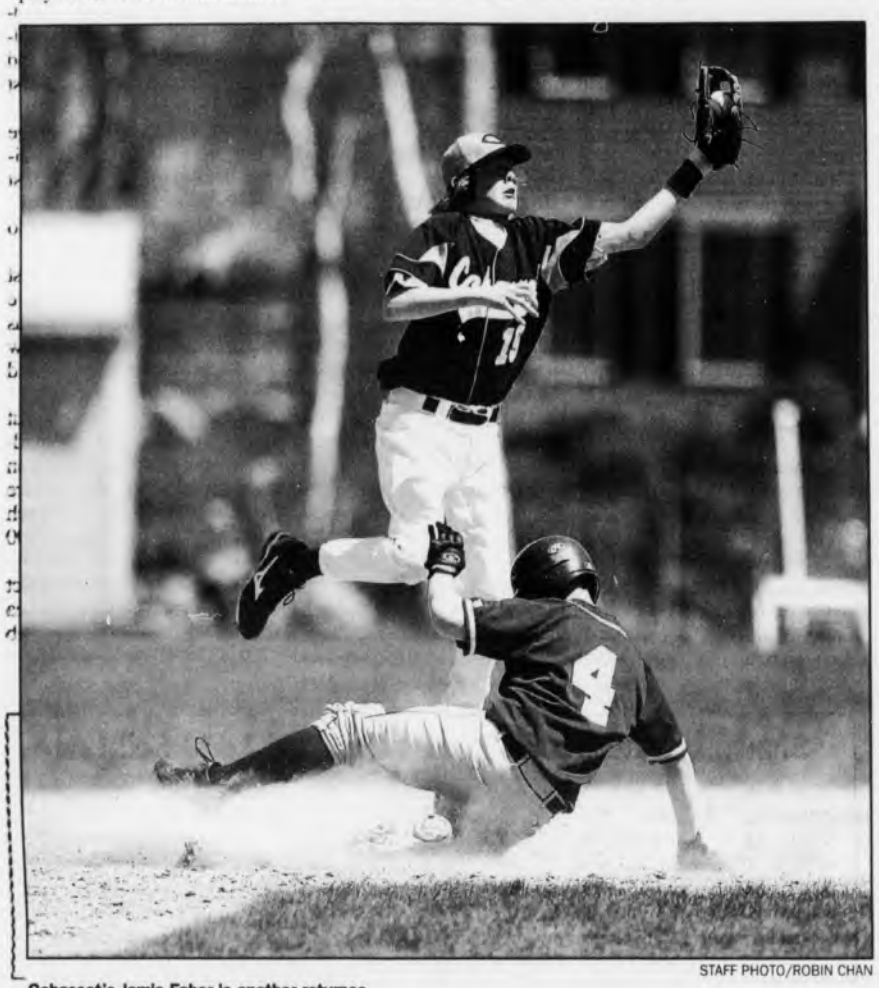
Afanasiw said last season McKenna's hitting tailed off down the stretch, possibly from the strain of catching all season.

Sophomore Jamie Faber will play second base and bat second. He'll also get an occasional spot start or relief appearance.

"Jamie benefited from his experience last year," Afanasiw said. "He started swinging the bat really well and plays solid defense."

At first base, Kevin O'Connell will handle the bulk of the work.

"Kevin has a good head on his shoulders," Afanasiw said. "He's also worked really hard in the offseason. He's been swinging well in the cages lately and he has a good glove."



Anders Goetz will handle the duty at shortstop.

Afanasiw said the outfield positions are still up for grabs.

"The big question is the outfield," he said. "We have athleticism and versatility. The kids fighting for the outfield are all good baseball players."

Overall, Afanasiw likes what he's got with this team.

"This is a really good group of kids," he said. "In some ways they're like the girls basketball team. They have great character. They have no egos. They just want to compete and play hard. I'm excited to get started. I have a good feeling. Looking at the kids on paper I see good things. My biggest challenge is to get hem to believe in themselves. This year is going to be different than in the past. I think there's going to be parity in the (South Shore) league this year. Without (Steve) Peraklis, Abington is back to being a regular team. East Bridgewater also graduated a lot. All we need is confidence in ourselves."

way the calendar worked out, this is the longest possible season. We were able to start March 15 and Labor Day is May 31. It gives us a lot of time to work. There's still a long road ahead. I'm looking forward to it. I've got a nice group of kids and good tennis players."

Helping the team will be Danielle Sookiasian, who played third singles last year.

Sookiasian left the team this year when the school board approved a new sailing team, and will be on the sailing team, which is her first love, according to Meehan.

"Danielle was one of the spearheads of the sailing initiative," Meehan said. "We'll miss her, but she's doing the right thing. She's been great. She still comes out and helps us in practice and hits balls with us. She's terrific."

Girls Youth Lacrosse opening day roundup

The girls program got off to an early start to the season and had to deal with some very cold weather on opening day. Five of the teams played at home on the new turf against Duxbury and the other three teams were on the road at Plymouth. The home games against Duxbury seemed to all come down to the wire and were a great display of youth lacrosse. The Plymouth action was equally impressive and bodes well for a great season!

U15 Blue and Grey

The U15 Blue and Grey teams played back to back games against formidable foes, the Duxbury 8th and 7th grade teams. Both games came down to the final seconds and ended in 10-9 victories for Duxbury. In the first game Mikayla McGrath put on a shooting clinic, scoring five goals on six shots with a couple of them coming after outstanding catches in traffic. Annie McElgunn was a force in both games from her midfield position, scoring twice in each game and battling all over the field for ground balls. Valerie Farren scored the goal of the day as she scooped a ground ball, ran around three players and then fired one home as she was falling in front of the cage. Goalie Hanna Cooper pulled double duty between the pipes, turning away four shots in the first game and then stopping eight in the second contest when she was under constant pressure.

Defenders Caroline Prescott, Mackenzie Axelson and Molly Fitzgerald showed toughness and great clearing skills in both games. Maddie Curley had a hat trick in the second game, Katie McKenna picked up two goals and an assist and Victoria Bryan, McGrath and Fitzgerald each notched one goal.
